The Oranges, N. J.

Over two years ago W. A. Manda of South Orange, whose range and nursery is alongside the tracks of the Lackawanna railroad, sued that company for damages in the sum of $5,000, alleging that trees and shrubbery had been destroyed by fire started by sparks from an engine of that company, April 1, 1917. For the second time a verdict was recently given in the supreme court of New Jersey in favor of the railroad company. The defense was that every statutory precaution to prevent fires from engine sparks had been observed.

A fine store and conservatory at 557 Main street, East Orange, is conducted by Geo. Smith & Sons. They also operate the Prospect Gardens on Hamilton street, and report an excellent business.

Fred C. Read reports a good spring business. He is showing finely flowered geraniums in his store and has 10,000 plants in his greenhouses, Chapel street.

Charles Hale, a one time Washington, D. C., florist, is well established with his sons in East Orange and is doing a good business.

John Fricke now has the florist and seed store formerly conducted by P. Popken at 186 Main street.

A. F. F.

Newark, N, J.

James J. Plunkett, one of the founders of the firm of Connelly & Plunkett, who was in active service during the war, now has a handsome store at 1 Branford place, just off of Broad street. Mr. Plunkett is a fine young man and has the good wishes of many friends in this enterprise.

The Hoffman retail store, Bergen street and Clinton avenue, recently opened, is attractive and reports a good business. The proprietors are A. B. Hoffman, Sr., well and favorably known in the wholesale district of New York, and his two sons, A. B. Hoffman, Jr., and P. W. Hoffman.

On April 23 the Star-Eagle published a long list of candidates for office at the approaching election. We looked it over hoping to find John Crossley's name as he is something of a fighter and protestor against abuses.

The Rosery is usually a busy establishment and considering its fine location, Market and Broad streets, it is hard to see how it can ever be idle.

Philips Bros. have been quite active of late with wedding and funeral work.

WINDOW AND PORCH BOXES.

Make Preparations Now.

The beauty of all suburban property and much of that in the city is greatly enhanced by the use of window and porch boxes, which when filled with plants and vines adds much to the appearance of the dwelling. While this form of decoration is quite general it should become much more universal through proper methods along educational lines, showing the ease of culture, the comparative light expense, and the great aid in decorative effect it is to any property. The women's page in all newspapers has room for cultural articles of this kind which are helpful in creating sentiment for such forms of plant decoration. These articles are in the main paid for, to space writers, who are likely to have no practical knowledge of plants and flowers and frequently recommend stock that is not at all suitable for the purpose.

In every community there are some or at least one florist who is capable of this work, whose knowledge thus expressed would be much appreciated by all flower lovers and a great service to all the trade accomplished. There are organizations in every town or city formed for the purpose of "The City Beautiful." Such associations would readily combine with the trade in any effort to further the use of window or porch boxes and vases, even going so far as to offer prizes for the best examples of the work at various seasons of the year. With the establishment of the spring and summer boxes and their decorative advantages shown, it is then but a step after the first frost to replace the faded plants with bright fresh evergreens, which continues the display the year round.

There is great variety of materials from which window boxes are made. Strong one-inch boards well put together with inside corner irons, bark covered or painted should, if kept painted inside and out, last at least three years, and should be freely offered to those who are just starting in and who might be discouraged by the prices of the more expensive materials. All boxes can be painted the house colors or dark olive green, which harmonizes with most out-door color schemes. Cement, terra cotta, and iron framed boxes, can be made to conform architecturally to any elaborate structure, and while the first cost is relatively high yet in their lasting qualities they are cheapest in the end. All boxes of wood six feet or over in length should be made in sections of from three to four feet, they are then so much easier to handle and will fit together as one box when in place. Terra cotta, cement or iron boxes are best handled in three foot lengths on account of their great weight.

Substantial Foundation Necessary.

All foundations or supports to hold these boxes in place should be most substantial as accidents are ruinous to the box and at times dangerous to human life. Should the box rest on the stone sill of the window ledge, knee irons screwed into the wooden sill and rear of the box after this has been made perfectly level, will secure it firmly in place. Where the box projects beyond the building line to make a bracket support necessary, this is best made of wrought iron, which when galvanized is as permanent as any of the boxes. Additional support for those on the ledge can be given with a brass jack chain which is much stronger than wire.

In all the large communities there are growers who make a specialty of filling such boxes for the trade. With the boxes furnished they are filled at the greenhouse and after a start of a week or two are ready for delivery. This is a much better plan than having them filled at the store where there is never just the right stock and they lack the finish of a week's stay in the greenhouse, which care is not added to the bill.

Caution must be used in the selection of the stock for sunny and shady situations and changes are often necessary as the seasons progress. By the first of August on the sunny side of the city streets, geraniums are flowered out and most other plants look very forlorn. A very good substitute at this time is a filling of ferns of the Boston type with Asparagus Sprengeri to fall over the front. If this is kept well watered it will grow luxuriously and last throughout the season. Porch boxes which are mostly of wood painted the color of the porch can be an inch or two wider and in depth than those of the window, which allows space for a more varied assortment of plants, although all pink or red geraniums give a glowing color contrast to the porch vines and the green of the lawn in front. Palms, ferns, rubbers, crotons, begonia rex, together with Asparagus Sprengeri and variegated vincas, will give good foliage effect for the shady situation.

LOW WINDOW BOXES WHICH DO NOT OBSCURE SIGNS.

The Hanging Basket.

The hanging basket is most decorative and should be more generally used in porch arches and similar situations as nothing is more ornamental than a well filled basket with its graceful hanging vines. There are many patterns in rustic wood, terra cotta, sheet iron and standard wire forms all of which fit in the various places open to them. Where several are to be hung in series they should be suspended in pairs through two overhead pulleys screwed into the ceiling. A rope drawn through these pulleys will suspend each basket the right height, then when necessary to water by pushing one up the other basket comes down to be immersed in a bucket. This basket can then be raised a little to drain and when pushed higher, the other one is lowered for like attention. This simple method does away with all the drudgery of step ladders, heavy lifting, dripping, etc.

BATAVIA, ILL.—Thos. Conlon of the Illinois Plant Co., has a fine lot of cyclamens, seedlings and older stock, also Boston ferns in various sizes well grown.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

It will soon be the season of outdoor shrubbery and early summer bulbs and blossoms. The early irises are in and will soon be followed by the choice later sorts, which list is added to by the forced Spanish irises and the same outside southern grown, these latter at times flooding the market. They add to the regular offerings, and their shades of blue and yellow, and white mixed with yellow, make them very desirable. Many in their beautiful forms and colorings resemble orchids and are adapted for the finest kind of work.

It is now time to get after all the winter accounts that are past due. The flowers have been delivered, the work done, and to let a bill run over two months is dangerous. Department stores cut off all communications after this period, and goods must then be paid for in cash before delivery. A polite but earnest request by letter is best, as Uncle Sam has entrance when all others fail. Use a plain envelope, as one with your business address would be likely to be thrust aside to be opened later, and your urgent message would probably not be read.

MEMORIAL DAY PREPARATIONS.

Memorial Day, the last of the floral holidays, should now be kept to the front and featured in every possible way. There are but a few of the old soldiers left and they cannot take much part in arousing the interest that is necessary. The American Legion will no doubt interest themselves but all the pressure that can be brought to bear by all other patriotic bodies should be enlisted, with stories of deeds of valor by local heroes, that would easily find space in the reading columns of the daily and Sunday papers well in advance of the day.

The florist can do his part also by making up patriotic designs in national colors combined with flags and feature with them photographs of Generals Grant, Meade and others, as well as President Lincoln, all of which would advertise and create interest in the day. The making of prepared magnolia and oak leaved wreaths should be pushed with vigor so as to have a good assortment of sizes on hand for the emergency.

While June is considered the wedding month there are many such events celebrated in May and the fact that you are high up in this art must be kept well to the front. An occasional window dressing featuring wedding specialties should appear frequently. An occasional commencement basket or two and so labeled should find place in the window. They should be decorated with ribbons of the local colleges and the date of the commencement on each. To keep things moving there should always be something unique and of good size to attract attention and about, or near it, small vase baskets nicely arranged and marked as a special at a price that is likely to speedily carry them off.

Make it a point to have the store in readiness as early in the morning as possible. This work can be well advanced by having the flowers on hand trimmed and in fresh water before closing the night before, also the empty jars should be cleaned and filled with fresh water.

In its arrangement, the window as a whole or in some striking feature, must be compelling in its attractiveness. In other words it must "pull," or much of the work has gone for nothing. Frequently when there is certain stock likely to be left over in the afternoon, fill up a number of small boxes and give them a place in the window with a price card, and watch them go. Sweet peas or bunches of daisies placed in a cornucopia of wax paper and a quantity featured in the window with the price card, will also draw attention.

The New Flower Shop.

You are thinking of opening up a shop for the sale of plants and cut flowers. Very good, but first let me ask have you had any experience in working at the business? You will probably answer, no; but having a fondness for flowers and a little capital to invest you believe you could make a success of it. Now, my friend, if you are in earnest in this matter and desire to make this business your life's occupation, my advice is to first engage yourself to a good retail florist, preferably a shop in which there are not many employees, where the employer does most of the making up. If you are active and willing you will find greater opportunities to learn than in the large shop, the system of which would hold you back.

You will soon begin to find out that there is a great deal more to learn in the handling and sale of plants and cut flowers than you had any idea of. You will get an experience in meeting flower buyers of various types, learn how to overcome the many perplexing situations that are constantly cropping up. Plant and cut flower values will become known quantities and you will see the importance of many details of which the outsider knows nothing whatever. After an active experience of two to three years in such a shop you will have become grounded in the rudiments and will know the importance of such essentials as trimming plants, arranging boxes of cut flowers, making the window attractive, keeping the store clean and inviting and the stock placed to look its best. Your little capital lying in bank has, like your knowledge, been gaining all this time and in addition there has been something added to your earnings.

Now I am sure that if after your further experience you still desire to open a flower store you do not regret the time it has taken to acquire this practical knowledge, and that you now feel your chances for success are much enhanced from this essential course in a busy shop.

TWO TYPES OF FLOWER SHOPS.

There are two types of cut flower stores, one with the daily turnover in which, as far as possible, nothing is carried over for the following day. All sales are cash and nearly all stock sold is taken away by the purchaser. To make such a store a success it must be in a busy shopping district, where the street front is constantly filled with a passing throng, all of whom are possible buyers. The rent of such a location can be five times that of the shop on a side street and yet cost less to serve each customer, because of the greater number of sales.

In this type of store it is the number of sales that count. Special sales are constantly being made with flowers plentiful in the market, and which are put up or offered in such quantity lots as are conveniently carried and at prices that seem reasonable.

There is psychology about the price mark, that no matter what it is, and because it is there, it must be reasonable. Every foot of store front space from the pavement to the roof of such a shop should be utilized to give publicity to the goods for sale. It is unmistakably a flower shop, not just an ordinary florist's store, but a place where flowers are sold in quantity at right prices. Every day in the week the windows can be featured in a different way. Draped or framed in laurel or in a frame of green or bronze galax, all on the outside, while as a change the inside can be outlined or bordered with crepe paper in color to suit the flowers offered. Correct window cards are certain to be read and play an important part in catching and holding the passing throng.

There can be more expensive flowers to show those who come in to have their purchases wrapped. As the business grows orders are taken for design work and decorations, until the little busy shop expands, as many have, started in the same way, developing into the largest stores in the country. To conduct a strictly cash business in selling cut flowers is deemed by some impossible but all the specialty shops that are rapidly getting into the retail centers, such as cigar, bakery, meat shops, etc., all sell for cash. A splendid plan and one that makes a record of every transaction, is a cash register slip to be presented to every purchaser which explains on the back that the holder is entitled to a 10 per cent cash discount, which can be used at any time as cash for any of the goods in the store.

This has been utilized with great success as the customer in using up his credit will invariably buy enough to make the profit cover much more than the discount, and then in the last transaction he always carries away a credit check which is a constant reminder of the shop.

THE OTHER TYPE OF FLOWER STORE.

The store which aims to cover all branches of the business and cater especially to the family trade is generally found on the outer edge of the shopping district or good residence section where a commodious building, preferably a corner location, can be had at a moderate rent. If there is room for a small conservatory at the rear, one side showing on the street, the situation will be ideal. The furnishing of the interior of the shop need not be expensive. The walls and ceiling should be a light tint, light yellow, green or blue. Light yellow is good with a wooden lattice work with light green in color in panels along the walls, between which should be several sets of shelves and a mirror or two.

The ice chest may be placed on one side or across the store, two-thirds back, making a bank or partition behind which room can be arranged for the making up of designs and other work that is likely to clutter up the front of the shop. There should be some half dozen stout tables on which vases of cut flowers, pot plants and made-up baskets can be arranged. Some stylish looking pottery on pedestals, holding choice decorative plants, will give an artistic finish.

An office and cashier's desk on the other side of the store can be enclosed with lattice work in harmony with the other decorations. A conveniently placed customers' writing desk or table with cards and envelopes about completes the necessary furnishings. Where the rear of the store opens into a conservatory there will necessarily be a different placing of the refrigerator, which can occupy a small space, so as to allow a clear, unobstructed view of the inviting background offered by the greenhouse effect. With the windows and interior of the store at its best the opening of such an establishment should be made an event in its community. As one of the great features in its success will be the amount of publicity given to the enterprise, this should receive the most careful consideration at the opening, gathering in force month by month. Everyone within the radius of the store's activities must be told over and over again of this new kind of a flower shop, its superior service and quality stock, where all lovers of flowers can find what they desire at prices to suit their purses.

Souvenirs in small plants or bouquets, or in blotters or calendars can be given to the visitors, whose names should be written down at the time, forming a nucleus of a customers' list that must be added to at every opportunity. After such an auspicious start, success is a question of management, earnest application, being on the job all of the time, meeting and having a good word with each customer. Give courteous attention to all and be quick to see and overcome dissatisfaction of any kind. It should not for a moment be forgotten then that this is a business enterprize which must return a profit, and the margin between first cost and selling prices should be so fixed as to fully recompense and guarantee the management for the present as well as insure a continuation for the future.

PLANT NOTES.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouse. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground, success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or disking and then leveling. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once, for heavy rains occur at this season which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering, and if in boxes or the bench, cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 25 to 30 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers, and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial Day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphis and red spider increase very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plant all the ventilation possible, but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spinder than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation, it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. When the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and deepen the color of the flowers.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica, for blooming next spring, May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed to start well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve, as the seeds are very small, and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can, so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse, but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation, and until the plants begin to make growth, keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly, some soils will often become caked or scaly, and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed, pot in 2½-inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool house, and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry, yet they are easily overwatered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked; frequent and light waterings are the best. A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height, and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May or early June planting when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Society of American Florists.

WASHINGTON CONVENTION

It is only about two weeks since the copies of the floor plan of the hall in which the trade exhibition is to be staged were mailed, yet requests for space reservations are coming in steadily and the bookings so far, are more than satisfactory. Without any doubt, every foot of available space will be closed out long before the opening day of the convention. Intending exhibitors should lose no time in getting their applications for space to the secretary's office, as choice of location necessarily will narrow down during the present month. Those who have engaged space since the publication of our list are:

A. T. DeLaMare Co., New York.
Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.
Jos. Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.
Orchard Paper Co., St. Louis, Mo.
B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.
S. Hanfling Co., New York.
W. A. Manda, Inc., S. Orange, N. J.
F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.
Hammonds Pt. & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.
J. L. Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y.
The Zane Pot. Co., S. Zanesville, O.
M. H. Levine Co., New York.
Seligman & Stein, New York.
George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.
Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.
The Ove Gnatt Co., LaPorte, Ind.

Reports received at the administration offices of the society indicate an unusually large attendance at this convention. The Convention city itself is always an attraction, and previous conventions held there have evidenced the fact that visitors will be well cared for. The officials of the Ladies' Society of American Florists are devoting much time to plans covering the part they will take in the entertainment proceedings, and especially as regards taking care of the visiting ladies while those of the sterner sex are in attendance at the different sessions. At an early date they will send out a little folder describing trips to some interesting places worth visiting, while going or returning from Washington. This folder will also contain much other information of value. Application has been made to the Trunk Line Asociation for a railroad rate of a fare and one-half for the round trip to Washington, on the certificate plan in force some years ago, and there is every probability that the request will be granted. As soon as assurance is received that this rate will be allowed, official notice wil be given.

CLEVELAND NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

The secretary had expected last week, to be in a position to send out copies of the floor plan covering the space available for trade exhibits, but at the last moment it was deemed advisable by the chairman of the national flower show committee to hold the issue back until it could be announced definitely just what accommodations would be included in the space rental charge of $1.75 per sqare foot. Some prospective exhibitors, however, have not waited for the plan, several having filed aplications for space, and expressed a readiness to complete contracts as soon as they can denote a location on the plan.

Additional subscriptions to the Guarantee Fund have been received as follows:

Previously reported	$19,062.00
Randall's Fl. Shop, Worcester, Mass.	50.00
Strout's, Inc., Biddeford, Me.	200.00
The Espelin Floral Co., Ft. Collins, Colo.	25.00
Robt. Craig Co., Norwood, Pa.	230.00
The Minge Floral Co., Mobile, Ala.	100.00
H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.	25.00
Total	$19,712.00

Further evidence of the wide interest taken in the class covering exhibits in competition for the grand capital prize of $5,000 came to hand last week, and the committee believe that the stagings in this class will result in the finest display ever seen under roof at any horticultural exposition in the world. Already positive assurance of three entries has been given, and the entries will be made official as soon as the committee can decide upon the dimensions of the spaces to be scheduled as available in the general lay-out of the exhibition. This class will be the feature class of the show, and exhibitors will require a considerable length of time to get their material together, so the committee are endeavoring to arrive at a decision at the earliest possible moment.

MEETS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

President Roland appointed Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; Chas. H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, and F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., the society's delegates to attend the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce held at Atlantic City, N. J., last week. While the society has applied for membership in the chamber, no word in regard to favorable action having been taken on the application, has yet been received. Doubtless our delegates found plenty to occupy their attention at the different sessions of the meeting.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

A most encouraging response has been forthcoming from the request for prompt payment of subscriptions to the campaign fund in accordance with the guarantees of the subscribers. All who have received statements of subscriptions now due are urgently requested to make remittances covering them at once. A first installment on account of the subscription to be forthcoming from the National Flower Growers' Association has been received, amounting to $163.08. The association is still in process of formation and extension, and after awhile it is expected that its contribution of a percentage of its funds toward the fund of the national publicity campaign will assume large proportions. Chairman Henry Penn, Boston, Mass., of the publicity committee is sending in another appeal for personal subscriptions to keep the campaign active, as it will be some time before the growers and allied associations are in sufficiently good working order to make the collective plan now being worked out effective enough to support the publicity movement.

Those who have paid subscriptions since the publication of the last list are as follows:

Harbingers of Spring.

From tall tree-tops the robins sing;
The cawing crow is on the wing;
Spring blossoms are about to sprout;
The farmer brings the old plow out;
The maple trees yield sap galore;
The angler looks his tackle o'er;
The barn-yard rooster louder crows;
The water o'er the lowland flows;
Those owning rubber boots are off,
To play what Boston folk call "g'of;"
The sky is of a deeper blue—
And sourer grows that fine home brew.

Lang Floral & Nursery Co., Dallas, Texas.

Recognized as one of the three largest establishments of its kind south of Chicago, the Lang Floral & Nursery Co., of Dallas, Tex., stands as a concrete example of phenomenal growth. Organized in 1898 with a capital stock of less than $1,000 by Otto Lang, the company has, under his able direction, maintained its steady advancement in size and prestige during the intervening 22 years, until it can at the present time call attention, with justifiable pride, to a capitalization of $500,000 and a monthly payroll of $8,000. The company was incorporated in 1910 with $46,000, the capital being increased to $70,000 two years later, and in January, 1920, to $200,000, reaching its present amount not long after. The company is composed of less than 10 stockholders whose personal capital is estimated to be in excess of $5,000,000 in the aggregate.

The company now operates two large ranges, in addition to several smaller establishments in the city, the latest acquisition being that of the Green Floral Co., recently built at a cost of approximately $500,000, and it is planned to spend $50,000 in restocking, rebuilding and enlarging the houses and improving the grounds, for which purpose there has already been purchased 75,000 large gladiolus bulbs, 25,000 tuberoses and a quantity of dahlias which will be grown under lattice shades. In addition, there is a commodious two-story brick warehouse, a modern sales office and an attractive retail store at 1214 Main street.

The officers of the company are: Otto Lang, president and general manager; H. L. Edwards, vice-president; J. C. Walvoord, secretary-treasurer; H. J. Fuhlbrugge, assistant general manager. Directors: R. L. Lucas, W. H. Flippen, C. D. Pratt and H. W. Schafer.

Des Moines Floral Arts Club.

The Floral Arts Club was recently formed in Des Moines, Ia., to advance all matters of mutual and educational benefit for those interested in floral culture and the allied trades, and for social purposes. Its members consist of florists, seedsmen, nurserymen, landscape architects and gardeners. The club meets on the second Tuesday of each month for dinner and a programme following. A cordial invitation is extended those of the trade, who may be in that city at the time of the monthly meetings, to attend. L. E. Foglesong, Des Moines, is secretary of the organization.

AKRON, O.—Grossbery & Cahill filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy April 29, assets $3,000, liabilities $21,210.18.

National Flower Growers' Association

AND PUBLICITY FOR FLOWERS.

Address of J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., before the Minnesota State Florists' Association at St. Paul.

Members of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and Gentlemen:—

Ever since I received an invitation from your society through our genial friend, Mr. Olson, several months ago, I have been looking forward with great pleasure to this meeting. My topic to you will be principally on the matter of publicity for flowers, and the new branch organization just recently perfected, namely, the National Flower Growers' Association. It would, however, be impossible to give an intelligent discourse on any work pertaining to the advancement of our industry without first dwelling somewhat briefly at least, upon the history and accomplishments of our great parent body, the Society of American Florists.

This organization was launched by a few enthusiastic, visionary and unselfish pioneers away back in the year 1885. Just recently, while in conversation with E. G. Hill, the first secretary of the organization, he dwelt on a few reminiscences of the work, trials and tribulations of those loyal men which was very interesting indeed to me. Then, as now, when a new movement was launched quite a number of the leading men in the profession stood out against the organization and would not only refuse to co-operate but would also place obstacles in the way of those who were seeking to make progress. I need not at this time dwell upon the names of those pioneers, for they can easily be obtained by looking into the proceedings of any of the recent Society of American Florists' meetings.

Suffice it to say that they pioneered the way for floricultural interests in the United States, and to that parent body belongs the credit, directly or indirectly, for every organization of floriculture that has ever been perfected in the United States up to this date. That includes the Florists' Hail Association of America; the Florists' Clubs; State Associations; special societies such as The Carnation, The Rose, The Chrysanthemum, The Sweet Pea, The Gladiolus, The Dahlia and The Orchid Societies; as well as the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and the National Flower Growers' Association. For anyone in this day to stand out and say that neither, yes or that all, of these organizations have not been the nucleus of the advancement of our business, such a person, I fear, would stand good chances of being branded a pessimist.

Everyone of these organizations has found a place among the vast interests that we represent to do a special work in its own way. Hence, the expression that is now occasionally, though we are glad to say not generally, being used that we are being over-organized or that we are having too many organizations, is ridiculous and narrow. For if history proves anything, it proves the fact that through specialization of individuals or organizations we continue to reach nearer the goal of perfection than in any other way. Would anyone dare say that there is no place in American floriculture for either of the above organizations named? No, he possibly would not say that fearing no one would believe him, but he might come back with the excuse that it costs so much to join so many organizations. Then, I would like to ask if some of these kind critics know what the cost of belonging to several of these organizations really is? We probably have never stopped to think that a man with one-half million square feet of glass representing an investment of capital of approximately one-half million dollars, growing therein all the varieties of flowers that are represented in the above named organizations, that he could become a member of everyone of these societies, excepting the first and last named, and continue to remain a member by paying as annual dues into each organization and that the sum would total less than a bricklayer pays as annual dues into his one organization, and yet some of our good friends believe they are paying too much in dues when they belong to one or two branches of our trade organizations. This feeling, I am glad however, does not exist generally for if it did these organizations, of course, could not develop and progress. We have in our ranks today many men who belong to a half dozen or more of these various trade organizations and I am sure they all feel they are getting more than value received from each.

This brief review should give us evidence sufficient that we owe much to that great parent body, the Society of American Florists, and let me plead with you above all things, to be loyal to that organization. It is only too bad that we have so many men and women in the florist business throughout the United States who do not hold membership in that organization. We believe they do, in most instances, not realize or understand the necessity for every florist becoming a member of that body. Hence, there is a movement on foot to put on a comprehensive campaign for membership in the Society of American Florists, sometime between now and the annual meeting next August. No man nor woman, do we believe, if properly approached will flatly refuse to pay five dollars a year as dues into an organization that has given to them a slogan or trade mark with so much value as that launched by the publicity committee, namely "Say It With Flowers." The parent body needs the support of every individual in the trade, not only the ones in business for themselves, but the employees as well, and each and every one owes to that parent organization at least an annual membership, so I leave that thought with you as a plea for the national or parent body of us all.

Now, a word as to publicity. The publicity movement, as you all know, was launched in New York during a meeting of the Society of American Florists, during the year of 1917. The man who laid the cornerstone for that great movement by a subscription of $500 a year, has since passed to the great beyond. I speak of the Hon. Jos. Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa. It was one of those cases where the man builded better than he knew, and it is a credit to his memory that we continue this good work. You will read in the last report from the publicity committee of the Society of American Florists' board of directors, in session at Washington, D. C., that for the three years just closed, the sum of $131,156.68 has been collected and expended for the national advertising of flowers and the spreading of that great slogan, "Say It With Flowers," in the United States. On the results of this campaign, I shall not dwell. That speaks for itself. We, I am sure, are more interested at this time in the future of this campaign. It has been said, and no doubt truthfully, so, that the day of easy salesmanship in the United States is fast dwindling and what is advertising other than salesmanship? True, advertising does not sell directly, but advertising does bring the customer or patron to your door and gives therefore the opportunity for salesmanship, and experience I think, tells us that when a prospective buyer is brought into the flower store he seldom leaves without a purchase. We have the product. We have the stores and establishments for distribution, so all we need is the customers or buyers. We must remember that we are in competition with the products of the world, many of them by far less necessary than flowers, and most of them being much more liberally advertised throughout the United States, both locally and nationally. Therefore, it behooves us to not only continue to do what we have done in the past, but to increase and enlarge our appropriations for that necessary project.

Now, the question arises, how can we best do it? The national publicity committee, after much thought and careful consideration has submitted a comprehensive and equitable plan for raising future funds for co-operative advertising, to the board of directors of the Society of American Florists and also to the National Flower Growers' Associtaion in session at Washington, D. C., just recently. Both of these bodies have unanimously endorsed this plan. It is, in substance, a penny tax on all wholesale sales and purchases of flowers, both through the commission houses and individual establishments as well. You will find copies of this plan printed in the trade papers. Read it over carefully. Study it. Think about it. Familarize yourselves with it. Satisfy yourselves that it is just and equitable. We must all do this because the mental anticipation always precedes the physical action. Unless you are in harmony with the plan, of course, you cannot co-operate in it. This will not be put into effect by force. It must be done in the spirit of co-operation only. The success of this plan depends entirely upon the fairness and justness of the programme. If it is not so it will not stand. We who have given it much study and thought and those who have had it in operation for two years and over are satisfied with the plan. This plan will be submitted to the Society of American Florists in meeting next August for their approval and adoption; then again to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association meeting next October, where in both cases we feel satisfied it will receive the approval of all members and if it does, it will become the universal plan for the co-operative advertising of flowers both locally and nationally.

It is all a matter of education. We need to educate ourselves first and then to help others. Even with the most comprehensive work, we, of course, do not expect to make this a 100 per cent movement. There will be here and there, as in all cases, standing by the wayside, obstructionists, so to speak, throwing a few stones here and there to make the road a little rougher. That, however, should not deter us in our advancement towards the goal any more than it did the pioneers in paving the way for the first organization of floriculturists. As President Roland at a recent meeting so well said, "The sun shines on the just and the unjust alike." In fact a little opposition is healthy and it many times puts more vim into the workers. Our first move shall be to get as many allied trade organizations for co-operative advertising perfected in the various communities, as possible. These will be very much along the lines of that wonderful organization that is doing such great work in co-operative advertising, namely, the Allied Trade Associtaion of Chicago, where funds are being raised on the percentage plan and 75 per cent of such funds is being used for local advertising and 25 per cent contributed to the national advertising fund.

Now, then, we have linked up with this great movement the newly organized National Flower Growers' Association. Those who have given any time and study to the matter of the producing end of our business have come to the conclusion that it is necessary to organize on a business basis that branch that represents the foundation of the trade, which approximates 90 per cent of all the money invested in the flower business in this country. Careful investigation has proven to us beyond a doubt that the producers of any article by virtue of that branch of a business, are and primarily should be, the national advertisers. In our case, it being the growers, we felt it right and proper that the National Flower Growers' Association should take a leading part and be a prime factor in carrying on and financing the national advertising campaign. We no doubt shall continue to receive the co-operation of the retailers who up to now have been the leaders in this great movement. In so doing we are not pioneers in any sense of the word. We are merely following the precedent laid down for us by various producers of other products who have in the last decade marketed a vast increased production through judicious national advertising.

ST LOUIS DISTRICT MEETING

The meeting of the St. Lois, Mo. district of the National Flower Growers' Association was held at the St. Nicholas hotel, Springfield, Ill., April 19. A large number of growers from St. Louis and vicinity, southern and central Illinois were in attendance. At the main session, President Walter A. Amling, Pana, Ill., in the chair, the report of J. J. Beneke, St. Louis, secretary, made a very favorable impression. He showed that the membership of the district consisted of 58 growers all of whom had paid their first quarterly dues in advance, with 14 paying for a year. The amount of $856.67 had been collected to date, and with disbursements of $397.34 the treasury showed a balance of $458.83. The report of Treasurer W. A. Rowe, St. Louis, also showed a balance of $458.83. Both reports were accepted, to be approved later by the auditing committee. Introduced as the principal speaker of the afternoon, J. Fred. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., outlined the growth of the national organization and told the members the benefits they will derive from it. Mr. Ammann's address was well received. John Steidle, Olivette, Mo., exhibited 100 blooms of the seedling pink carnation, Edna, making a fine display. The flowers were given a score of 86 points and Mr. Steidle was awarded a certificate of merit by the association.

At a meeting of the executive committee presided over by Mr. Amling, the minutes of the previous session of the association held at Pana, Ill., were approved. After other routine matters were discussed, the question of co-operative buying was considered. The chair then appointed a committee consisting of Secretary J. J. Beneke, W. A. Rowe and C. E. De Wever, all of St. Louis, to have charge of the buying for members who make out the questionnaires recently sent out by the organization. Other committees were appointed to look after the interests of the pot plant and retail growers. At the conclusion of the executive committee meeting, the members accepted the invitation of J. W. Ross, Centralia, Ill., to hold the next session of the organization in that city, July 19.

The entertainment programme consisted of an automobile trip through the city and a visit to the greenhouses of A. C. Brown, G. H. Hennessey, Belle Miller and Hembreiker & Cole. Dinner at the hotel followed by a theatre party concluded a busy day.

OHIO DISTRICT

Great strides have been made during the past month in the work of organizing the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association. The organization now has a membership of very nearly 100, representing 2,000,000 square feet of glass. A new plan has been developed which is working very successfully. In each of the larger communities a local unit is formed and a vice-president and secretary elected and left in charge of the organization. When permanent officers of the state association are elected, these local vice-presidents will act as directors of the parent body. By this plan it will be possible to secure the immediate action of the entire state upon any question when speed might be needed. Local bodies will hold monthly meetings to discuss problems that affect their communities, or that they wish to have brought up for action by the entire state.

Strong, local organizations have been created in Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Youngstown, Akron, Canton, Dayton and Cincinnati. Monthly meetings are being held in these centers and committees are being appointed to consider questions that are vital to the trade. That this state has made such quick progress in the forming of its division of the National Flower Growers' Association is due entirely to the energy and activity of President Carl Hagenberger, W. Mentor, ho has taken personal charge of the work and has spent a great deal of time, energy and money in visiting the various cities and towns of the state, preaching the gospel and benefits of co-operation. That this work is bearing fruit is evidenced by the rapid growth of the association. On his tours, Mr. Hagenberger has been accompanied by Director Lars Anderson and Secretary L. C. Vinson.

FREEPORT, ILL.—A loss of nearly $3,000 to its range and plants was sustained recently by the Freeport Floral Co., during a heavy snow and wind storm.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—The New Bedford Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of peonies June 15-16, roses June 22-23, gladioli August 17-18, dahlias September 21-22. For premium lists address Secretary Jeremiah M. Tabor, 888 Rockdale avenue.

OBITUARY.

David Ives ushnell.

David Ives Bushnell, senior member of D. I. Bushnell, & Co., seed merchants, St. Louis, Mo., one of the oldest grain men and active member of the Merchants Exchange of that city, died of bronchial pneumonia in the Missouri Baptist sanitarium April 29. He had been in ill health a number of years but was at the office part of the day April 26, the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birthday.

Mr. Bushnell was born at Sheffield, Mass., and spent his boyhood days there, his father being a schol teacher and very well known. He established the firm which bears his name in St. Louis in 1872 and was elected president of the American Seed Trade Association at the Toronto convention in 1894, having for associates S. E. Briggs, of that city as vice-president and the late A. L. Don of New York, secretary-treasurer. He was president of the St. Louis Archaeological Society and travelled extensively in pursuit of this science, proving beyond doubt the existence of an early Indian line of communication between Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Missouri. He was a member of the St. Louis and other clubs, and a benefactor of the Missouri Tuberculosis Society, Union Mission Association and the Mothers' and Babies' Home. A number of orphans in care of the mission association marched in a body to pay tribute to his remains April 30.

Funeral services were held May 1, in a house which Mr. Bushnell had just recently purchased but never occupied, the large attendance including George S. Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, and wife, Charles D. Boyles and Harry S. Faust, of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, J. G. and J. L. Peppard, of the J. G. Peppard Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo. The Rev. George R. Dodson, pastor of the Church of the Unity officiated. The remains will be placed in a mausoleum in Bellefontaine cemetery. Beautiful floral tributes were received from all parts of the country.

One son, Prof. D. I. Bushnell, Jr., of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., survives, also a brother, 87 years of age, and nephew at Sheffield, Mass.

Robert W. Pommer, the surviving partner, will continue the business.

APPRECIATION

George S. Green of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago: "In the death of D. I. Bushnell, the seed trade has lost one of its strongest and most lovable personalities. He has been prominent among seedsmen for about 50 years, and during all this time, has never made an enemy. He has stood for honor and fairness in business, and his personal relations with all with whom he came in contact, have been upright and liberal. He will be sincerely mourned by many whom he has befriended.

Fred W. Barteldes, of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kans.: "Many, many old friends will mourn the death of D. I. Bushnell, all the more as this sad news comes at a time when so many prominent seedsmen have been called from the ranks.

"The late Mr. Bushnell was a close friend of mine during a period of almost 50 years, having started in business at St. Louis about the same time I started in Lawrence. In all our business dealings of these many years, not once have I had occasion to question the integrity of his firm.

"Mr. Bushnell will be greatly missed at the coming St. Louis convention of the seed trade. His personality always made him the center of an admiring host, and I am confident that if he could have been spared a few months longer, he would have greeted the many visiting friends with his ever cheerful smile. I know it would have taken more, a great deal more, than the trials and disappointments of the past season to dim that smile."

S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn.: "He was a fine representative of upright New England character, firm in all his convictions of honor and fair dealing, a type of man we all love to remember. He was a native of western Massachusets, leaving his home in 1872 to new fields in the west. His success, his friends, his business associations all bear tribute to a life broad in its outlook, sincere in integrity, thoughtful for others and cheerful under trials."

Alfred Demeusey.

Alfred Demeusey, well known carnation grower of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died May 1, age 53. He had been in poor health for a year, but had attended to business up to two days before his death. Mr. Demeusey came to this country in 1883 from France, and secured employment with the late Charles Zeller. Three years later he went into business for himself, which he pursued successfully until his death. He was a member of the Society of American Florists and the New York Florists' Club, and was highly respected by all who knew him.

Mr. Demeusey is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter.

Columbus, O.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR STOCK

Trade during the past week has been better than during any week since Easter. All of the down-town florists report a larger volume of business in every way and people have got over their hesitancy in buying flowers and plants. Funeral work has been especially active. Parties and weddings are also a feature. In fact every line of the trade is good including loose flowers, corsages and floral pieces. The supply is adequate, and the quality is generally high-class. Roses and carnations are in good supply and the demand has been steady. Snapdragons and tulips are also selling well and prices are firm. Sweet peas are one of the best features. The weather has not been the best for greenhouses as it has been rather cool but nevertheless there is a plentiful supply locally. Plants are in better demand as the summer approaches. Offerings are small.

NOTES.

Active preparations are being made for Mothers' Day and there is expected to be a larger demand for flowers than ever before. The principal flowers in the market will be roses, carnations, sweet peas, lilies, snapdragons and tulips. Prices will not be advanced materially because of the occasion.

The public was invited to see a novel display at the greenhouses of the state hospital for the insane. The public was shown through the greenhouses April 25-26 from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. One of the features was more than 1,000 blooming calceolarias, a comparatively new flower in this section. These flowers come in various shades, the striking feature being their resemblance to a ladie's purse.

Stephen the Florist, at the Greenlawn cemetery, has been featuring pansies which are being sold at 75 cents per dozen. This concern is doing a good business in spireas, honeysuckles, deutzias, barberries, hydrangeas, clematis and other shrubbery.

J. W. L.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Peter Vos and son Gerrett Vos have purchased 40 acres of land near this city for growing gladioli and will plant 2,000,000 bulbs early in May.

THE delay of this week's issue is due to the printers' strike.

THE next annual meeting of the American Rose Society will be held at Washington, D. C., June 2.

IT is reported the spaces assigned by the National Flower Show management, for the Cleveland, O., exhibition in 1922 for ornamental garden displays, have been engaged.

Cape Jasmines.

D. Z. Holloway, Pasadena, Texas, says the outlook for a supply of cape jasmine buds was never better. The cut will begin to move about May 12 and continue into June.

European Notes.

R. A. Rolfe, the well known botanical authority on orchids at the Kew Herbarium, London, Eng., died April 13. He was an accomplished successor to Reichenbach of Germany, the previous authority on these plants.

We now learn that Wilhelm Runde, the well known horticulturist and specialist in lily of the valey, of Wandsbek, Hamburg, Germany, died February 4.

COAL.—The Illinois Central railroad has issued warning of impending coal shortage, stating that railroads are unable to care for the transportation late in the year and urging consumers to buy and store early.

Memorial Day.

President Harding in his Memorial Day proclamation says: "I invite my fellow citizens fittingly to pay homage on this day to a noble dead, who sleep in homeland, beneath the sea, or on foreign fields, so that we who survive might enjoy the blessings of peace and happiness and to the end that liberty and justice, without which no nation can exist, shall live forever."

Coal and Wood Ashes.

Coal ashes have little value as fertilizer, their use being mainly to loosen the soil and make it more workable. They are most valuable on heavy clay soil, but should be screened to take out coarse material before they are applied, and should be spread evenly over the surface and thoroughly mixed with the soil. Wood ashes have fertilizing value, but should be applied before they become leached.

Society of American Florists.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

The Society of American Florists, through a special committee of which J. Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., is chairman, is planning a drive for new members, to begin May 15, and continue until the annual convention of the society in August. The aim is to double the membership in 90 days, with the hope that every member will obtain a new member.

To stimulate the campaign, Mr. Ammann is sending out two letters, one to the secretaries of affiliated organizations and the other to secretaries of local florists' clubs. The object of the first letter to the affiliated societies is to secure membership lists, to check against Society of American Florists' list. It is expected through this co-operation to increase the membership of these organizations as well as the parent society. The other letter, written to secretaries of florists' clubs, requests the appointment of three members to act as a local committee on membership, co-operating with the national society committee.

American Sweet Pea Society.

The American Sweet Pea bulletin and schedule for 1921, the official organ of the American Sweet Pea Society has been issued and contains much of interest. Included in the contents is the final and complete schedule for the exhibition to be held in connection with the thirteenth annual convention at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, June 25-26. Among the awards offered is the Hutchins memorial cup, value $250, to be held one year only, for the finest 12 distinct varieties, 20 sprays to a vase, correctly named; in addition to which the prizes of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., will be awarded. Entrants may secure entry blanks from Secretary Edw. C. Vick, 205 Elwood avenue, Newark, N. J. These should be properly filled out and mailed to reach him on or before June 23.

Additional features of the bulletin are a number of excellent papers among them the following: "The Best Sweet Peas." by Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; "Growing Sweet Peas in Clumps," by Chas. Elliott, and "Seed Sowing", by Wm. Gray, Newport, R. I.

Mothers' Day.

The beautiful hands of my mother dear,
At rest 'neath the daisies for many a year,
Strange, is it not, as the shadows grow
And the eventide gathers, they thrill me so!

Beautiful hands of the long ago,
Hands that so tenderly toiled, I know,
Toiled for me as my baby feet
Toddled along in the busy street.

Toiled, as sped on the years of my youth;
Patiently pointing the path of truth.
Beautiful, soothing, soft, white hands,
Pain would vanish at their commands.
Fears would scatter, and sorrow flee,
When those dear old hands were laid on me.

And those beautiful hands are as real to me
After fifty years, as they used to be.
And I feel the thrill of her presence now,
And I see her smile as my head I bow
And my heart o'erflows as I "Say it with Flowers."

Cape Jessamine Buds for Memorial Day

The Queen of Flowers
600,000 This Season
The Largest Jessamine Farm in the U.S.

To Our Customers and the Trade:—The Cape Jessamine Bud Crop will be ten days earlier this season than it has for the past several years, starting about May 8. This will enable us to fill your Decoration Day order complete and have it in your store several days in advance, so there will be no need for you to worry. We will also be able to take care of any rush order after May 10. An early order or two will no doubt stimulate your Decoration Day trade.

Our buds are fine; we believe in cultivation and fertilization, which costs money, but the extra quality more than repays it. "Squirrel ear" leaves and nobby buds do not go with us. If you have never bought off us, all we ask is a trial shipment.

We will ship anywhere in the U.S; time arrivals and guarantee A1 stock. No order too large for us. Place your order where the supply is large, but to avoid the rush, order early. We are booking orders daily. Special attention given regular orders. Jessamines travel at second-class express rate.

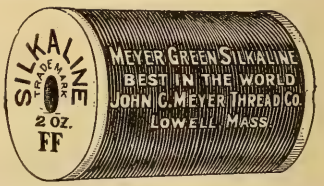
HEAVY DEMAND FOR MOTHERS' DAY

The demand for stock for Mothers' Day is exceptionally heavy especially from out-of-town points and from present indications it appears as if the market will clean-up completely in all lines. The cold weather early in the week shortened up the supply considerably and the market opened up strong this week with carnations bringing $8 per 100 and up. A few warm days might change the situation somewhat especially as far as the city demand is concerned, but it looks as if all stock placed on shipping orders will command the advertised quotations and in some instances more. Carnations are in strong demand and orders are plentiful but some of the dealers are only accepting from their regular customers. American Beauty roses are in fair supply and should clean-up completely. Columbia and Premier are having a good call and what few Mrs. Chas. Russell are arriving are finding ready buyers. Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Dunlop, Butterfly, Ophelia, Sunburst, Montrose, White Killarney, Aaron Wards, Cecile Brunner and all the other varieties of roses grown for this market are in strong demand and none too plentiful at this writing. Peonies are in good supply at several of the wholesale houses but should be all disposed of at the advertised quotations. Sweet peas, orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley are in good supply and in strong demand. Snapdragons are quite a factor in the market and there is some choice ones obtainable. Stocks, mignonette, daisies, larkspur, candytuft, pansies, tulips, jonquils, calendulas, white and yellow daisies, lilies, callas, gladioli, narcissus and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is included in the cut flower offerings. Statice is to be had in quantity of splendid quality and is coming in handy. Greens are none too plentiful and cut ferns advanced in price the past week. Everything points to a brisk demand for Mothers' Day with the greatest clean-up in years unless the weather takes a decided change for the better before the week is over.

NOTES.

The Chicago Church Federation will send flowers and dainties to former soldiers who cannot leave the hospitals on Mothers' Day. The arrangements are in charge of Howard A. Johnston, president of the federation and Walter R. Mee, executive secretary.

Lewis & Rocca's wedding window is attracting much attention and is cleverly arranged with miniature wax figures consisting of the ring bearer, bridal couple, maid-of-honor and six bridesmaids.



Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

The local wholesalers received the following notice from the Cleveland, O., Retail Florists' Association, Inc., this week, which was adopted at a recent meeting according to the secretary, W. F. Felton: "Resolved: That the members of the Cleveland Retail Florists' Association will absolutely refuse to accept picked carnations for Mothers' Day, and will return to consignee and deduct same from invoice. And that the secretary is hereby instructed to send copy of this resolution to all wholesalers doing business with members of this association." The word "picked" which appeared in this notice was evidently intended for "pickled."

Peter Moleson, formerly with Peter Reinberg, is now supplying the wholesalers and retailers with delivery service to all parts of the city via the old reliable Ford. Mr. Moleson is making his headquarters at Fred Nicklas at 30 East Randolph street.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are having a heavy call for stock for Mothers' Day and are taking good care of all their regular customers notwithstanding the extreme scarcity of stock in this market.

Notices have been posted in local wholesale houses as follows this week: "On all sales of flowers one per cent will be included in the purchase price."

LARGE SUPPLY MOVES SLOWLY.

The heavy spring cut still continues in this market and coming as it does on a rather quite demand some difficulty, is being experienced in moving stock. At present there is a decided over supply of roses and only the very best flowers are bringing reasonable prices. Columbia, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Premier are now at their best and are being featured by the stores. Prices of these varieties have taken a downward trend, along with other stock. Ophelia is in over supply and the street merchants are offering it in large quantities. All red varieties are in practically the same condition. Cecil Brunner is now very fine and is selling well, for corsage work; roses always find a ready market here for this purpose. The best stock is all out-door grown. We still have good American Beauty roses to offer. Ulrich Brunner, grown out-of-doors is coming in more freely, but as far as price is concerned, it is faring badly in competition with the leading greenhouse stock. We are also receiving some Frau Karl Druski, that is exceptionally fine. Iris, white, blue and purple are receiving much attention. Finer stock is seldom seen, the stems averaging three to four feet long. There has been a large increase in the snapdragon cut, but on the average the offerings are poor in quality. Tulips still are in much favor due to the excellence of the stock being received. Sweet peas continue to arrive in large quantities and are one of the few flowers which find constant favor with the public. Carnations are now at the peak of the spring cut and unless the stock is strictly first class, they move with difficulty. Laddie is rather scarce of late. Gardenias show no change in price or supply. Violets are rapidly disappearing from the market since the warm weather set in. Lily of the valley is in fine demand with prices firm. There has been quite an increase in the cut of cattleyas, but notwithstanding this effort they clean up rapidly. Lilac still continues to be a popular spring flower and finds a ready market. Lupines add to the offerings of spring stock. Lilium Giganteum is arriving in quantity with prices firm. Ranunculus are in ample supply. In flowering plants, rhododendrons are most in evidence. The stock is very satisfactory and sells well. Glory of Mordrecht fern is being largely featured by all the stores and is very fine in quality. French hydrangeas in variety, are in constant demand as pot plants. Genista racemosis is being more largely handled this season as a flowering plant than ever before. Greens of every description are plentiful and reasonable in price.

NOTES.

The officers of the Retail Florists' Association have been advised that the national publicity committee of the Society of American Florists has delegated J. Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago, to visit this city, and assist and advise the local organization in its advertising campaign. Mr. Ammann has addressed over 100 meetings on this subject. Mr. Swenson is one of the foremost advertising men in the country, having organized the Allied Florists' Association of Chicago. These men will arrive here about May 30, and will come prepared with facts and figures to show the results of advertising campaigns in the eastern cities. Mr. Ammann's fame as a convincing speaker has preceded him to the coast.

F. C. Jager & Son, 150 Powell street, have purchased the retail store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., 141 Powell street. During April and May both shops will be operated, but upon the expiration of the lease at 150 Powell street, June 1, they will become consolidated at 141 Powell street. The MacRorie-McLaren Co., is retiring from the retail florist business, to devote their entire attention to their nurseries at San Mateo, and their landscape department. Donald McLaren will remain in charge of the city office of the firm, while Daniel MacRorie will operate the nursery.

A strong effort is being put forth by the florists this year to divert the attention of the public from carnations as an exclusive Mothers' Day flower. Last year exorbitant prices were demanded in the wholesale market for white carnations, with the result that the public would not pay the prices demanded by the stores. The result was that a large supply of this flower was carried over by many retailers entailing considerable loss. They hope to escape the condition this year through advertising.

John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, exhibited a collection of native trees and shrubs at the annual wild flower show, April 28-30. The exhibition was given to stimulate an interest in the native flowers of the state and assist in the movement for their preservation.

The Dahlia Society of California held its quarterly meeting at the Palace hotel April 21. There was a large attendance to hear a discussion of planting. Secretary F. C. Burns reported great interest being manifested in the fall dahlia exhibition.

Daniel McRorie of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., says that notwithstanding the fact that the planting season is getting well advanced, the demand for stock is still good. The landscape department of the firm has been unusually busy of late.

Frank R. Mills Palo Alto, says spring business both in plants and cut flowers is most satisfactory. His carnation houses are producing heavily. The planting of young chrysanthe-

STOCK SELLING NICELY

Stock has been plentiful with a demand that has used up every thing in the line of first class offerings, leaving the poor stock to be cleaned up the best way possible. Prices have remained steady and while no fancy figures were realized, still they were ample to satisfy the grower. American Beauty roses are in limited supply and have cleaned up daily. The supply of roses has been heavy and the quality of the best. There has been no trouble in disposing of the short and medium lengths, but the longer lengths have been hard to move at times. Premier, Columbia and Butterfly are the favorites. Carnations have been good property, with the offerings not nearly large enough to supply the demand. Easter and calla lilies have a good call, which holds good of snapdragons. It seems as if this flower is gaining in popularity every year. Sweet peas have been poor in quality. Lily of the valley and orchids have cleaned up daily. A few Darwin tulips are arriving and sell on sight. Other offerings include calendulas and yellow and white daisies. Cut ferns have been scarce and southern plumosa has been arriving in very poor condition. The outlook for Mothers' Day is bright with a demand far greater than the supply, and as usual carnations will have to be divided up among the trade. The wholesale houses are not promising any large amounts to any one. It looks as though there would be a good supply of roses, snapdragons and other seasonable stock to take the place of the carnations.

NOTES.

It was with regret that the trade heard of the death of Mrs. J. J. Fuchs, wife of one of the city's best known florists. Mrs. Fuchs has been ailing for some time and her family knew that there was little chance for her recovery.

Several road men of the local supply houses were in town last week. Those at headquarters include Ross Adgate and Mr. Blend of The McCallum Co., and Messrs. Wampler and Frishkorn of The Pitsburgh Cut Flower Co.

George C. McCallum, of The McCallum Co., is on a business trip to his Detroit, Mich., branch, where he will remain until after Mothers' Day.

A GOOD MOTHER'S DAY TRADE

Business was quiet during the fore part of the week, but stiffened up perceptibly during the last few days. The weather experienced in this vicinity has had a considerable effect upon many flowers and a shortage of carnations and sweet peas for Mothers' Day is predicted. Many flowers have been forced for this season of the year. Roses are shortening up considerably and are leading the floral offerings. Butterfly, Premier, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia, Ward, Milady, Ophelia and Killarney are the most popular. The stock is unusually good and is selling well. The carnations offered are limited and the quality of the blooms is not first class. Prices are firm, however. White varieties are unusually plentiful and do not bring as fancy a price as other kinds. Calendulas of exceptional value are among the offerings this week, but there is no call for them and they are selling at a loss. Lilium Harrisii is more than plentiufl and has a fair call. The stock on hand is of excellent quality. Prices are moderately low. Callas are plentiful. Some very fine Callas are shown in six to eight-inch pots by a few establishments. Out-door lily of the valley is coming in, with a small demand. Snap-dragons are plentiful and form the principal item in many window displays. The stock offered is of fine quality, both large flowered and long spiked. Daisies are plentiful, both yellow and white varieties; but surprising enuogh, the demand remains brisk. The supply of sweet peas is more than plentiful, but the stock is short-stemmed and water-soaked. Long stemmed blooms are in fair demand and bring a good price. Some very fine iris is offered. The flowers are very small but long-stemmed and the prices are high. Gladioli of good quality is selling rapidly. Loveliness is the leading variety and it is being used principally in weddings. Narcissi are very scarce. Small quantities of poeticus are coming in and bring a fair price. Some fine pansies handled by a few concerns, are bringing good prices. The flowers are very large and long-stemmed. There is a little mignonette on the market but not enough to fill the great demand for it. Delphiniums are found in very limited quantities and their price is almost prohibitive. The season's first peonies are now coming in and are valuable property. They are selling out fast, with a limited offering. Long-stemmed varieties of white, red and yellow blooms are seen. Corn flowers are making their appearance.

INCREASED SUPPLY MOVES SLOWLY

The past week has been unsatisfactory. The demand started out well but later fell into a rut. Trade picked up on Friday and Saturday, but in general business was not what it should have been. The market is full of flowers of all kinds including peonies from the south, which move very slowly. Roses were in full supply, all grades being of excellent quality. Mrs. Chas. Russell will be the favorite from now on because it is such a good shipper and maintains its substance and color as the hot weather sets in. Special Premier, Columbia, Hadley, and Dunlop are in fine form and considering conditions, bring fair prices. Carnations have been surprisingly plentiful for this week and the fact that Mothers' Day is so close at hand sell readily. The cool weather prevailing will, if it turns warm, increase the supply for this day. Calla lilies have become quite a factor in the market, being particularly in demand for funeral work. They have been one of the best stocks of the growers the past season. Easter lilies are in good demand. Snapdragons, lupines and larkspur are offered in fine form, some of the specials being exceptionally well flowered. Cattleyas are about equal to the demand and clean up at top prices. Cornflowers are now popular as boutoniers and are to be had in quantity.

EFFICIENT METHODS

An authority on the subject says that growers generally do not place the confidence in the judgment of their commission house, or take them into their heart to heart talks as they should. Their success depends on what they can get for their stock, and the quantity they can turn out of their greenhouses. Frequently a grower who has not been forcing bulbs will because they sold well the previous season lay in a quantity to be brought in as a side line. To first ask his dealers advice never occurs to him. The result is that others do the same and when the plants come in along with those grown by specialists, the market is flooded and nobody makes any money. Such conditions would not have occurred had the dealer's opinion been asked, who would have counseled against the danger of oversupplying the demand. The dealer wants a well balanced stock and depends on his growers to give it to him, and there should be close unity of purpose by all interests to keep the market evenly supplied with seasonable stock at all times.

NOTES.

From the orders received ahead by all the houses and the inquiries about stock and prices, Mothers' Day is looming up good. The local demand is receiving no assistance in any concerted advertising. Some of the progressive retailers who are subscribers to florists' publicity booklets, send these out to their own store lists and there are a few window cards, but this is about all. What can be done by a get-together movement of the trade here, will come by some slow evolutionary process not yet in sight.

Arthur A. Niessen's address before the Lancaster County Florists Association on April 21, was intensely practical. He gave some timely advice on the methods and advantages to be derived from advertising, particularly at times of overproduction. It was gospel publicity truth, every word of it, and is the kind of propaganda that should be continually pushed in this city and vicinity.

From advance orders The Leo Niessen Co. expect a large Mothers' Day business. Mr. Niessen says that if the retailers would only jump in and feature the accasion as they should, many more flowers could be sold. Choice roses, carnations and snapdragons are quantity stocks. Cornflower is also a feature at this store.

Pennock Bros. filled their window with a showy wedding decoration last week in which well flowered dogwood formed a prominent part. It attracted great attention.

Preparations for a record Mothers' Day business have been made at Chas. H. Grakelow's.

Robert Craig, together with his son Robert A. and Cornelius Van Derbreggen, have returned from Porto Rico. Mr. Craig who has spent the winter laying out and planting his tropical nursery, looks very well and is glad to be back at home amongst his many friends.

A good sale of Mothers' Day specialties, carnations, baskets, etc. has been experienced at H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s establishment. Orders are now coming in for Memorial Day.

"Our carnation crop is the largest we have ever gathered for Mothers' Day," declared Jos. G. Niedenger. Memorial Day business is looming up large at his store.

J. J. Habermehls Sons are busy with spring weddings and other decorations. Their Walnut Street window is always very attractive with artistically made up baskets.

Berger Bros. are well supplied for the Mothers' Day demand. Roses, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas are leaders here.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is making a western trip.

K.

Cincinnati, O.

DEMAND FAIRLY GOOD.

There has been little change in the market over the previous week. Roses are arriving in large enough quantities to supply the demand as are carnations of excellent quality. Exceptional snapdragons are to be had but only in limited quantities due to rust which is killing a number of plants. Sweet peas are arriving in goodly numbers and sell readily. Some of the first gladioli were to be had this week from the south, but only a few went, owing to the extremely high price on out-door stock. Greenhouse plants sold better. Cornflowers made their initial appearance and went well, as did pansies, forget-me-nots and primulas. Greens sell well.

NOTES.

It seems that Ball & Betz have gone out of the wire design trade and into the door badge business by the way the packages and boxes of these very popular articles are leaving that establishment daily.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is receiving some excellent Harrissii lilies from Mrs. Edw. Fries, of Ft. Thomas, Ky.

C. E. Critchell reports the first of the southern gladioli and has had a good week in the sale of green goods and chiffons.

C. J. Jones of the Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar whom we reported last week as being sick is very much himself again.

T. W. Hardesty & Co., did well in plants the past week, and have found business exceptionally good of late.

A record week in basket arrangements and funeral work has been had by H. W. Sheppard.

STOCK MOVING SLOWLY

Business conditions have been poor the past week. There was an abundant supply of good stock, all of which went slowly and in some cases the movement was scarcely perceptible. It is not worth while to attempt to particularize as to the slowest stock for all seemed to be in one boat. Small quantities of the choicest offerings brought fair prices, but the surplus and inferior grades were problems hard to solve. As Mothers' Day has been liberally advertised, it is hoped that there will be an encouraging revival. Several retail stores report wedding decorations, but all the stock that is nowadays bought for such functions is scarcely missed from the markets. Heavy stocks of well flowered geraniums are already arriving and it appears that there will be good plant supplies for Memorial day.

NOTES.

President Kenshaw of the Allied Florists' Association is not at all pleased with the Mothers' Day posters he has received from the florists' publicity bureau of Chicago, and we do not blame him. Prof. Einstein, now touring this country, said to be an authority on "relativity," might explain the relation or suggestion that these posters have to a mother or Mothers' Day, but no one else seems to be able to do so. But we will acknowledge that as works of art they might be creditable to our artist in whitewash.

The news of the death of S. S. Butterfield, reported in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of April 30, was a shock to his many friends in the trade of this city. From years of personal acquaintance and from sentiments expressed by men prominent in the trade, the writer can state that no man on the staff of any florists' trade paper was ever more highly esteemed than S. S. Butterfield. A good man and a worthy citizen has joined the inumerable company.

Mayor Hylan of this city sent a message of greeting and a bunch of Rowayton roses to Mayor Thompson, Chicago, on the first regular commercial aeroplane that ever left this city, May 4. Mr. Hylan wrote in part: "These are Rowayton roses, the finest of their type. Are they not suggestive of New York prominence in more than mere commercial enterprises?"

John A. Brooks, president and general manager of the Brooks Lawn Sprinkling System, Detroit, Mich., was a visitor in the trade centers of this city the past week. He is a genial gentleman and is well fortified with information on the business of that city, including his own particular line, and carries testimonials and photographs to corroborate his assertions.

Irving Aronson and Harry E. White, formerly with Schloss Brothers, Ribbons, Inc., are now doing business for themselves under the name of the Whitehouse Ribbon Co., at 37 E. 28th street, and are making good progress. These enterprising young men keep in close touch with the ribbon and chiffon importing market.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in the Engineering Building, W. 39th street, near Sixth avenue, on May 9. There should be a good attendance.

Mrs. May Rigby, wife of Percy B. Rigby, local representative of the S. S. Pennock Co., died at her home in this city May 2, after a long illness.

Wm. Scharp, for a number of years with A. M. Westwood, the Pennsylvania terminal florist, is seriously ill at his father's home,, Bayshare, L. I.

CARNATIONS THE BEST SELLERS

There has been no material change in the market this past week. Roses are coming in far in excess of the demand and clean up at prices so low that it is hard to understand where the growers are going to show a profit for the season. Carnations are selling at good prices, about $6 per hundred. This is a very good price considering what other stock is bringing. This market was greatly benefitted owing to the annual carnation day in Salem, Mass., which took 35,000 flowers. The weather for two weeks has been very bad for this stock and it is expected there will be a scarcity for the Mothers' Day trade. The present outlook is for a 12 to 15 cent market on good pinks. Bulbs are about gone. A few jonquils are left. Lilies have become scarce again, good flowers bringing $20 to $25 a hundred. Iris is arriving but the flowers are of a very inferior quality but sell well. Other spring flowers are coming in large quantities and sell mostly to jobbers.

EXHIBIT OF NATIVE ORCHIDS

At Horticultural hall April 23-26 A. C. Burrage exhibited 29 varieties of orchids in flower, which was a very creditable showing, as there are only 48 known kinds. The staging and surroundings were the best ever seen here in this plant, and is the first time the forcing of native orchids in New England has been tried out.

NOTES

The meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club was held April 26, B. Letson being the principal speaker. His topic was "The Arrangement of Flowers to Get the Best Results." Several exhibits from private gardeners were displayed.

W. A. McAlpine, proprietor of the New England Rose Co., was unfortunate this week in having his barn destroyed by fire and losing two automobiles, at Scituate, Mass. The property is covered by insurance.

Archie Murray, foreman for Pierce Bros., Waltham, sailed April 28 for his home in Scotland to visit his aged mother.

Edmund Welch of Welch Bros. has gone into the automobile business as a salesman. E. F. S.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel. Next annual meeting, will be held at St. Louis, June 20-21, 1921.

THE counter trade in the Chicago seed stores slumped considerably during the cold rainy days of last week.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has just closed a month's service on the federal grand jury.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Inc., Floral Park, N. Y., reports business this season 10 per cent ahead of last year to date.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—John T. Buckbee is confined to St. Anthony's hospital, this city, but is expected to return home soon.

EDWARD S. LEONARD of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, opened the fishing season by a trip to Antigo, Wis., this week.

DR. FRANKLIN, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadaloupe, Calif., who is in the east, will return by way of St. Louis, Mo.

MRS. CHAS. P. BRASLAN, her sister, Miss Pieper, and daughter Olga passed through Chicago this week, returning home to San Jose, Calif., from the east.

ROBT. D. EDWARDS, for the past three years production manager of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has severed his connection with that firm.

FRENCH reports of April 12 show liberal rains that week, giving promise of better development of the narcissus crop, which had been somewhat retarded by the recent drought.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; A. T. Ferrell, of the A. T. Ferrell Co., Saginaw, Mich.; James Fisher, representing the Walter E. Cook Co., Cleveland, O.

IN the Chicago onion set district, about 60 per cent of an average acreage has been sown. The delay in sowing 40 per cent has been caused by continued wet weather. Those fields showing the rows are hardly ready to cultivate. The acreage in the north part of Cook county is reduced, while in the southern section, it is about the same as last year.

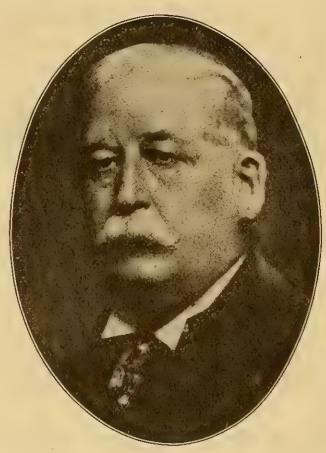
Iowa Seed Dealers' Association.

The annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will be held June 1, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Des Moines. Matters of great importance to the seed dealers of this state will be taken up at this session and a full attendance is desired. Visiting seedsmen are invited.

The Late David Ives Bushnell.

It is with deep sorrow and regret that we announce the death of David I. Bushnel of D. I. Bushnell & Co., wholesale seed merchants of St. Louis, Mo., which occurred Friday, April 29.

Mr. Bushnell was one of the pioneers in the seed trade having been in business for nearly fifty years. He was personally known to nearly every seedsman in the United States and foreign countries, and was greatly beloved by all. He always stood for honor and integrity in business and was a prominent figure in seedsmen's organizations.



The Late David Ives Bushnell.
(See Obituary, Page 765.)

He was one of the early presidents of the American Seed Trade Association, and was recently made an honorary member of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association.

His seventy-fifth birthday was Tuesday, April 26, of this year and he was at his office on the morning of that day receiving the congratulations of his friends. While he had been in failing health for several years, his condition was such that it was hoped that he would live for some years more to enjoy his new home just recently purchased and into which he was to have moved the day of his death.

His was a lovable character. A big hearted man, never happier than when doing some kind act for a friend in need. He was more like a father than an employer to those working for him. They all loved him in a way that words cannot express.

He was laid to rest Sunday, May 1, and his funeral was attended by a host of friends and fellow seedsmen from other cities.

His loss is a sad blow to all.

The firm of D. I. Bushnell & Company, which was established in 1872 will be continued under the efficient management of his surviving partner, Robert W. Pommer, who has been closely associated with him in business for over forty years, assisted by employees, nearly all of whom have been with the company for a great many years.

Mr. Pommer wishes to thank all his friends for their kind messages and letters expressing their sympathy in the great loss he has sustained in the death of his dearest friend and business associate.

David I. Bushnell Resolution.

The following resolution was adopted at the annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association held in Omaha, Neb., April 30:

DAVID I. BUSHNELL—IN MEMORIAM.

The seed trade suffered a distinct loss in the passing away of our friend David I. Bushnell of St. Louis, Mo., on April 28.

He was a very active member of many associations and always had a keen interest in the advancement of the trade. Few men have had so wide an acquaintance among the seedsmen. Those of us who had opportunity to enjoy close personal contact with him appreciate most what a rare type of splendid manhood he was and his memory will be cherished forever in our hearts.

His life was a real benediction to all who knew him.

French Bulb Prices.

As is well known to American wholesalers, and most American users, the preliminary values of Paper White and other French grown narcissus, lily bulbs and Roman hyacinths are tentatively established by a long time organization known as a growers' syndicate at Ollioules, France. This meeting occurred Sunday, April 24, and the first staple advices indicate that these growers are attempting to fix a price on the crop of Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora on all bulbs measuring 13 centimeters and upwards, of 150 francs per

"Say It With Flowers"

We have been working for several years perfecting stocks and are now able to assist you in giving the flower buying public what they are calling for; the beautiful pastel shades of delicate pinks, tyrian rose, fiery cerise and an endless list of pleasing shades in a New Type of immense size and unusual petalage the DAHLIA FLOWERED ZINNIA. This type is popularizing the Zinnia.

We have also introduced the Picotee, the Victory Quilled and a rich Golden Yellow called "Buttercup." These are distinctive and attractive as cut flowers.

We have also on the market the long stemmed Beauty Type of Aster and next year will have an Early Flowering Aster in this type for you.

We also recommend our Selected Strains of Cregos and American Branching, our Fancy Strains of Half Dwarf Cineraria, Calendula, Candytuft, the New Double Cosmos, White, Pink and Crimson; Giant Zinnia in fifteen distinct shades and many other reselected strains for florists.

We are growers and sell only in bulk but all reliable seedsmen carry—thousand, and for Narcissus Grand Soleil d' Or, 400 francs per thousand.

Since these growers do not market their stocks in America, but sell them principally to local jobbers and importers, either French concerns or Dutch houses operating in and exporting from that district, such jobbers must add their margin to the preliminary prices which they pay the grower and make their profit in re-assorting the crop, selling both the 13 centimeter grade and the 14 centimeter grade separately. Hence, to make a typical illustration, a jobber buying an average lot of 2,000 bulbs and re-assorting them, selling the two grades mentioned separately, the original cost of 2,000 bulbs would be 300 francs. From these could ordinarily be assorted 1,400 bulbs which might sell at a 10 per cent advance, say for 165 francs per thousand. The other 600 bulbs in an ordinary season might measure 14 centimeters, and bring a proportionate price of 180 francs per thousand, thus in the handling of this lot of 2,000 bulbs costing 150 francs per thousand the profit for the jobber would be 42 francs, a trifle over 15 per cent, providing he pays the grower the present asking price of the syndicate and can secure buyers in America and Europe who are willing to pay the above prices of 165 francs and 180 francs per thousand for the two sizes mentioned.

However, the question of the willingness of American or continental buyres to purchase the crop at these advanced prices, which are 50 per cent above those of a year ago, is an open one, and so far the indications are that no American importers will agree to such advance.

That there is an average good crop of these bulbs in France is generally admitted. Why producers should attempt to advance their prices 50 per cent is not yet understood in America.

A commercial scout, representing one of the leading French export jobbers, made a four weeks trip through leading American cities, presumably to report in the south of France as to prospective demands in America and the disposition and ability of the florists here to purchase these stocks. Whether this individual can have concluded from his visit that the American trade is prepared for a 50 per cent advance, is not as yet known, nor has he consented to advise American dealers as to his findings.

It is more than probable that the French grower, in giving this extravagant advance to his price demand has set his mind more on the continental traditions of the willingness of the American buyer to pay any old price, rather than the actual financial condition and ability of the American seedsmen and florists buyers. He has also perhaps been influenced by the high bids for his product at the close of the past season.

Since these bulb opening figures set by the growers' syndicate, no French or Dutch jobbers have as yet cut prices materially. The minimum to date for the size 13 centimeters has been 155 francs per thousand, and for the size 14 centimeters the minimum has been 175 francs. Some American houses have cabled offers of 100 francs for 13 centimeters, and for the 14 centimeter size, 135 francs. To these offers at this date, May 3, no acceptances have been received.

The Southern France Horticultural Journal of early April contains several vigorous letters from contributors arguing for and against the increased prices.

If the suggested prices of April 24 are maintained, the increased cost to the American consumer will be $3.75 to $5.25 per thousand.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., Vice-President, John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

LANDSCAPE gardeners report business, in general, not equal to that of last year.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Levi S. Yeomans, well known nurseryman, died recently at his home near this city, age 81 years.

BEAVER FALLS, N.Y.—The Northern New York Utilities, Inc., planted 100,000 spruce trees this spring, which is part of a comprehensive plan to reforest its cutover timber tracts.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The United States Department of Agriculture is making a survey of the nut tree plantations in this section, with the hope of greatly increasing production in the future.

EAST LANSING, MICH.—A Norway pine has been shipped from the nurseries of the Michigan Agricultural College to Exhibition park, Los Angeles, Calif., to represent this state in the forest of states being established near that city.

DAYTON, O. The Drexel Park Greenhouse Co., has been incorporated with a capital of $20,000 to grow and sell plants, flowers, shrubs, trees, etc. The incorporators are W. H. Hoffman, Cora Hoffman, Lee E. Hoffman, Anna M. Hoffman and E. E. Kumler.

IN a bulletin issued for the federal and state forest services by the National Board of Fire Underwriters recently, it is brought out that forest fires sweeping over 56,488,307 acres in 45 states caused a damage of $85,715,747, from 1916 to 1920 inclusive.

WE are in receipt of the proceedings of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents, held at Hamilton, Ont., September 7-10, 1920. W. B. Jones, Highwood cemetery, Pittsburgh, Pa., is secretary of the association.

Door County Fruit Safe.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis.—Fruit orchards of Door county, including thousands of acres of cherries, apples, strawberries, plums and small fruits, passed through the last few weeks undamaged by storms and frosts and growers are predicting a bumper crop. The snowstorms did not reach Door county and the frosts that damaged crops in other fruit areas were not bad enough to hurt the fruit trees here.

Biennials and Hardy Perennials

Many of the biennials and perennials are now as important to florists as Asters, Sweet Peas, Verbenas, etc., are among the annuals. Some can be forced, such as Delphinium, Canterbury Bells, etc., while many others sell as readily as Geraniums if grown in pots, not to speak of the cut-flower sorts, such as Coreopsis, Gypsophila, Chrysanthemum, Shasta Daisy, Physostegia, etc. They are really needed in every florist's establishment that caters to the better-class of trade. The demand for them is increasing.

THE annual value of the strawberry crop in the United States is said to be about $18,000,000.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—At a recent committee meeting of the Horticultural Society, plans were made to hold a fruit and vegetable show in the autumn, when farmers will be invited to display their products.

Vegetable Census's Summary.

The United States department of commerce through the director of the census has announced, subject to correction, preliminary figures from the census of agriculture of vegetables produced in 1919, in 33 states.

The total acreage of Irish or white potatoes is 2,186,878 which yielded 202,265,181 bushels. The value of this crop was $513,615,071. In sweet potatoes 311,007 acres were planted, making a yield of 31,959,463 bushels and a total value of $51,213,813.

There were 8,197 acres planted to asparagus, the value of the crop amounting to $1,727,511.

Beans had an acreage of 50,803 and were worth $5,625,708.

There were 484,587 acres planted in cabbage with a value of $14,422,306.

Cantaloupes valued at $5,244,166 had planted 38,597 acres.

The total acreage of celery was 10,424 worth $6,552,427.

Cucumbers had 35,635 acres planted with a total value of $5,093,005.

The value of the lettuce crop amounted to $5,628,241 with an acreage of 12,138.

There were 37,788 acres planted to onions valued at $13,273,952.

Green peas had a value of $5,067,423 with 80,984 acres.

The total value of spinach was $660,467 with 4,073 acres planted.

The acreage of sweet corn was 178,622 with a value of $13,002,072.

Tomatoes were worth $26,315,925 with 225,226 acres planted.

There were 56,762 acres of watermelons valued at $5,173,361.

Miscellaneous vegetables not listed separately had a value of $222,738,607 with 1,059,392 acres planted.

Peppers.

Sweet peppers, sometimes called Chinese peppers and Mammoth peppers, are becoming more and more popular as a crop for planting in the home garden. Only a few plants are necessary to supply the family of average size with all the peppers they will want, but it takes good land and extra care to produce peppers of high quality, say garden specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Pepper plants are easily injured by cold and the plants should be started in the house, in a hotbed, or in a greenhouse. Perhaps the best way is to purchase a dozen or so good plants from some seedsman or plant grower.

In preparing the soil for peppers, first spade or fork the land over to a depth of 8 or 9 inches. At the same time work in some well-rotted manure and a large handful of commercial fertilizer to each square yard of space. This should be done at least a week before the pepper plants are set out. Then loosen the surface thoroughly at the time the plants are set. Frequent cultivation is necessary, and an occasional application of weak liquid manure to the soil around the plants will keep them growing vigorously. Large, tender peppers can only be produced on thrifty plants, and in order to keep the plants producing all the peppers should be kept picked off and none allowed to ripen.

Ruby King, Chinese Giant and Large Bell or Bull Nose are among the leading varieties of the large sweet peppers. Pimento peppers are mild in flavor and are largely grown in the southern states for making the pimento pickled peppers. The pimento peppers can be used in the same way as the regular sweet peppers or they may be left on the plants until red ripe, then used for canning.

Ageratum Fraseri

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅞ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.
2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $ 6.00 per 100.

Dr. Tracy's Retirement.

By R. A. Oakley, in Charge of the Office of Seed Distribution, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

His Life and Work.

The occasion of Dr. Will W. Tracy's retirement from active service in the United States Department of Agriculture affords an opportunity to his host of friends to congratulate him on his many years of devotion to the study of plants. Some of us who have had the good fortune to know him intimately have a compelling desire to give those who are less fortunate a better view of his useful and interesting life.

William Warner Tracy was born in Hudson, O., May 2, 1845. He is the son of Stephen Tracy, who was fifth in descent from the Stephen Tracy who came to America in 1621, and of Alice Dana, a great grand-daughter of General Israel Putnam. His parents moved to Hartford, Vt., while he was yet a small boy and shortly afterward he took up work in the nurseries of T. C. Maxwell & Son, Geneva, N. Y. But this was by no means Dr. Tracy's first training in plant culture, nor was it the beginning of his insatiable love for plants. His first lessons in horticulture were taken in his infancy at home and his love for plants was a parental legacy. His mother had a local reputation because of her fondness for and exceptional success in the culture of flowers and when she returned from China, where she went as a missionary with his father shortly after their marriage, she brought back many new and interesting plants with her

When scarcely five years old Dr. Tracy possessed a love for plants that was nothing less than intense. He could not bear to see them broken or injured. To him a plant destroyed was an irreparable loss and even yet his enthusiasm has not reached its climax.

As a boy he spent his vacation and most of his spare time planting trees and other perennials along the roadways and public places in the vicinity of Andover, Mass. When he moved to Detroit he carried his tree-planting ideas with him and he was directly responsible for the thousands of fine American elms that are now growing in the center of the city bordering on Woodward avenue. The trees constitute an enduring and useful monument to him.

The civil war found Dr. Tracy with equal devotion to his country. On September 12, 1862, he volunteered in Co. "D" 45th Mass. Inf., and served with that organization until September 2, 1863, when he was invalided home. He had served with his company only three months when he was offered a commission as first lieutenant. This he refused because he thought he could render a greater service as a private in the ranks.

After regaining his health, he entered the Michigan Agricultural College, from which institution he was graduated in 1867 with the degree of bachelor of science. His knowledge of plants soon became known to the college authorities, and shortly after he entered, he was given charge of the college grounds and made instructor in horticulture. While holding this position he laid out and planted the college campus, which is indeed a creditable piece of landscape gardening. Immediately upon graduation he was appointed professor of horticulture. This attests eloquently to his record as a student and to his knowledge of the subject he had chosen for his life work. Ill health made it necessary for him to resign his professorship, and from college he went to Old Mission, Grand Traverse county, Michigan, where he purchased a home and set out a large apple and peach orchard. These orchards were among the first in that part of the state, and the apple orchard is in existence to this day.

While at Old Mission, Dr. Tracy contracted with D. M. Ferry & Company to grow seed peas. This fact, while commonplace in itself, had an important bearing on the future of the company. It was his unusual knowledge of peas and plants generally that attracted the attention of the company to him and convinced them of the desirability of securing his services. This they did in 1879. Dr. Tracy's first work with D. M. Ferry & Company was to organize the trial ground and green house department, and upon this task he entered with great enthusiasm. It is needless to say he accomplished most excellent results, which have remained a permanent asset of the company.

Dr. Tracy was untiring in his work. He knew no other recreation and never grew weary except when it partook of the nature of routine or commonplace. When this condition obtained, the only stimulant he needed was a new line of investigation. It has often been said of him that he paid too little attention to his physical comfort, and even now in his retirement, this characteristic is still much in evidence.

At Ferry's.

During his work with D. M. Ferry & Company, Dr. Tracy became the foremost authority in America on varieties of vegetables. In speaking of him recently a well known member of the present firm of D. M. Ferry & Company said:

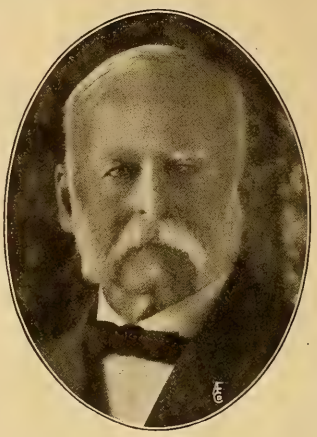
"For many years Dr. Tracy wrote the catalogue for D. M. Ferry & Company, and was responsible for all its descriptions. It was his pride to make the catalogue accurate and less a sales argument than a reliable book of reference. To him a fact of nature was a fact and as such worthy of all reverence. Moreover, he could see beyond the law to the controlling of the beneficent power with which it was his highest aim to be in accord. A yellow primrose was to him never a pink or a green primrose, but it was a million times more than a yellow flower. He called all growing things by their first name, and they answered joyfully to his call. He might forget where he lived, but he could recall instantly all the characteristics of the most unimportant vegetable.

"Perhaps Dr. Tracy's greatest contribution to science, and one which has never been properly recognized, was his insistence early and late on single plant selection as the only way to fix a type. As early as 1882, and long before Nilsson published his book, Dr. Tracy was putting this theory into profitable practice. He was the pioneer in America, and perhaps in the world, in the adoption of the scientific inbreeding of plants. He left a lasting impression, not only upon the methods and framework of the organization, but upon the lives of those with whom he worked. I am only one of the many who revere his character and are profoundly grateful for his help."

It was with mutual regret that Dr. Tracy's connection with D. M. Ferry & Company was severed, but an unusual opportunity for studying plants presented itself in another field, and in 1903 he accepted an appointment in the United States Department of Agriculture to take charge of vegetable variety investigations. How well he succeeded with this work is a matter of very general knowledge, and if there were need for adducing proof of his success, there are two facts that offer proof sufficient: The degree of doctor of science conferred upon him by the Michigan Agricultural College, his alma mater, attests to the regard with which scientific workers have appraised his accomplishments, and his election to honorary membership in the American Seed Trade Association is ample evidence of seedsmen's valuation of them.

Nor are his associates in the Department of Agriculture lacking in their appreciation of Dr. Tracy and what he has done in his chosen field. Prof. L. C. Corbett, in charge of the office of horticultural and pomological investigations in the Bureau of Plant Industry, says:

"I wish to enter my small contribution of satisfaction for having been associated so intimately with Dr. Tracy for a number of years. A great part of the value of such a man to society is in his own personality which cannot be conveyed through the written page. To appreciate such people one must be intimately associated with them. Truly Dr. Tracy is one of nature's noblemen and no one who came intimately in contact with him could escape being the better for the contact. We have the satisfaction, however, that his spirit and example will live long after his service to this generation may be completed, for he has set an example to the seed trade of America which will ever stand as its guiding principle."



William W Tracy.

Having known him intimately for years, Dr. Wm. A. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, wrote Dr. Tracy:

"In view of your retirement from active service I wish to express my high personal appreciation of the service you have rendered to American horticulture, both during the period of your connection with this department and prior to your entrance to the Bureau of Plant Industry.

"As a student at Michigan Agricultural College, and later as a new and youthful member of the Michigan Horticultural Society, I very distinctly recall the pleasure which your hearers experienced when they had opportunity to hear you discuss various features of vegetable growing, and especially those questions of varietal identity, characteristics and behavior of vegetables regarding which so little exact and useful information was available in the books or obtainable in the college courses.

"I trust that in your perhaps less strenuous experience after retirement you will still find opportunity to carry on your studies and to report for the benefit of others that wealth of information derived from keen and accurate observation which your associates, and others in the field of horticulture, have come to value so highly when available to them for consideration.

"Personally, also, permit me to express my high appreciation of the ethical and scientific standards which you have steadily maintained in your work. They have been and are a most potent influence for the guidance of workers in this interesting but difficult field of research.

"I trust that the new status upon which you are entering will prove congenial and intellectually and spiritually profitable for many years to come."

And Secretary of Agriculture, Henry C. Wallace, adds in his letter to Dr. Tracy on the occasion of his retirement:

"May I also personally express the hope, in which I am sure your former associates join, that you may enjoy to the full the rest you have earned by your long service and devotion to duty. I trust that the coming years will deal kindly with you and yours."

There are literally scores of others in the department who heartily concur in these sentiments and expressions of commendation.

For more than the decade and a half that he has been with the Bureau of Plant Industry, Dr. Tracy's advice and assistance in all matters pertaining to vegetable varieties have been sought for from nearly everyone who was interested in the subject. Whether it was a question involving culture, relative merits or nomenclature, he was asked to answer it, and he always answered so well that more than one has been led to remark on the uncanny prolific writer, Dr. Tracy is the author prolific writer, Dr. Tracy is the author of several valuable treatises on vegetables. These include books and department bulletins and they are accepted as being thoroughly authoritative. It is only to be regretted that the wonderful store of knowledge he carries forward with him from day to day cannot fully be set down for the benefit of present day and future workers.

In looking back over his long and useful career, it is an easy matter to understand upon what his success has been builded: Honesty in his dealings with his fellowmen; implicit faith in humanity; untiring enthusiasm and devotion to his chosen subject; and supreme regard for truth in all things. These have made up for him a way of life.

Dr. Tracy has retired from active service and he well deserves the vacation he now proposes to take, but he is sure to be called upon from time to time for a measure of that help which he has so freely given in the past.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

How does the front of the store look? It is most important that decoratively, with growing plants and flowers, and at times other decorative material, it should at all times present such an attractive appearance as to at once catch the eye of the passers-by, and even those in the street cars, who frequently turn their heads to take a second look at a window that has attracted their attention.

It is awning time for the sunny side of the streets, and if last year's shade cloth is faded out and forlorn, get a new one. Dress makes the store, just the same as fine clothes make the gentleman, at least in outward appearance, and it is this well-dressed look that makes the store inviting, particularly to strangers. A shabby store front is a great handicap to any business and inexcusable when it is so easily overcome.

Out-door shrubbery is now at its best and can be used to advantage in window and store decoration. A handsome large wreath made of spirea will make a showy window piece, while snowballs can be worked into set pieces, over which can be traced other choice flowers in color schemes that will make very artistic effects. Such pieces are frequently sold for immediate delivery or orders are taken for something similar.

Memorial Day should be featured and given prominence and all the advertising possible, so as to keep it in the minds of the people. A handsome magnolia or oak leaved wreath or two, show pieces, decorated with tricolor ribbons and a flag or two, and the date, May 30, on a small shield worked in, can be found place for on the walls or on easels, and add quite a decorative effect to the store. Cut-flower boxes, particularly those being sent as gifts, should have a decorative touch on the outside with a spray or two which can be slipped under the tying cord or tape. It costs but a trifle, makes a nice finish and is sure to be appreciated and commented on.

A nicely filled plant basket, hamper and wicker fern stand are good stock features, and when neatly trimmed with ribbons they are very attractive and especially suitable as gifts.

Callas have had a great run the past season and appear to be more popular than ever. They are used mostly for decorative and for funeral work. Their thick, fleshy stems make a heavy, clumsy handle when over a dozen are tied together. In a large double spray where four dozen or more are required, a number can be stemmed on long sticks and worked in as the bunching goes on, or placed in afterward, particularly where the stems are fastened at the center. Before this center is finished it is well to put on the ribbon, which can be made to take the place of several flowers.

It is the custom in many stores to fill the flowers of callas with violets, lavender, sweet peas, heliotrope, etc. The pure white flower with its beautiful, graceful curves, is one of the most beautiful of the lily family and stuffing it with any other flower is a sacrilege, entirely spoiling its beauty. When such other flowers are desired it is much better to arrange them in a cluster at the stems where the ribbon is tied, where an even better color contrast is obtained with the white and graceful form of the lilies. Calla leaves are the best foliage to use with them; they do not last long however and should be thoroughly soaked in water before made up.

This is the season of popular prices; flowers are plentiful and it is necessary to keep them moving. Run sales of those that are most plentiful in the market. The little vase baskets, and the small flower box filled with all of a kind, should have a table or two in the store and a good display in the window. Do not forget the price card, for this silent salesman is what makes them go. For those who like to have something different for their customers a stock of such plants as Pandanus veitchii, cocus, kentias, crotons and marantas, together with some of the variegated ferns, all in three inch, or, better, two and a half inch pots, will be found valuable in the making up of choice wreaths. These plants taken out of the pots and roots washed and mossed or the plants cut off and stemmed in beautifully with flowers, gives the pieces quite a distinctive appearance.

A display of made up corsages with their ribbons and pins on a show table in the window are sure to attract attention. Frequent groups of this kind will work up a trade in these arrangements that will more than pay for those not sold, with the prestige for the artistic work as publicity. Peonies are now in the market and while not very satisfactory as a cut flower they are in such demand for Memorial Day that it is well to feature them from now on. They can be arranged very prettily in vases or vase baskets but must be well soaked in deep jars of water before using. All surplus foliage should be removed and flowers kept from direct draft.

Run a window of snapdragon, it is at its height and can be displayed with good decorative effect, in large vase baskets with the handles tied with ribbons. The stock can be sold from these baskets the same as from jars, while short stemmed spikes in small vase baskets will be popular with all flower lovers.

Store Philosophy.

There is nothing more important in store management than to have the orders out on time. Ten A. M. does not mean 10:30 or 11 or possibly later. The angry call over the telephone for the flowers that should have been delivered an hour before, has little of the good will ring that is so necessary to the life of the business. Orders received in such a mood are seldom satisfactory. The time of delivery should stand out boldly on every order sheet and be carried out to the minute.

All boxes of cut flowers, whether for home consumption or sent as gifts, should have some pretense of arrangement. A dozen carnations will look much better if divided, with flowers at each end and stems toward the center, covered with a spray of greens, primroses or other flower; just a touch to dress it up a little. Where the price will warrant there can be more elaboration and an artistic finish with pansies, violets, pussy willow sprays or tasselled ferns will add to the appearance. It is a good plan when long stemmed buds come near the ends of the box, to tie the stems in the center, which holds them in place. A folded piece of wax paper should be used across the stems as a cushion for the tape. This support is not seen until the top fringe of flowers have been removed. It is the first sight of the interior that pleases, and this should be made as artistic as possible. A sheet of white or other colored paper may be tied as a flaring cornucopia around any long stemmed flowers using shades that will contrast as pink with blue, white with yellow or all white. At the stems tied outside with a small tasseled cord or tape the color of the flower, a small bunch of pansies, a few Sweetheart roses, or a little knot of any flowers or greens tied in the cord gives a nice finish. Such a package is artistic and saves a more expensive box. A card stating that these flowers should be immediately placed in water should be pinned to the cover.

Metal clips which cost but a trifle are better package fasteners than pins, not being so apt to slip out; a box of these behind every counter will be found useful every hour in the day.

Pot coverings are most essential in every up-to-date shop, of these there should be a stock made up in various sizes, on hand at all times. Fitted into one another they will take but little room and will be of great assistance on a busy day.

Keep up all standard stocks, it is very annoying to find just when it is needed to fill out an inscription, that this or that letter is missing, the last pair of palms of a size were used up yesterday, or the wheat sheaves are all gone. Possibly there is no box large enough to hold the hurriedly made design that must make a certain train, etc. If there is yet time to get all these from the supply house, there is the extra expense of telephone carfare, time of messenger or extra trip for the car, all of which could have been avoided by a little checking up with store supplies.

PLANNING THE DAY'S WORK.

It is astonishing how much more can be accomplished by planning the day's work ahead. Great progress is possible by laying in the necessary stocks and having them at their best when the time comes. The only available buds the next morning, may be close and tight requiring twice as many for the same effect.

Half hours and hours may be saved by economies in well planned deliveries. With the early morning rush over, the other items in store arrangements, or window decoration, can proceed immediately, and the display is soon ready for early shoppers inspection.

A few choice pots or jardinieres filled with plants add a decorative appearance to the store that is worth far more than they cost. They are also salable the oft repeated phrase, "we have no demand for anything like that in our store" nothwithstanding. Well displayed articles showing their decorative value and the uses to which they may be put sell themselves, and make room for others.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.

If during the day anything goes wrong from the customer's standpoint. see that it is righted at once; the longer you hold an error to be corrected, the harder it will be to explain. When vehement complaints are made do not interrupt, wait until you get the whole story, then handle the matter as diplomatically as possible, excuses will not count, but anything you can do to make it right, should send customers away in a good humor.

A full line of delivery boxes and baskets made for the purpose, while expensive, will in the end be found most economical. To grab up new cut flower boxes for the delivery of sprays and designs, renders them unsuitable for their proper use. Large, well made boxes or baskets that will hold several pieces can be packed together in a car without damage and are useful for a long time.

System in deliveries avoids expense. A boy and car fare may take the place of a long trip for the car. If there are definite delivery hours, clerks can state that orders will be sent at these periods, which in the majority of cases will be satisfactory. In the accumulation, the orders can then be routed for much more economical delivery.

There is a great saving in the proper handling of ribbons and chiffons. Standard lengths should be established for sprays and wreaths, handles of baskets and also for corsages. To grab a bolt out of the case on a busy day and guess at the amount required, is very wasteful. A bolt cut at a time, the lengths hung over spindles in the case, where they are ready for instant use is a much better plan and insures that only the proper amount is used.

Gude Honored.

William F. Gude, of Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., was appointed third member of the District of Columbia rent commission by President Harding April 27. It is expected that he will take office immediately following confirmation by the senate.

Mr. Gude was born at Lynchburg, Va., in 1868. When but 21 years of age he engaged in the florist business in Washington, which he has continued so successfully. He is a director in the National Metropolitan bank, and member of the Board of Trade, that city. He holds the honor of being a member of every inaugural committee since President Cleveland's administration. Mr. Gude had charge of the selected service men's parade in 1918, and is at present vice chairman of the citizens' committee entertaining confederate veterans. He recently acted as a delegate for the Society of American Florists a session of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Atlantic City, N. J.

His appointment to this important position is highly approved by the members of the rent commission, tenants and business men, because of his integrity and long business career.

PLANT NOTES.

Gladioli.

The gladioli that are being forced for spring blooming will soon begin to open their flowers, and to have good clean stock they will require attention. The spikes should first of all be kept erect, for if they get bent and crooked half their value is gone, and this will occur very quickly on the bright, sunny days when the plants lean over, so they should be kept tied either to stakes or wires to prevent this. The spike should be cut when the first flower opens and placed in water and the other flowers opened in the office or store-room. These flowers spot very quickly if water is sprinkled upon them in the greenhouse, and at this season of the year syringing on bright days is a necessity or the red spider is sure to obtain a foothold, and if these pests become once well established it is almost impossible to eradicate them. Considerable discussion is often heard as to whether the corms of gladiolus forced are of any value another year. If the plant is not cut too far down on the stem and the corms are given an opportunity to thoroughly ripen, there is no doubt but that the bulbs may be grown another year and good results obtained, but if the plant is cut off clear down to the ground the corm has no chance to make its full growth or to ripen, and the corms will be practically worthless. Corms that are forced this year and the spike cut so as to leave three or more leaves, if properly ripened, can be planted outside another year and the following year first-class corms will be the result. The Gladiolus Colvillei can be forced year after year if grown properly.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

Small stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are now a necessity with all plantsmen, for they are freely used in fern dishes and in plant baskets, being very satisfactory plants for house culture. Fresh seed can now be obtained and the stock grown on through the summer, which will make fine stock for the next winter. The seed will germinate more readily and evenly if soaked in lukewarm water placed in a warm location for 24 hours before planting. Instead of sowing the seed broadcast, it is better to sow them about three-quarters of an inch apart, and they can then be allowed to remain in the flats until they are strong enough to transplant. Do not cover the seed too deeply; an eighth of an inch of soil sifted over the seed is ample. The first potting must be carefully done, for they make a long tap root, with very few small roots, and the soil does not adhere to it, and in the young stage this root is easily broken. A warm house with plenty of moisture and careful watering with a slight shade is all they require after being potted. Over-watering will always cause the fronds to take on a yellowish hue.

WINDOW BOX IN CHICAGO.
See Issue of May 7

Lorraine Begonias.

The plants of the Lorraine Begonia and its varieties, both the young rooted stock and the older plants, will now begin to make active growth. There is still time to propagate much stock; many growers prefer the May-rooted plants to those propagated earlier, for the plants start right off into growth at this time, while those rooted earlier grow very slowly during the late winter and early spring months. The young shoots that break from the old plants make fine cuttings at this time, and if the plants are in good health are just as good as the leaf cuttings made earlier. As soon as rooted they should be potted in a light, fibrous loam in 2¼-inch pots and placed in a light, well ventilated house, but should be protected from all chilling drafts. They cannot be successfully grown in a stuffy, moist temperature, and to have strong, healthy plants, should not be forced in too warm a temperature. They will require a house in which the night temperature does not fall below 60° and should be given all the air possible without chilling during pleasant, bright days, carefully avoiding drafts. They will need to be watered carefully, for the roots are very fine and are growing slowly yet, and over-watering quickly shows in the growth of the plant. It is now a good time to procure young stock if the grower is not supplied, for those making a specialty of this plant will have the best of stock at this time.

CONVENTION TRAVEL ARRANGEMENTS.

That a one and one-half rate of fare for visitors to the convention in Washington, D. C., August 16-18, will be made by the Trunk Line Association is now practically assured. The association covering New York State (east of and including Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Susension Bridge and Salamanca), New Jersey, Pennsylvania (east of and including Erie, Oil City, and Pittsburgh), Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and West Virginia (east of and including Wheeling, Parkersburg, Kenova, Orange and Norfolk, has already provided for the selling of tickets on the certificate plan, and the other associations, without doubt, will fall into line.

Identification certificates will be issued to members by our society, through the secretary's office, applicable to members of our organization and dependent members of their families only, and tickets will be good via the same route in both directions only. The tickets will be sold from August 16-19, and will be validated at Washington by agents at the regular ticket offices of the lines over which the tickets read into Washington, August 16-19, and when validated, the tickets will be good for return, leaving Washington only on the date of validation, and passengers must reach original starting point within the transit limit shown on tickets, but in no case later than midnight of August 21. One certificate will suffice for each member, and will include privileges for dependent members of his or her family; in other words, separate certificates will not be necessary.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

The list of exhibitors in the trade exhibition was augmented last week by reservations as follows:

United Bulb Growers, New York.
A. L. Randall Co. Chicago.

OFFICIAL PROGRAMME.

The official programme covering the convention proceedings is having the careful attention of those in charge of it, and as present drafted, bids fair to eclipse in interest all previous programmes. If any member has a suggestion to make as to features for it, he is invited to send them in to the secretary, and consideration of them is assured.

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Mrs. George Asmus, Chicago, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, is sparing no effort to make the assistance to be rendered by her organization at the convention highly valuable to the society. Washington is a city which ladies take delight in visiting, and there is so much to see, that there is opportunity for a great deal of service by the ladies of this organization, and with the help of the Washington local organization of ladies, every lady visitor will be well entertained and taken care of while the masculine element is engaged in convention duties.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

The drive for doubling the society's membership is now on, and the committee in charge of it is very hopeful of success. Letters and printed matter are going out arguing support in this most worthy proceeding, and every member should make a zealous attempt to live up to the slogan of the drive: "Every member get a member."

Members of the society who have mislaid their bills for dues or neglected to make remittances covering them are reminded that the society has need of the funds, especially now that its expenses are provided for under the budget system, which depends upon this source for the operating expenses in connection with our work.

CLEVELAND NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

With a subscription guarantee to this fund of $300 from Max Schling, New York, the fund is closed with a total of $20,232. Other subscription guarantees to be reported are the following:

C. D. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla.	$ 5.00
Aug. C. Reicher, Michigan City, Ind.	10.00
Fred A. Lewis, Lockport, N. Y.	5.00
Chas. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kans.	100.00
Madsen & Christensen, Wood-Ridge, N. J.	100.00

A meeting of the local executive committee will be held in Cleveland, O., May 19. The floor plan of the show, including the plan of the areas available for the trade exhibition to be held in connection with it, is now practically settled, and copies of it will be sent out as soon as possible after the committee meeting in Cleveland.

The publicity committee is very anxious to resume the national advertising at the earliest possible time. Every week lost now diminishes the prestige obtained through the previous work of the campaign. The condition of the florist trade just now would seem to suggest that a strong publicity effort should be put forth, and without delay. With the many problems now calling for consideration among our vast public, flowers are not likely to come to mind as a media for the carriage of sentiment unless reminders of their use are constantly appearing. The committee therefore, urges the necessity of personal subscriptions from the trade to enable them to continue their work. Any florist who has not already subscribed will benefit himself as well as the entire industry by sending in such amount as he feels he can afford to the secretary—the sooner the better.

U. S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Society of American Florists has been advised of its election to membership in this important trade body, and we are called upon for the appointment of a national counsellor to represent the florist industry in the United States Chamber of Commerce. A national counsellor is chairman of the delegations from his organization at annual and spring meetings of the chamber, and serves in an advisory capacity to the chamber's board of directors. His duties are important, as he becomes an active agent, inquiring as to the questions vital to his organization that should be brought before the chamber, which operates as a federation of American business and derives its vitality as an initiating body from its constituent members. In the chamber, the society will have a valuable aid whenever vigorous and strong backing is required in any movement of national importance to our industry. The appointment of a counsellor is now under consideration by President Roland.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Flower Growers' Association

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.

Special Notice—To all members of the St. Louis district branch of the National Flower Growers' Association:

The meeting of the executive committee of the district will be held at Edwardsville, Ill., Tuesday, May 17, at 1 p. m. The session will be held at the establishment of the Woodland Gardens, on invitation of Henry Blixen. Any member of this district who has anything to offer that would benefit it or its members should appear before this meeting or advise the secretary to bring it up for discussion.

The purchasing, the pot plant growers, the retail growers and the auditing committees all will have interesting reports to make. All members of the executive committee and those of other committees are earnestly requested to attend this session and advise the secretary in time.

J. J. BENEKE, Sec'y.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club held its monthly meeting in the Engineering building, May 9, President Hendrickson in the chair. There was a good attendancae and in addition to routine business two lectures made the evening enjoyable for the members. On the call for reports of committees, C. Lowther reported for the committee on transportation to the Society of American Florists' Convention at Washington, D. C. Secretary Young also read a letter relating to the matter. A one and one-half fare has been granted for the round trip, tickets good from August 14 to 21. There was a short discussion in which C. H. Totty, Frank Traendly and others participated. Mr. Totty stated that many members would make the trip by automobile. It was finally decided that those going by train would leave the Pennsylvania terminal August 15 at 10 a. m.

C. H. Totty, chairman of the flower show committee, reported progress. He announced that in the near future new quarters must be secured for the annual flower shows. Newton N. Porter, president of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce, addressed the meeting. He explained the functions of the organization, which are to promote the commerce and industry of the state and to take an interest in public questions affecting the same. Among other good works, it has earnestly supported the movement for a state constabulary. He named various other activities of the chamber. F. F. Rockwell of the Seabrook farm, Bridgeton, N. J., presented a lecture illustrated with stereopticon views of many interesting features on this great vegetable farm of 4,000 acres.

New members were admitted to the club as follows: Paul E. Atkinson, 7 West 45th street, New York; James Hageruk, 15 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn; Frank S. Bosolvage, 15 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn; Henry J. Appel, PLANT BOXES ON THE PORCH OF A CHICAGO HOME.

Issue of May 7.

Whitestone, N. Y., and Anthony Denis, 314 Lenox avenue, New York.

The following deaths were reported and a committee appointed to prepare suitable resolutions: Alfred Demensey, Flatbush, Brooklyn, a member of the club, Mrs. Percy B. Rigby and B. Hammond Tracy, Jr.

EXHIBITS.

George Schlagel, Brooklyn (S. G. Milosy, gardener), exhibited a collection of orchids and was awarded a silver medal. F. E. Dixon, Elkins Park, Pa., (James Gooder, gardener), displayed orchids and was awarded a silver medal. Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., exhibited anthuriums, named Sergeant Manda receiving also a silver medal. Roman J. Irwin, New York, showed a vase of blue lace flowers (didiscus Caerulea), and a new pink snapdragon. Awarded a vote of thanks. In his call for the next meetiing, Secretary Young included the following:

In keeping with the recommendation of President Hendrickson, there will be a series of "special nights" to induce, if possible, a larger membership from the nearby territory, especially from locations where it would be an easy matter to attend our meetings. The first of the series will be "New Jersey Night." Philip Cox, Joséph Manda, A. M. Henshaw, Arthur Herrington, William C. Duckham, Julius Roehrs, C. H. Totty, Edw. Fiesser, Edward Sceery, Oscar Boehler, the committee having this matter in charge, will undoubtedly "see to it" that there is a large attendance of "Jerseyites."

It will be noted that New Jersey does nobly.

CITY NOTES.

A Paris dispatch published in the New York Tribune of May 8, indicates that the companion of B. Hammond Tracy, Jr., whose drowning is recorded in our obituary column, was Harris Iselin, age 22, son of Henry Iselin, an American banker residing in Paris, who is a nephew of Adrian Iselin, banker, and C. Oliver Iselin, yachtsman, residents of this city. Henry Iselin has resided in Paris for 35 years. It is stated that the sad event occurred while the two were crossing from the Isle of St. Michael to the mainland of Brittany. They attempted to swim, but the tide was too strong for them.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange was held on May 7 and the following officers were elected: John Schneider, president; G. C. C. Schroder, first vice-president; Philip Haas, second vice-president; Victor Darval, secretary, and Chas. Beckman, treasurer. Directors: Philip Haas, Jasper McMullen, G. C. C. Schroder and Victor Darval. Inspectors of elections: A. Golsnor, and Thomas Jackson.

As Madison, N. J., became noted for its carnation growers, and Flatbush, N. Y., for the same reason, so has Hilton, N. J., become famous because of its pansy growers. The pansy gardens of Louis and Carl Becker, the Hausman Bros., John H. Van Ness and S. S. Voorhees & Sons, have this year been well worth a visit on account of the quantity and excellence of the blooms.

At the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wholesale Florists, Inc., May 3, the following officers were elected: H. E. Froment, president; J. K. Allen, vice-president; W. G. Badgley, secretary, and J. J. Coan, treasurer. This corporation conducts the market at Sixth avenue and 18th street.

Curt Thimm, of Roslyn, L. I., shipped a heavy stock of carnations, including many Matchless, to the United Cut Flower Co., for the Mothers' Day trade

Alfred Demeusey, Jr., of Flatbush, will continue the carnation growing business established by Alfred Demeusey, whose death was reported in our issue of May 7. A. F. F.

Co-Operative Advertising.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and H. V. Swenson, Chicago, are making a trip to the Pacific coast in the interest of co-operative advertising, the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, the growers and other affiliated trade organizations. It is intended to make stops at intervening points and arrange several more meetings on the way going out and returning, covering in all about 20 or 25 cities. One meeting was held in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., May 9.

The cities in which meetings so far are scheduled are as follows:

Spokane, Wash.	May 18
Seattle, Wash.	May 23
Portland, Ore.	May 31
San Francisco, Calif.	June 6
Los Angeles, Calif.	June 13
Salt Lake City, Utah	June 20
Denver, Colo.	June 22
Kansas City, Mo.	June 27
Omaha, Neb.	June 29
Des Moines, Iowa	June 30

TWIN CITIES MEETING.

The meeting at the Twin Cities for the organization to do co-operative advertising was held May 9 at the Midway Commercial club rooms and was a big success. The following were elected members of the executive board: Max Kaiser, chairman; O. J. Olson, F. W. Totel, and A. Lauritzen, St. Paul; Oscar Carlson, Hans Rosaker, R. A. Latham, and Hugh Will, Minneapolis, members. The movement was instituted under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, and will be managed by the above named board. Messrs. J. F. Ammann and H. V. Swenson have received enough encouragement from the success obtained in this, their first meeting on the way to the Pacific coast, to convince them that the trip will be a great success.

Cleveland.

The Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association had a $600 advertising campaign for Mothers' Day business, using a 10-inch triple column advertisement in each of the three local papers last week with the result that the commission houses were completely sold out.

Geo. Bate, receiver of the Smith-Fetters Co., reports assets $10,000 and liabilities $13,000, approximately.

SIOUX CITY, IA.—H. V. Schillinger has added one new house 32 by 200 feet.

ORLANDO, FLA.—The Knull Floral Co. has increased its under lath orange plantings, 20 per cent.

MONTREAL, QUE.—The Blue Bird Florist on Bleury street, has re-opened under new management.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Saml. Dunlop, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa., has opened a flower shop in this city.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Dahl Co. has increased the acreage on its river ranch to 300 and will grow more field stock.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Roy Wilcox will have 10 acres of heather (mostly Erica melanthera), for cutting the coming season.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Adam Heitz recently added one greenhouse to his establishment, 150x23 feet, and will specialize in sweet peas and calendulas.

OBITUARY.

B. Hammond Tracy, Jr.

A cablegram from Paris, on May 7, brought the sad news that B. Hammond Tracy, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy of "Cedar Acres," Wenham, Mass., had been drowned. Except that it was stated that his companion, a yachtsman, also lost his life, details were lacking.

Young Mr. Tracy was born in Ypsilanti, Mich., 25 years ago. His parents removed to New England when he was quite young and the greater part of his life was spent there. He entered Harvard university in 1916 and in February of the following year he sailed for France with a Harvard contingent and for two years was in the Harvard ambulance unit. He saw service on the Verdun front, Italy and Salonica. He qualified for aviation and was ready to enter the ranks of professional flyers when the armistice was signed. He returned to France last August to study landscape engineering.

The parents of the young man are so well known in the trade that a great wave of sympathy will swell up toward them. Mrs. Tracy has been president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, and both she and her husband have been regular attendants at the conventions and shows that have been held by the trade. Besides his father and mother the young man is survived by two sisters.

A. F. F.

Mrs. Cora B. Thompson.

Mrs. Cora B. Thompson, president of C. B. Thompson & Co., Louisville, Ky., died at her home on Broadway, that city, May 8. Her death was due to pneumonia which had developed from a severe cold taken while on a business trip to Chicago.

Mrs. Thompson began business in Louisville over 40 years ago when she opened a small store on Jefferson street. By her large acquaintance, genial manners and close attention to business she developed a fine trade, and for many years had flower shops on Fourth avenue. When her husband, Samuel Thompson passed away in 1909, Mrs. Thompson became president of the company. She was at one time president of the Kentucky Society of Florists. During the war she was a familiar figure at Camp Taylor where she visited the hospitals with flowers for the sick. Previous to the war Mrs Thompson had been known for her gifts of flowers to charitable institutions and hospitals.

She is survived by a son Edwin L. Thompson, and a brother L. P. Rammers. H. G. W.

Alfred Hannah.

Alfred Hannah, well known florist of Grand Rapids, Mich., died at his home, 1835 Eastern avenue, that city, April 22, age 70. Mr. Hannah was born in England, coming to this country when 20 years of age. He first resided at Schoolcraft, Mich., moving to Grand Rapids, five years later, where he purchased property and established greenhouses. He was a member of the South Congregational church and of various fraternal orders.

Mr. Hannah is survived by his wife and two sons, George and Wilfred.

VICKSBURG, MISS.—Mrs. Eloise Birdsong, the well known florist, died May 3. Her sister will continue the business.

TINFOIL may be advanced by reason of the increase in the price of lead.

GLADIOLUS growers report stocks well in the ground and in many cases showing in the rows.

NATIONAL HOSPITAL DAY was observed May 12, by the extensive distribution of flowers at many hospitals.

FRANCE will aid the United States in decorating the graves of American heroes in the former country, May 30.

SEVERAL boats carrying the bodies of 960 American soldiers who fell at St. Mihiel passed Namur, Belgium. They were covered with flowers thrown by the people living along the Meuse.

Tulips at New York.

The tulip display at the New York Botanic Garden has been greatly marred by weather conditions. Hot days succeeding cold wet weather caused "fire" in 90 per cent of the flowers, eliminating to a large extent the anticipated opportunity to compare varieties as to color and desirability.

LINSEED oil is now 61 cents per gallon.

COAL demand is still slow notwithstanding the many warnings in circulation against the dangers of delay in purchasing.

Mothers' Day Trade.

The reports received from many centers indicate that the Mothers' Day business this year greatly exceeded that of any previous year. On account of unfavorable weather, the supply of stock in many sections was far short of the demand, especially carnations. There was a greatly increased number of telegraph orders, the value of which appears to have been somewhat higher than usual. Plants sold well.

The general newspapers made their customary claims of profiteering, displaying all the same old ignorance or disregard of conditions. The business of this and other occasions proves that the public now pays little or no attention to the newspapers.

Exchange of Telegrams not Contracts.

An interesting case was recently brought up before a Canadian court, which might establish a precedent in certain business dealings carried on by telegraph or long distance telephone. The main issue of this suit, as brought out in the trial, was "what constitutes a contract."

An American firm was plaintiff in a suit against a firm in Montreal for breach of contract. The contention of the plaintiff was that on December 27, 1918, the defendant made certain quotations on a shipment of tapioca; two days later the plaintiff wired the Canadian firm accepting the price and asking for shipment of "100" or more. The next day the defendant wired the American firm saying that it could not ship "100" but would ship 25 tons of seed and 25 tons of pearl, at a price which was slightly higher than the previous quotations. In the meantime the plaintiff had written a letter to the Canadian firm confirming the previous wire and, as it contended, making the contract binding.

There was some discussion as to whether the figure "100" appearing in the telegram referred to bags or to tons. It seems from the evidence given that the custom has been to quote tapioca on a basis of bag lots. The American firm, however, claimed that it always bought on a basis of tons, since its distribution is on a large scale. A point, however, was brought out by the counsel for the plaintiff that in the answer to the telegraph order the defendant said, "Can not ship 100 but will ship 25 tons of each," referring to seed and pearl tapioca. In the final issue, however, this did not feature, for in the court's finding this point of tons or bags was not mentioned.

After some deliberation the court ruled that by the telegrams which were exchanged between the two companies the contract was not consummated and no definite or legal obligations were laid upon either party; as a result, the action of the plaintiff was dismissed. From this finding it appears that where telegrams such as featured in this case are exchanged between parties doing business no contract is entered into; that letters in writing and signed by the contracting parties are necessary to make the contract binding.

American Rose Society.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The registration of the following variety has been approved by the registration committee of the American Rose Society, and unless objections are received by the secretary within three weeks of publication of this notice, the registration will become permanent.

Name—Silver Wedding. Class, hybrid tea, Parentage, sport of Ophelia. Description. This variety is similar to the parent in all respects, except that the foliage is different, it being the only rose on the market having this very distinctive and pretty foliage, and is therefore superior to its parent. Offered for registration by the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.

JOHN C. WISTER, Sec'y.

American Peony Society.

The next annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held at Boston this year in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The dates fixed are June 18-19, but as the season is extraordinarily early, it may be necessary to set the dates earlier. If any change is made, due notice will be given in these columns. A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., is secretary of the society.

American Iris Society.

The American Iris Society will hold its annual convention and flower show at Columbus, O., May 20-21. Prominent among the members who are expected to attend are John C. Wister, president, Philadelphia, Pa., and Dr. H. A. Gleason, secretary, New York.

Ass'n of American Cemetery Sup'ts.

The next annual convention of the American Association of Cemetery Superintendents will be held at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, Mich., September 13-15.

STOCK SELLING READILY.

The past week showed a considerable increase in business over the preceding one. There was a constant demand for funeral work, and social affairs also helped materially. We are still in the midst of a heavy rose supply with prices low on all varieties. The best grades of Premier and Columbia are to be had at $1.50 per dozen. Mrs. Chas. Russell is selling for $2.50 per bunch of two dozen. Hadley is the best red in the market and the best stock sells for $2.50 per bunch. Elegant Ophelia is also going at low figures. The wholesalers find it a difficult matter to move short and medium grades at any price except to the street merchants. Trist Elegance is scarce, but there is an ample cut of Cecil Brunner, chiefly outdoor grown stock. Ulrich Brunner is plentiful and cheap. The carnation is one flower that is bringing the grower good figures in these days of low prices. So many growers discontinued producing this flower last year that those who did replant are being well repaid for their foresight. The prices of sweet peas are being well maintained. Most of the stock, however, lacks the quality of last year, being off color. Tulips are getting scarce. A splendid lot of iris is now coming in. It is of uncommonly good quality, with four-foot stems and splendid foliage. There is still a good cut of Lilium Giganteum, which is sold at $4.00 per dozen stems, with a good call. Lily of the valley is also in strong demand at $8.00 per hundred. Cattleya Mossiae is in good supply these days and finds a ready market. Gardenias are also showing improvement. The supply of good snapdragons continues small. The spring cut of flowering fruit and shrub blossoms is exhausted. Ranunculus are to be had at reasonable prices and continue very popular. The limited supply of peonies sells readily. Outdoor annuals are arriving on a crowded market. Good flowering plants are a short item. A few azaleas and rhododendrons are about all that is available. A brisk demand for foliage plants is reported from all quarters. Nephrolepis, aspidistras and boxwood seem to be the most popular. There are plenty of ferns and asparagus; also green goods of every description.

NOTES.

Richard Lohrmann, San Raphael, has completed his dahlia plantings for the coming season. He has many new seedlings under observation this year from which he expects some good commercial varieties. Mr. Lohrmann is a very successful dahlia hybridizer, having originated several varieties that have been given prominence in eastern catalogues this spring. He is an active member of the Dahlia Society of California.

At the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association, May 4, arrangements were made for the reception of J. Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago, of the national publicity committee, who will arrive here May 30. Great interest is already being manifested in their visit, and the trade here plans to make their stay a pleasant one.

MacRorie-McLaren Co. have made extensive plantings of young ericas at their San Mateo nurseries this spring. They have many new varieties under cultivation which Daniel MacRorie says are to be prominently featured as pot plants, and good commercial varieties. He reports the plant trade as keeping up exceptionally well.

Chairman H. Plath and his associates of the prize committee of the coming autumn show are busy arranging the preliminary schedule. Many classes are being made for the retailers, who will be large exhibitors. Private gardeners will also find many classes in which to enter their stock.

The out of town demand for carnations was very strong, and, coming on a short market, made prices high, he stated. A concerted effort was being made by the wholesalers to divert attention from the carnation to other seasonable flowers, as being suitable for the occasion.

A fine cut of Bride roses, outdoor grown, is being received by Alfred Serveau. It is seldom we see this once most popular white rose, and when well grown is still one of our most beautiful varieties. Mr. Serveau is also receiving a fine cut of Spencer sweet peas.

Ferrari Bros. greenhouses never looked better than they do at the present time. The orchid houses are producing some fine stock, especially Mossiae. They have a continuous cut of lily of the valley. The rose houses are in the midst of a heavy spring cut.

Avansino Bros. have been featuring some finely flowered Mossiae in pots at their Geary street store. J. B. Pagano of this firm says trade this spring has been most satisfactory and is of the opinion that it will continue so for some time to come.

F. C. Jaeger & Son, 152 Powell street, who recently purchased the retail store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., will shortly open another establishment at the Manx hotel, on Powell street. Fred C. Jaeger, Jr., will be in charge of the new shop.

Domoto Bros. are cutting a fine crop of Premier and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses from their Fruitvale greenhouses. Lilium Giganteum is another flower with which they have largely supplied this market all season.

The street merchants seem to be going into the plant business in this city. At many of the stands baskets of flowering stock, such as pansies, daisies, etc., are now being carried.

F. C. Jaeger & Son announce that they will give up their old store at 152 Powell street June 1. Their headquarters thereafter will be at their new shop, 141 Powell street.

An interesting spring flower show was held in Gilroy last week. Herman Broson was superintendent and James A. Brown, Capitola, acted as one of the judges.

Weddings and funeral work have been keeping the force at the A. O. Stein establishment very busy of late. Foliage and flowering plants are features there.

The Menlo Park Horticultural Society, held its monthly meeting on May 12. There was an exhibition of strawberries by various members.

Superintendent Holmes of E. W. McLellan & Co.'s greenhouses, at Burlingame, has a fine cut of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia.

An attractive window display for Mothers' Day was seen at the B. M. Joseph store. Trade was very good.

Martin Poss, proprietor of the Floral greenhouses, San Mateo, reports a splendid spring trade.

Shibuya & Ichida say the spring has been most favorable for chrysanthemum planting.

J. A. Axell had more orders than last year, booked for Mothers' Day.

A FINE MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

The demand for flowers of all kinds for Mothers' Day far exceeded the supply, with the exception of American Beauty roses. Of course, the principal demand was for carnations, but when these could not be had, anything reasonable in price cleaned up quickly, and when the wholesale houses closed Saturday evening there was nothing in sight but a few American Beauties. With the small carnation supply, it was simply a case of divide them up among the trade, and most of the retail stores were sold out on advance orders and had none left for sale on Saturday. Roses were in heavy supply and were of good quality, but as usual there were too many of the better grades and not enough of the medium and short lengths. However, all were sold. Snapdragons proved a favorite. Easter and calla lilies cleaned up early at good prices. Gladioli was also in demand, and some of the finest ever seen in this section was on sale at all the wholesale houses. The sweet pea supply was small, but the quality good. The call for lily of the valley was greater than the supply. Orchids sold well. Mothers' Day trade was more than satisfactory, showing a volume as good or better than last year, and while with the exception of carnations, prices were not as high as a year ago, still they were high enough to allow the grower to show a profit. There were a few complaints on the high price of carnations, but as a rule those who wanted carnations and nothing else paid the price asked without question.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Retail Florists' Association was held May 3, at the Seventh Avenue hotel. An election of officers for the following year was to have been held, but was postponed till the next meting due to the small attendance.

May 6-7 found more out of town florists in this city than for some time. They were afraid to trust their Mothers' Day flowers to the express company and came in person to obtain them so there would be no possible delay.

The Jos. Horne Co., one of our largest department stores, put in a special Mothers' Day window, and there is no doubt but that it was a good advertisement for the trade. White carnations were used.

Peter Hopman, New Galilee, Pa., has been cutting some fine snapdragons which he is shipping to The McCallum Co. He supplied the trade here with the largest cut of the season.

J. R. Shields, formerly of Boston, Mass., has joined the force of The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co., and will be connected with the landscape department.

From now on the trade will be getting ready for the last special day of this season, Memorial Day, and from all indications it will be the largest on record.

EXCELLENT DEMAND FOR ALL STOCK

The market opened this week with a good show of strength and kept gaining. Carnations as was expected were leaders and they carried everything else along with them. At the opening of the week they were selling at eight cents and by mid-week they had gone to 15 cents and a few growers came to town Mothers' Day, and received 20 cents for flowers which should not have been cut for at least three days more. Laddie was exceptionally strong and sold well at 20 to 25 cents. Roses cleaned up daily at fair prices and toward the week end they were going as well as carnations. Double the quantity of the latter flower would have sold at the same prices had they been obtainable. Snapdragon was in fine demand, good flowers selling at $2.50 to $4 a dozen. Marguerites were selling at $2 to $4 a hundred. Sweet peas and lilies went at good prices. Short roses sold at 10 and 12 cents and upwards, to as high as 50 cents for excellent roses.

May 9.—Prices are abnormally high, owing to the fact that everything that looked like a flower sold Mothers' Day. Very little stock was available today (Monday.) It is very probable that prices will slump by midweek at least 50 per cent.

NOTES.

Mothers' Day in this city could readily be made as big a flower day as Easter, but there would have to be much more stock produced than at present. The retail stores report a general dissatisfaction on the part of the public for the prices asked. Some of the daily papers ran editorials on Mothers' Day, urging the public to wear something other than carnations. This will eventually hurt the business unless there is more stock grown for this event, which will stabilize prices.

Mothers' Day business was about the best ever experienced. There was a shortage of carnations and some florists charged $4 per dozen. There was a fine demand for plants, as well as ferns, hanging baskets, etc.

NOTES.

Derby day was one of the best this city has experienced. One of the wealthy horsemen ordered a large quantity of flowers, part of the order consisting of six corsage bouquets at $30 each, purchasing same from the F. Walker Co.

Peonies were held back by the cold weather lately, so that only a few dozen could be cut from H. G. Walker's field of 30,000 plants, for Mothers' Day. However, he sold out on gladioli.

The nursery trade has been exceptionally good. Usually the season here is over by April 15, but although everything is out in full leaf, the planting is still going on.

Adam Heitz, the first florist to build since the war, recently completed a greenhouse 150x23 feet, specializing in sweet peas and calendulas.

FORCING BULBS FOR IMPORT

When you buy imported bulbs from us, you buy them by measure, in centimeters or inches and so accepted by us. This means much, as against those people who sell "firsts," "seconds" or "thirds" and give you no assurance as to what such grades measure.

For 40 years VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE at New York and Chicago has supplied the most critical FLORISTS with forcing bulbs. If you have not placed your ORDER or you have not confirmed your order at stated prices why not send us your list for pricing. Where prices are not fixed we can give you valuable information.

1st. Long and satisfactory connections with the best foreign houses.

2nd. Credit arrangements and closest buying at favorable exchange rates.

3rd. First early shipments, followed by one or more later ones covering entire shipping season.

4th. Earliest deliveries of early forcing items which cannot rightly be delayed for main supply.

5th. Covering by us of all "Special Expenses" excess brokers' fees and port charges at New York, in which nearly every U. S. Florist grower has been persistently robbed for the past five years. We eliminate this.

6th. Because of the above, we ask that you submit to us a list as nearly as possible of what you expect to use between now and next November in these imports, part of which we specify below, and let us submit to you approximate prices and certain further details regarding delivery dates which we know will interest you.

We take this opportune time to list here a few vital reasons why Vaughan's Seed Store at New York and Chicago is especially well prepared to take the responsibility of supplying in season at right prices your whole list of Forcing Bulbs both American grown and imported French, Dutch and Japanese.

RECORD DEMAND FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

The demand for stock for Mothers' Day was the heaviest on record and it was impossible to fill anywhere near the orders that kept pouring in. The shipping trade was exceptionally large and many out-of-town retail florists made special trips to this market to make sure of obtaining their supply. The call was also strong from other trade markets and the city demand was so heavy that everything cleaned up completely. Carnations had a brisk call at prices ranging from $8 to $20 per 100, but $12 to $15 was the average price asked for fancy stock. American Beauty roses sold out early and there was a brisk demand for Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier. Dunlop, Butterfly, Montrose, Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Ward, Hoosier Beauty, Milady, Cecile Brunner and all the other varieties cleaned up completely. While roses were entirely disposed of at high prices, the heaviest demand was for short and medium stemmed stock. Sweet peas sold quickly at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per 100 and there was a good demand for orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley. Peonies sold exceptionally fast at $10, $12 and $15 per 100 and came in handy during the scarcity of all other stock. Southern grown gladioli were in fair supply and sold out completely at $10 and $12 per 100. Snapdragons, daisies, pansies, lupines, stocks, candytuft, feverfew, iris, larkspur, statice, lilac, tulips, narcissi, lilies, callas, calendulas and other miscellaneous stock, including several late shipments of Cape Jasmine, were also in the offerings and like everything else were disposed of at good prices. Business the opening of the week was very good and judging from the many out-of-town orders that were received the trade everywhere else must have cleaned up as completely as the local florists. The sales as a whole were considerably ahead of those of 1920, especially for the dealers who had plenty of stock to fill all their orders. Everyone is pleased with the Mothers' Day business and the only complaints heard are in regard to the prices on carnations, which in some instances were a little too high in the estimation of some of the buyers.

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

MOTHERS' DAY IN THE RETAIL STORES.

The demand for stock for Mothers' Day was surprisingly heavy and everything cleaned up completely before the stores closed May 8. There was some complaint on the part of the public in regard to the high prices but the majority of the buyers were satisfied to obtain the stock owing to the scarcity. There was a strong call for carnations and roses and both these items sold out completely at high prices. Peonies were in heavy demand and gladioli found ready buyers. Sweet peas sold well and there was a general cleanup in miscellaneous stock such as lupines, daisies, snapdragons, calendulas, pansies, tulips, stocks, larkspur, for-get-me-nots, candytuft, mignonette, lilacs, iris, statice, narcissi, lilies and callas. Lily of the valley, orchids and gardenias had a good call and some Cape Jasmine arrived in time to help out at the eleventh hour. The weather was ideal for the occasion and the quality of the stock throughout was exceptionally fine and there were no signs of "pickling." The Allied Florists' Association did considerable advertising for this occasion, which helped wonderfully in calling the public's attention to the big day. Several of the leading florists also did some advertising for the occasion, which backed up by the general publicity brought heavy returns. Plants sold out as completely as cut flowers, with begonias, geraniums, hydrangeas, tulips and lily of the valley in pots the principal offerings. To make a long story short the demand for Mothers' Day was the heaviest in years with the best cleanup in the history of the business. The total sales according to all reports were away ahead of those of 1920.

THE FLORISTS' CLUB.

The Florists' Club May party and dance, held at the Hotel Randolph, May 5, was a very enjoyable affair, with some 150 in attendance, reflecting much credit on the members of the arrangements committee, consisting of T. E. Waters, Paul E. Weiss, W. Wienhoeber, Chas. Erne, J. E. Pollworth, Paul R. Klingsporn, Ed. Goldenstein and E. A. Ollinger.

The one-act sketch, entitled "The Florists' Shop," was well presented by students in floriculture at the state university and greatly enjoyed by the keenly critical audience, the cast including Miss Ruth Hopping, Miss Gertrude Shumaker, R. Chatfield Hodgin, Clinton G. Johnson and Geo. N. Morgan. The visitors included Prof. J. C. Blair, Prof. H. B. Dorner and Miss Josephine K. Busey, of the university faculty. The A. L. Randall Co. supplied the handsome appointments.

After the performance, dancing was continued to a late hour.

NOTES.

F. R. Hills, of Los Angeles, Calif., attended the last Florists' Club meeting in company with his son-in-law, George Walther. Mr. Hills is well and favorably known here and his many friends are pleased to renew old acquaintances.

Peonies in this vicinity are ready to disbud. Iris Florentina alba and I. Kochii atropurpurea are in bloom. I. pumila is over. Phlox Canadensis and P. subulata are at their best. Many early shrubs are flowering indifferently.

Henry Wittbold & Son opened their new store at 75 East Adams street to a big business for Mothers' Day. Their announcement in the daily papers and reasonable prices made them many customers.

The A. L. Randall Co.'s cut flower sales established a new record for Mothers' Day. Peonies were in heavy supply and several large shipments of outdoor gladioli came in handy during the rush.

J. C. Nielson, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., started out this week to call on his customers in the south, making the trip by auto. Mrs. Nielson accompanied him.

J. Wall opened a new store at 2519 North Clark street in time to enjoy a brisk Mothers' Day business.

N. J. Wietor and wife will celebrate their twenty-fourth wedding anniversary June 15.

The American Bulb Co. says the season has been highly satisfactory in all its specialties.

Geranium plants hereabouts are retailing at 30 to 40 cents each.

The loop will have another retail florist in the near future.

Leach's Flower Shop is the name of the new retail store that has opened for business at 404 North Austin avenue. Mr. Leach was with the Everette R. Peacock Co. for some time previous to holding his present position with the Allied Florists' Association and has the best wishes of his many friends in the trade for success in his new venture.

Schiller's had a very appropriate advertisement in one of the local dailies May 4 for Mothers' Day, in which fine special offerings were featured. Boston ferns, pans of wax begonias, pans of old-fashioned garden flowering plants, apartment window boxes and hydrangeas were the items included in the assortments.

Schofield, the North State street florist, had a special window for Mothers' Day which attracted much favorable attention. Manager Young was responsible for the arrangement, which made the people stop and look, and in many instances come in and buy.

The John Kruchten Co. received a shipment of Cape Jasmines in time for the late Mothers' Day demand. The stock is unusually fine this season and if the balance of the crop is equal to the sample this firm received no one will have any kick coming.

The Wallace Floral Co., 5744 Kercheval avenue, has been incorporated with a capital of 1,000 shares, no par value, to do a nursery and greenhouse business. The incorporators are William B. Wallace, Geo. Geanakakee and Thos. Jraras.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a banner Mothers' Day business and the demand started off so strong this week that special trips were made to and from the greenhouses to secure enough stock to fill all the orders May 9.

Wietor Bros. speak highly of the rose Butterfly and will grow it on a larger scale next season. This firm's Mothers' Day trade was exceptionally good and everything cleaned up early, including a fine crop of Columbia.

The Bohannon Floral Co. is pleased with its Mothers' Day business, which was the heaviest on record and exceeded all expectations. Norman Stuart was called to Buffalo, N. Y., during the rush by the serious illness of a sister.

Matt Mann gave the regular force a lift at Zech & Mann's store during the Mothers' Day rush. Zech & Mann's demand for the occasion was exceedingly heavy and stock of all kinds cleaned up completely.

The Central Floral Co. did a large business at its North State street store for Mothers' Day. Everything was in strong demand, especially the special offerings in combination boxes.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports good inquiry for advance business in bulbs, both through the mail and travellers. The gladiolus trials on the Vaughan farm will be irrigated this summer.

William T. Willis has leased 260 square feet on the store floor of the new Wrigley building, N. Michigan avenue, for a flower shop.

Ed. Schultz is again in the employ of the Weiland-Risch Co.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a heavy call for stock for Mothers' Day with the total sales showing a wonderful increase over those for the same occasion in 1920 and running considerably ahead of last Easter. This firm has enjoyed a splendid business all season with the total sales in the cut flower, supply and plant departments all showing a great increase over the previous year. The roses that this firm is cutting and known as "Flowers of Superior Quality," have been exceptionally fine all season and everything points to a tremendous cut for Memorial Day. August Poehlmann says that the demand for American Beauty roses has fallen off to such an extent that they will discontinue growing it and give more bench space to Mrs. Chas. Russell. Their new rose Phantom is doing exceptionally fine and will some day be a big factor in the market. Milday, Premier, Columbia and Butterfly are arriving in quantity at the store.

Everyone in the trade was well pleased with the Mothers' Day business, which was the greatest on record and in some instances better than Easter. THE AMERICAN FLORIST was the first to suggest the day notwithstanding all reports to the contrary and began to point out the great possibilities in special articles as early as May 16, 1908. Some always want to claim credit for everything, but in this particular instance all the shouting cannot wipe out the fact that THE AMERICAN FLORIST started the ball rolling.

Tonner's received their first shipment of peonies from Dr. Knapp at Evansville, Ind., May 11, which arrived in splendid shape and consisted of Felix Crousse, Victoria and Festiva Maxima. Their supply for Memorial Day will be large according to the latest reports on crop condition.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a heavy Mothers' Day trade with the total sales showing a wonderful increase over the same period of 1920. All their customers were taken care of in splendid shape and many new customers were added to their list.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had a splendid Mothers' Day trade and cleaned up completely in all lines of stock. This firm is devoting its attention to Memorial Day and will as usual have a large quantity of peonies to offer for this occasion.

Bassett & Washburn were pleased with their Mothers' Day trade, which exceeded all expectations, and sold out completely. This firm will be in heavy crop with roses for Memorial Day and are now booking orders for this occasion.

The Alpha Floral Co. never had such a good Mothers' Day trade as this year, when it was impossible to handle anywhere near the customers that kept flocking in. Andrew Chronis gave the regular force a lift during the rush.

The E. C. Amling Co. had its share of the Mothers' Day business and cleaned up as clean as a whistle in all lines. Their shipping trade was exceptionally heavy and the city demand exceeded all expectations.

H. N. Bruns supplied the trade with a large quantity of lily of the valley in pots for Mothers' Day, which were in such strong demand that he could have sold many times more the amount than he had to offer.

A. O'Leary was more than pleased with his Mothers' Day trade and reports a cleanup in all lines. Mr. O'Leary sincerely believes that the extensive advertising is beginning to show results.

The J. A. Budlong Co. sold out completely for Mothers' Day and could have sold much more stock if it was available. The sales were exceptionally heavy at this house and entirely satisfactory.

Ronsley has moved into his new store at 322 South Wabash avenue, which will be one of the largest and finest equipped retail establishments in the city when the new fixtures are all installed.

Mangel had a brisk Mothers' Day trade and was more than pleased with the total sales. The demand started in early at this establishment and continued until late in the afternoon on May 8.

The Joseph Foerster Co. had a big Mothers' Day business and moved a large supply of stock for this occasion, including a splendid supply of sweet peas and gladioli.

Herbert Hansen says that Peter Reinberg's demand for Mothers' Day was exceptionally strong and no trouble was experienced in disposing of all the stock cut.

A. Lange had a heavy Mothers' Day trade and cleaned up everything he had to offer. Cut flowers sold fast and everything in the plant line was disposed of.

Erne & Co. were pleased with their Mothers' Day business, which was the best ever. This house enjoys both a splendid city and out-of-town demand.

R. H. Wells, of the McCallum Co., Detroit, Mich., was in the city last week buying stock for his Mothers' Day trade.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. sold out early in all lines and are more than pleased with the total sales for Mothers' Day.

Wolf's Flower Shop on East Monroe street reports a record Mothers' Day trade with a complete cleanup.

W. F. Klus, of Anderson, Ind., spent several days here last week buying stock for Mothers' Day.

A. Henderson & Co. report improved retail business with the warmer weather this week.

Edgar Winterson says the E. F. Winterson Co.'s sales for Mothers' Day were the best ever.

George Reinberg had a good cut of roses for Mothers' Day which cleaned up quickly.

M. Cohen, of Cohen & Hiller, New York, called on the trade here this week.

The general committee meeting held in regard to the Pageant of Progress at the Randolph hotel, Thursday, May 5, was well attended and all branches of the trade were represented. J. E. Pollworth was appointed to act as secretary and it is expected that some definite information will be ready for publication in the near future.

George Wienhoeber had all the business he could handle for Mothers' Day and disposed of everything he had to offer. He sold an exceptionally large number of lily of the valley in pots.

Visitors: F. P. Durggins, Lincoln, Neb.; B. E. Blake, Springfield, O.; F. H. Hills, Los Angeles, Cal.; J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. F. Ammann and wife, Edwardsville.

EXCELLENT MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

The worst feature of the Mothers' Day trade was lack of flowers of all kinds. The demand was strong and with short stocks of roses, carnations, sweet peas and other flowers, there was considerable difficulty in filling orders. The continued cold and dark weather was responsible for the curtailment of the supplies. Urgent messages sent to distant points for stock failed to produce any great amount of flowers. The event was better celebrated than ever before from the trade standpoint. Roses and carnations were especially in demand but when these stocks grew scarce, sweet peas, tulips, pansies and other flowers were offered. Pot plants took the place of loose flowers and sales of all kinds of plants were especially large. Carnations sold for from $3 to $4 per dozen while roses were priced at $6 to $12 per dozen. Sweet peas sold at $2 to $2.50 per bunch. Funeral work and social events have been rather active during the past week, causing a better demand for stock.

The Flower Growers' and Dealers' Association placed its advertising cooperatively for Mothers' Day. Large space was taken in the newspapers just prior to the occasion calling attention to the utility of flowers as gifts, and this publicity was responsible for a large amount of the trade enjoyed.

FLOWER GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the Flower Growers' and Dealers' Association held May 3 steps were taken to call a conference of officials of the state association for the discussion of a number of important matters. As a result, a conference of the Columbus district and Carl Hagenberger, W. Mentor, president; George Bates, Cleveland, secretary, and F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, vice-president, was held in this city May 10. Questions discussed were the standardization of flower grading, and the method of listing growing stock for tax purposes. Another matter considered was that of credits. The city association will soon establish a local bureau and it is proposed to make this a state-wide proposition.

AMERICAN IRIS SOCIETY.

Members of the Columbus Iris Society have arranged for their annual display which will be held in conjunction with the display of the American Iris Society in this city May 20-21. The two displays will be held in the sales rooms of the Oldsmobile Automobile Co., East Broad street and Cleveland avenue. Flower growers of national prominence will attend the meeting of the national society. Prominent will be John C. Wister, Philadelphia, Pa., president, and Dr. H. A. Gleason, New York, who is connected with the Bronx Botanic gardens. A schedule of cash prizes has been arranged for the display. Admission will be free and all flower lovers will be welcome. Business for Mothers' Day was all that had been forecasted. During the last four days of the week, an almost continuous sun aided much in bringing out the blooms for the cut flowers. Every grower and wholesale establishment sold out its stock, and especially in roses and carnations, the demand far exceeded the supply. Prices held firm. A quantity of pot plants were sold. Telegraph orders were good.

NOTES.

"I can think of nothing finer than an avenue of trees from here to Centerville," was the comment of E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., when approached on the subject of planting trees as a living memorial in honor of Wayne county's soldiers, sailors and marines who served in the world war. It is the plan to place one tree for every service man, along the national highway. "Elm, or hardwood maple would be desirable trees because of their lasting qualities," said Mr. Hill.

This city has begun the distribution of more than 500,000 plants of nearly every known species and character used in city beautifying, to the various parks and playgrounds. If favorable weather continues and nothing interferes, the work will be completed within a month. Backward weather conditions have delayed the distribution from the Garfield park greenhouses.

The Western Union Telegraph Co., helped business considerably by enclosing a neat little folder with its monthly bills to patrons, telling them of the sentiment connected with Mother's Day, and suggesting that the mother in another city be remembered with a "flowergram."

At Lemon's Flower Shop, Richmond, Ind., a specialty is being made of hardy flowers for yard planting. Such varieties as acquilegia, hardy asters, delphiniums, Japanese iris, phlox, gypsophila, golden glow and helianthus have been going good it was stated.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. has altered its Massachusetts avenue store and it now has an entrance on Delaware street, just as good as the one on Massachusetts avenue.

Clarence R. Greene, head of Greene's Flower Shop, has been honored by the officials of the Chamber of Commerce by being elected a member of its membership committee.

Nick Zweisel, Milwaukee, Wis., visited Baur & Steinkamp, this city, recently, to note the progress they are making on his new carnation seedling, Edna.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE EXCELLENT.

Never before has Mothers' Day created such an interest and met with such sales. Even the florists themselves are surprised with the success of it. An unexpected and unforeseen cool spell has put a crimp in all outdoor activities and those people who put out their bedding plants and grew early vegetables, have had their stock nipped by the frost. Flowers are plentiful. Roses of excellent quality retail at $4 to $8 per dozen. Carnations are sufficiently abundant to meet every demand. Pot plants are in large supply. There will be no advance in price. Several dealers stimulated the Mothers' Day trade by attractive display advertisements.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. had an attractive advertisement in the display columns of a local paper, for Mothers' Day. This firm has an abundant stock of roses, ample enough to supply its Chattanooga, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., establishments. Business was excellent at these points. Carnations came in just in time to supply the call at its retail stores.

McIntyre Bros. were well prepared to meet all demands for Mothers' Day and had plenty of roses and carnations of high quality. Their baskets and birch boxes were beautiful and met with ready sale.

A choice supply of cut flowers and plants supplied all demands at Louis Haury & Sons' store for Mothers' Day. This firm carried a display advertisment in one of the city papers.

A fine supply of all kinds of flowers, especially roses and carnations, are seen at the Geny Bros. establishment. Trade has been good there since Easter.

Mothers' Day trade was unusual this year, it started early, and by 7 p. m. Saturday, all dealers had disposed of their offerings. Stock, although it brought good prices, was plentiful. Carnations sold out very early and about the only thing left was roses. There were a few short roses sold, but most of the stock disposed of was long stemmed. Pansies, marguerites, snapdragons, and lily of the valley had a heavy call.

NOTES.

Joseph Koppleman has had a fine cut of roses at his place in Riverside. His Premier and Columbia varieties cannot be surpassed by any one in this section.

WEATHER CONDITIONS SHORTEN SUPPLY.

The past week was one of the most remarkable of the season. As far as possible, growers had timed their crops to have an extra supply for Mothers' Day and there was every indication that the market would be well supplied, as the week previous there were overstocks of carnations and roses and quantities of other items. Everything was set for a busy and properous week, and then the weather man spoiled matters and it was all off. Commencing with Saturday one rainy day, followed another and with the temperature down into the forties, shipments became lighter and lighter as the important event drew nearer. In answer to calls over the telephone for more stock the answer was that all had been sent, the weather having kept everything at a standstill. Finally climatic conditions changed. Saturday was a bright sunny day; customers filled the store but there were no flowers to offer them. It was the greatest shortage of supply the trade has ever experienced. The wholesalers took care of their customers the best they could, only regular buyers being given attention. All markets must have been much the same as telegrams and long distance calls kept pouring in for all kinds of stock at any price. Prices were not much higher than last year. All good carnations, white and pink, sold readily at 15 cents, culls 10 to 12 cents. As high as 20 to 25 cents was paid for select white by desperate buyers. White roses were in great demand and very scarce, the shortest roses in all colors bringing from 10 to 15 cents, longer grades 20 to 35 cents. The best American Beauties brought 50 cents as did long stemmed Hadley. Cattleyas were not equal to the demand at $1.25 to $1.50 each. Gardenias were very scarce and sold at $5 per dozen. There was a considerable quantity of southern peonies that sold well at $12 to $15 per hundred. Easter lilies, callas and snapdragons were divided up at about last week's prices. Sweet peas were very short of the demand. Spanish iris in limited quantities brought $6 to $8. Calendulas, daisies and all other flowers, including outside blossoms, were quickly disposed of, and the market was entirely cleaned up of everything by noon Saturday. One of the large dealers said it was much the best Mothers' Day business his firm had ever experienced and if they could have filled all the orders presented, it would easily have equaled or exceeded Easter. Most of the demand came from out of town points, although the local stores appeared to show more interest than for several years, the great scarcity of flowers making them more eager to have stock on hand.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was most interesting. There was a large attendance, including many of the fair sex. The feature of the evening was the splendidly illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow on his recent visit to the island of Porto Rico. Pictures of the tropical nursery of the Robert Craig Co., including Mr. Craig and some of his American visitors, made a great impression. Mr. Pennock's place was also shown, together with handsome specimens of palms, dracaenas, etc. Mr. Thilow's lecture and anecdotes were very entertaining. Mr. Craig also made a short address, describing the climate and some facts about his nursery in Porto Rico. Both speakers were given hearty applause and a standing vote of thanks. After adjournment light refreshments were served. The feature of the June meeting will be a lecture by Prof. Wilde of the State College of Pennsylvania.

NOTES.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. issued a large and well written Mothers' Day card, one of which was placed in all its important offices throughout the country, urging the sending of messages and also flowers through the local florist of their home town. These cards must have been a wonderful help to the business, particularly in their reference to flowers. If this had been backed up by a Mothers' Day card in every florist's shop window, what a great influence it would have had in the business of the day.

The experience of the past week has again demonstrated how much the trade depends for success on favorable weather. The demand is certainly increasing and there must be some way to supply it. One plan is to feature plants which can be cropped and held much better than cut flowers. The day is fixed, not changeable like Easter, and growers should be better able to crop their plants and flowers at this time.

In speaking of Mothers' Day, Leo Niessen says there is no question but this floral holiday is now firmly established and all branches of the trade should be prepared to meet its requirements and give their best service to increase its popularity. The week had been most trying on account of the comparative scarcity of flowers and the greatly increased call.

A prominent retailer said this was the greatest Mothers' Day on record for this city. No special stock had been accumulated, as there had never been any very strong demand on this day, but the people came flocking in at the last, and when they woke up to it and tried to get more flowers, they found the market cleaned up. A good trade was thus lost.

Carl Corts, manager of the Jos. Heacock store, said he never saw flowers so scarce at this season. Roses were the most plentiful flower, but of these there was not nearly enough to go around. It was even worse than at the time of the influenza epidemic.

Berger Bros. declared that last week was one of the hardest of the season, as there was business offered for 10 times the flowers they had to sell. They took care of their regular customers as best they could and turned down all other orders.

The street merchants who managed to get a few carnations sold them as high as 35 cents. A number stocked up with paper and linen flowers of the florists' supply variety, with which they did a good business at 10 cents each.

Nearly all newspapers made some editorial mention favorable to the observance of the day, together with news notices earlier in the week, all of which helped to bring it to public notice.

J. G. Whilldin of the Whilldin Pottery Co. says pots are pots these days, but the growers must have confidence in the future, as they take them as fast as we can turn them out.

RECORD MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

The weather was springlike on Mothers' Day and the retailers had good business in the forenoon, the buyers as a whole taking a variety of stock. Efforts were made by some speculators to secure $35 per 100 for carnations, but met with poor success. Business was good in the wholesale district during the past week, particularly the latter part. There had been a long spell of cool and cloudy weather that reduced the supply of stock. The approach of Mothers' Day caused carnation prices to take a sudden upward trend, and from May 5, to 7, they wholesaled at $15 to $20 per 100. There was also a considerable advance on tea roses. American Beauties did not move well. The carnation growers were more fortunate than if the weather had been warm, for they managed to send in enough to supply the demand and they cannot complain of the prices. At this writing there is a possibility that the results may be better for the growers and wholesalers, than for the retailers. Throughout Saturday, May 7, there was little evidence of activity in carnations in some of the leading retail stores. The retail prices asked for this flower, were 30 and 35 cents, single flower and $3.50 to $4 per dozen. In many instances the customers either bought something else or went away empty handed. Taking a broad view, it will be better for future trade at this anniversary if there is variety in the orders, and there now seems to be a disposition on the part of the public to pursue such a course. There is a good supply of cattleyas, the market wholesale prices ranging from $35 to $75 per 100. But few gardenias came in during the past week. On May 7, prices on tea roses ranged from $6 to $8 per 100, and for No. 2's to $25 and $30 for the best. A considerable stock of sweet peas continues to arrive, and although many of them are short stemmed, others are quite creditable offerings. The supply of gladiolus is on the increase, but there are not enough peonies to rate them as factors on the market. There is a heavy supply of stocks, many of them single and they move slowly. A large stock of lilac is arriving and with other minor offerings meets a fair demand. Many of the retailers looked forward to good business on the forenoon of Mothers' Day. So far as we can learn, telegraph orders have not been of great significance.

May 9.—There was a very light supply of stock this morning and Mothers' Day prices are being asked in some quarters. The weather is fair and warm and in a few days there is likely to be plenty of stock.

MOTHERS' DAY NEWS FEATURES.

Mothers' Day advertising and literature was quite extensive. On May 5-6 the Allied Florist Trades' Association published four and six-inch advertisements in the leading morning and evening newspapers. Previously to this, one newspaper had published the following:

"WAR ON GOUGING FLORISTS."

"Mount Vernon has declared a boycott on profiteering florists and a general movement has been inaugurated by the Rev. Otto F. Bartholow, pastor of the First Methodist church, substituting dandelions for carnations for Mothers' Day next Sunday.

"'Some florists have boosted the price of carnations beyond all conception of their worth and as a result many residents of this city have declared their intention of wearing dandelions instead of carnations next Sunday,' said the minister yesterday."

A. M. Henshaw, president of the Allied Florists' Association, countered with the statement:

"'Remember mother with flowers, not in your own buttonhole but in a bouquet for her. Buy her favorite flower and thus beat the profiteer, if there be any in the trade.

"'Wilson, pastor or florist—the public is left its choice.'"

Mount Vernon is a suburban city of some importance. It is assumed that the mention of "Wilson" refers to the white carnation being recommended in the proclamation Mr. Wilson issued when president. The Evening Telegram, this city, published the following letter on May 7:

"MOTHERS' DAY AND HUMAN NATURE."

"Editor of The Evening Telegram:—

"Relating to the observance of Mothers' Day, several newspapers have published criticisms of the florists on account of the high prices asked for carnations. Human nature in florists is about the same as in men engaged in other lines of business, and when there is a strong demand and a limited supply it is inevitable that prices will be higher. As the observance of Mothers' Day by sending flowers or wearing a flower is a laudable custom, I believe it should be encouraged. But there is no more reason in wearing or sending carnations than any other flower. If everybody asks for carnations they are playing into the hands of the speculators.

"Any flowers are appropriate, although a white flower seems most appropriate in memory of a departed mother. As for living mothers, if possible, wear or send their favorite flowers. FLORAL."

NOTES.

Peter Duff, who for a number of years has been well and favorably known in the trade as the head gardener at Brighthurst, the estate of Mrs. John Crosby Brown, Orange, N. J., has bought the range of McQuaid Brothers, Englewood, N. J., and has taken possession. Mr. Duff is an active member of the New York Florists' Club, treasurer of the National Association of Gardeners and a member of the Society of American Florists. On account of his extensive knowledge of horticulture he has been much in demand as a judge at flower shows. In entering the commercial field he will have the good wishes of many friends.

Sam Seligman has acquired the interests of Irving Stein in the firm of Seligman & Stein, the style of the business to be Sam Seligman hereafter.

The carnation growers have about finished planting in the field and the stock looks promising.

Frank Traendly says that, compared with carnation prices, roses were cheap. A. F. F.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga., President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., First Vice-President; Alexander Forbes, Newark, N.J., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Counsel, 73 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June 22-24, 1921.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel. Next annual meeting, will be held at St. Louis, June 20-21, 1921.

LET those who have onion sets to dump, prepare to dump them now.

CHARLES DICKINSON, Chicago, has returned from New York by the air route.

THE Chicago bank interest rate has declined about one half of one per cent.

DEALERS in field seeds have done very little the past year in the way of construction betterments.

MONTANA bean growers are offering surplus garden beans at about half recent wholesale prices.

THE winter wheat production is estimated at eight and nine-tenths more than in 1920 at this date.

JAPAN growers are quoting Lilium Formosum at reduced price. The crop is said to be larger than in 1920.

THE United States potash production in 1920 was 48,625 tons as against 30,845 tons in 1919, and 54,803 tons in 1918.

THE Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co.'s warehouses at Gilroy, Calif., will be equipped with A. T. Ferrell & Co.'s seed cleaning machinery.

PRICE of bags at Chicago, May 11, American, 16 oz., $30.00 per bale, in bale lots or over; Railroads, 16-oz., $30.00; crown, 12-oz., $23.00.

J. M. BRIDGEFORD, managing director of Watkins & Simpson, London, Eng., will sail on May 14, on the S.S. Aquitania for a tour of the United States.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The Bruns Seed Co., Washington, Ia., is closing arrangements for the purchase of the Webster Seed Co., Second and Ripley streets.

COUNTER trade in the retail seed stores has improved the past week, but it is not expected the record breaking business of early April will again be reached in May.

BOARD OF TRADE—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, May 11, were as follows: Timothy, $4.25 to $6.00 per 100 pounds, Red Clover, $10.00 to $16.00.

LONG ISLAND growers report, April 25, that cabbage stocks for seed, wintered well the past season, and are now starting in good shape. The total average, however, is below normal.

VISITED CHICAGO: Roy Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., and wife; Fred Hunter, of the Hunter Seed Co., San Francisco, Cal., returning from the east; A. T. Ferrell, Saginaw, Mich., returning from Oklahoma.

DUTCH travellers who booked orders for French Paper White narcissus in the south and southwest last fall at firm prices, are reported to be welshing now on these contracts and suggesting that purchasers release them from responsibility for deliveries.

CARDS are out announcing the marriage of Miss Jessie Goodwin Cuthbertson, sister of Frank G. Cuthbertson, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., to R. B. McLachlan April 8. At home, 43 Cranley Gardens, Palmer's Green, London A 13, Eng.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Morgan F. Jones, referee in bankruptcy, has issued notices to the effect that on April 21, the E. A. Martin Seed Co. was adjudged bankrupt and that the first meeting of creditors would be held May 9.

R. & M. GODINEAU, seed growers, Angers, France, is offering a three-page list of vegetable seeds, and calls attention to the present low exchange rate of French francs. Their price on Edmund's beets, for instance, figures on the present basis of exchange, about $5.40 per hundred pounds.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are practically out of the ground. A few resowings have been made, but in general the outlook is 100 per cent good, few maggots. The acreage on the south side is equal to the boom year of 1920. On the north side, there appears to be a 25 per cent reduction in acreage.

W. F. VANDERSCHOOT, representing R. A. Vanderschoot, of Hillegom, Holland, now calling on the trade here, is a grandson of J. B. Vanderschoot, who in 1840 was probably the first grower to send the American trade Dutch bulbs in quantity. W. F. sails for Holland on the S. S. New Amsterdam, May 21.

DR. WILL W. TRACY'S life work is the subject of an appreciative article by R. A. Oakley, who is well known to seedsmen in connection with the Department of Agriculture seed work. The article will be found on page 801 of this issue. It will be recalled that Dr. Tracy retired from service in the department April 23.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Wilson Seed & Floral Co., has been incorporated with a capital of 500 shares, no par value designated. The incorporators are H. K. Wilson, Maude E. Wilson, A. B. McKnight, O. Ozard and Carl Tresemer. This concern, which has been operated by H. K. Wilson as an individual on S. High street, has leased a four-story building for 99 years at 25 E. Town street, discontinuing the High street establishment.

California Seed Crops.

The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., writes April 26 as follows: "The California seed crops are showing the effects of recent droughts, frosts and high winds. The top soil is very dry and, as the winter was quite cold, the appearance of the crops is not at all favorable. Radish will be quite short. Onion cannot make a normal crop, having been injured by mildew. Lettuce is showing the effects of unfavorable conditions. We think all California crops will be away below normal in yield."

The Late D. I. Bushnell.

J. Chas. McCullough, of Cincinnati, O., writes, of the late D. I. Bushnell, from Palm Beach, Fla.: "I probably knew him as long, or longer, than any seedsman now living, our acquaintance and friendship dating from the time Mr. Bushnell started in business with his 'old pal Bob Niggeman.' I have always had the greatest respect for 'Bush,' as he was known the world over among seedsmen."

A. E. Reynolds, of the Crabbs, Reynolds, Taylor Co., Crawfordsville, Ind., says that in the death of D. I. Bushnell, the trade has lost a pioneer and staunch friend.

California Celery Seed Suits.

N. M. Barnes, Chula Vista, rancher, has brought suit against the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, Cal., for $4,300 damages alleged to have been sustained last year when the seed company failed to send the kind of celery seed ordered. This action is similar to that of a few days previous, when the Los Angeles seed firm was ordered to pay $4,000 to another Chula Vista rancher because $38 worth of celery seed failed to produce Golden Yellow celery. Barnes says that in February, 1920, he jointly ordered one pound of Golden Yellow celery seed with J. L. Barnes, from the Germain Seed & Plant Co., at $6 a pound. It is said the order was filled through George E. Miller, the latter also purchasing the same kind of seed. It is claimed that when the plants were ready to be transplanted from three-fourth of an acre to the remainder of a four-acre ranch, it was found the celery was not the kind ordered and that it failed to bleach under all kinds of treatment. The suit was filled April 28.

MR. FLORIST! Plant BODGER'S Seeds and They Will "Say It With Flowers"

We have been working for several years perfecting stocks and are now able to assist you in giving the flower buying public what they are calling for; the beautiful pastel shades of delicate pinks, tyrian rose, fiery cerise and an endless list of pleasing shades in a New Type of immense size and unusual petalage the DAHLIA FLOWERED ZINNIA. This type is popularizing the Zinnia.

We have also introduced the Picotee, the Victory Quilled and a rich Golden Yellow called "Buttercup." These are distinctive and attractive as cut flowers.

We have also on the market the long stemmed Beauty Type of Aster and next year will have an Early Flowering Aster in this type for you.

We also recommend our Selected Strains of Cregos and American Branching, our Fancy Strains of Half Dwarf Cineraria, Calendula, Candytuft, the New Double Cosmos, White, Pink and Crimson; Giant Zinnia in fifteen distinct shades and many other reselected strains for florists.

We are growers and sell only in bulk but all reliable seedsmen carry—

New York Seed Trade.

Business seemed to be fairly active in the seed trade district during the past week, plants being featured at all the stores. A noteworthy exhibit at Vaughan's Seed Store was a collection of flowering cannas, in large tubs, including King Humbert, Eureka and Rosea gigantea. They had, of course, been flowered under glass. A great stock of hardy plants was also noted at this store.

The Barclay Nursery, M. Aronowitz proprietor, which has been established for a number of years at the corner of Barclay street and West Broadway, has taken another store at 62 Vesey street. Mr. Aronowitz will conduct the new store and his wife will manage the Barclay street establishment.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. is disposing of large quantities of roses and bulbs for garden planting, both at auction and private sale.

expected as soon as the soil dries and the temperature rises. Prices were not to have done considerable damage to the first crop of hay in Kansas.

Italian seedsmen have been vainly trying to sell alfalfa seed and on April 7 were offering first quality dodder-free seed at about $16 per 100 pounds and second quality at $14, f. o. b., Italian port. These prices have proved to be too high for that seed, hence little business has resulted between American and Italian seedsmen.

On the same date first quality red clover seed was being offered at as low as $13 and second quality at $11, but even at these prices the Italians could not compete successfully with French and German exporters. A decline in prices of crimson clover seed took place in Italy about April 7, and seedsmen there were offering it at about $5 per 100 pounds, f. o. b., Italian port. Common vetch was being offered at $3.

During the week ending April 30, approximately 760,000 pounds of red clover were received at New York, mostly from France. In view of the fact that this seed was bought at a low price, the carryover probably will not be burdensome to the owners.

Timothy lost some of the strength it evinced two weeks ago and was quoted 15 cents to 25 cents per 100 pounds lower in some markets. Approximately 90,000 pounds of the quantity recently reported sold by New York seedsmen to Denmark was exported during the week. Kentucky bluegrass prices continued firm but stocks still seem to be ample to take care of the rest of the limited requirements for this season. Red top and orchard grass prices have not changed for several weeks and the demand for each at present is small.

The demand for millet and sorgo seed has been considerably below normal, but is beginning to pick up slowly. The local demand in the Missouri valley is fair. Carload buyers at distant points from the valley continue to withhold their purchases until they see an outlet for the seed. Millet prices are a trifle weaker than last week and sorgo prices are at the same low level.

Biennials and Hardy Perennials

Many of the biennials and perennials are now as important to florists as Asters, Sweet Peas, Verbenas, etc., are among the annuals. Some can be forced, such as Delphinium, Canterbury Bells, etc.; while many others sell as readily as Geraniums if grown in pots, not to speak of the cut-flower sorts, such as Coreopsis, Gypsophila, Chrysanthemum, Shasta Daisy, Physostegia, etc. They are really needed in every florist's establishment that caters to the better-class of trade. The demand for them is increasing.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The California Association of Nurserymen will hold its eleventh annual convention and exhibition at Eposition park, October 20-23.

Chicago International Fruit Show.

Plans are being made to have an international fruit exhibition in Chicago, during October. Samuel Adams, that city, is chairman of a committee appointed at the recent conference of fruit men to make arrangements for the show. Features other than the display of fruit, will include demonstrations of the methods of packing, canning, preserving, and the extracting and handling of fruit juice. It is expected that experts from the United States Department of Agriculture will be in attendance to advise on all phases of fruit growing. The railroads have been asked to co-operate by demonstrating loading methods.

Orchard Pruning and Spraying.

How many Ohio orchards are valued at $2,300 per acre? This is what the orchard of L. E. Davy, Wayland, Portage county, was worth to him during the season of 1920.

Mr. Davy placed his orchard under the care of the specialists of the Ohio State university extension service, and the Portage county agricultural agent. He pruned, sprayed and fertilized the trees according to the latest scientific methods, and secured a yield of 670 bushels of apples from 51 trees. This orchard had yielded in 1917 a total of 19 bushels; 1918, 65 bushels, and 1919, 150 bushels.

The 1920 crop of apples was sold on the trees for 75 cents a bushel, giving him a gross income of $502. The cost of producing the crop was $157, leaving a net profit of $345. This is a 10 per cent income on $2,300 per acre. This, of course, represents but one year's figures during a favorable season, but with low prices.

This orchard was one of several on which demonstrations were made by the extension service of the state agricultural college during the season of 1920, and represents what can be done with some of the home orchards that are not now paying for the ground they occupy.

Mr. Davy is a firm believer that pruning and spraying pay.

Box Leaf Miner.

Ornamental box in the vicinity of New York City, especially on Long Island, is occasionally seriously injured by box leaf miner. Its presence is indicated by more or less irregular, oval swellings on the leaves, each marking an oval, clear space mined beneath by one or more pale yellowish white maggots about one-sixteenth of an inch long. There may be a slight elevation of the leaf with an irregular yellowish or brownish discoloration, the margin of the affected area being indicated by a darker green. An infested leaf may contain only one or two miners and show comparatively little injury or there may be six or more and a destruction of the larger part of the leaf. The attack weakens the plant and results in badly infested leaves dropping in the spring, leaving unsightly bare stems with new leaves developing at the top.

This unhealthy condition is produced by a slender yellowish midge about one-twelfth of an inch long. The insect winters in the galls and the latter part of May or early in June escapes directly from the leaf, leaving a delicate whitish pellicle or skin protruding from the gall. Experiments have shown that large numbers of these midges may be trapped and destroyed by spraying the box with a solution of four pounds of molasses to 50 gallons of water, making the first application as soon as flies begin to appear, or the white pellicles are seen protruding from the leaves and keeping the foliage sticky for a period of about two weeks.

E. P. FELT,
New York State Entomologist.

Some Early-Flowering Viburnums.

The first viburnum to bloom in the Arboretum this year is Viburnum alnifolium, the hobble bush or moosewood of cold, wet, northern woods. It is a large shrub, spreading by shoots from the roots, with broad, flat clusters of small flowers surrounded by a ring of large, pure white neutral flowers, dark green leaves with prominent veins, which turn orange and scarlet in the autumn, and fruit in drooping clusters, bright red at first when fully grown, and dark blue or nearly black at maturity. This is one of the handsomest of the American viburnums, but it has proved a difficult plant to establish here, although in other Massachusetts gardens it has grown better than it has in the Arboretum where, however, it at last appears to have become accustomed to its surroundings. In Japan, there is a viburnum (V. furcatum) closely related to, and very much like, the hobble bush, from which it chiefly differs in the shorter stamens, which are hardly more than half the length of the corolla, and in the deep groove on the ventral side of the stone of the fruit. Viburnum furcatum, in Japan, where it grows from the mountains of central Hondo to Saghalin, is a shrub sometimes 10 or 12 feet high, with smooth, red-brown branches and branchlets. Like its American relative, this Japanese viburnum has proved difficult to establish, but a plant is now opening its flowers here two or three days later than those of V. alnifolium, and for the first time in the Arboretum. In a few days, the flowers of another early-flowering species, V. Carlesii, will open. This shrub has been found only among seashore rocks in two localities in Korea, and has already become a popular garden plant in this country and Europe. Its real value is found in the white, extremely fragrant flowers, which are arranged in small, compact clusters and open from rose-colored buds. As the buds in the cluster do not all open at once, the pink buds among the white flowers add to the beauty of this shrub in early spring. Late in the autumn, the small, dull, olive-green leaves turn dark rich wine color.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 14, 1920.

An unprecedented demand for stock showed that Mothers' Day had been observed more widely than ever before. Many of the retail florists exhausted their supplies before noon Saturday, with many orders coming in after that hour. The offerings were considerably more than a year ago. Although carnations were the leaders, more roses were sold than during 1920 on this occasion. Pot plants went well.

TEXAS shipped 2,100 cars of onions in April.

EARLY strawberry movement has been the largest in several seasons.

A SENATE bill just introduced calls for $100,000,000 annually for two years, to be used for interstate and intrastate highway building and repair, the several states to supply the same sum as is furnished them by the government.

THE cantaloupe growers of Imperial Valley, Calif., protest to the western members of congress that the $11,000,000 crop is threatened with loss because of the high freight rates. The cost of growing cantaloupes this year is one dollar a crate, while the average freight charge would amount to $1.77.

THE contracts with farmers for sugar beets in the Rocky Mountain states have been revised, and the basis of payment is now about six dollars a ton, compared with $12 a ton last year. The contracts with farmers in California are on a sliding scale, according to sucrose content of beets and the price of refined sugar.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 10.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3.75 to $3.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 35 to 40 cents.

New York, May 6.—Cauliflower per dozen, $4 to $7; cucumbers, 50 to $1.50 per dozen; mushrooms, per basket, 50 cents to $1.75; radishes, 100 bunches, $3.00 to $6.00; tomatoes per pound 10 to 25 cents.

The Use of Nitrates.

Following a very mild winter we now have an exceedingly cold and wet spring. The excesive rains have for weeks washed and beaten the fields to such an extent that it stands to reason that plant fertility has suffered. An agricultural authority once stated that in some parts of the country each and every acre of plowed land loses enough plant food each year by washing and leaching to produce a heavy crop. If this is true in general, it especially applies this year in our section.

We have for many years applied nitrates in the early spring on our early crops and have made money thereby. In a season like the present, one application is not a safe one. It is better to use smaller amounts and repeat the operations. We use nitrates in two ways: Application broadcast by hand or encircling the plants by hand or with a fertilizer drill. The method depends upon crop conditions. For instance on young seedlings like spinach, onion, beet, radish, etc., we prefer broadcasting by hand. A dry day is required and the work should preferably be done during the noon hour. The operator should throw the fertilizer with force, in which case none of it will lodge in the foliage, for it bounces off. If sprinkled unevenly, or if moisture is present on the plant, great damage is done at times, the result being similar to a hard frost. In the case of such plants as cabbage and tomatoes, we prefer, owing to their great distance apart, to treat them individually by hand, encircling them with a small handful of fertilizer about a week after the plants have been set out. Later when growth is active we use a drilling machine between the rows. Care is taken to screen all material through a one-fourth inch mesh screen, and to mix all nitrate materials with either one-half acid phosphate, bone meal or raw limestone. These carriers keep it dry and in good condition to apply and also reduce the danger of over-application.

For materials we use either nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia or nitrate of potash, and have our preferences of each of these for certain work, as experience dictates. For instance we prefer sulphate of ammonia for tomatoes and nitrate of potash for spinach. These combinations, however, may produce different results in other localities.

MARKETMAN.

Milwaukee, Wis.

A COMPLETE DISPOSAL OF STOCK.

General business conditions certainly did not affect Mothers' Day trade in a way which many thought, in spite of the uneasiness in other lines. This year business was far ahead in volume of any previous occasion. While weather conditions to produce indoor stock were not favorable up to about May 4, still the tide changed and with plenty of sun and warm weather, the cut was increased considerably, especially carnations. But in spite of all this the supply was away behind the demand. The rose cut was about 25 per cent short of last year's, but this was partially balanced by an extra heavy supply of fine assorted snapdragons. A few out-door tulips came in at the week end. Orders for both roses and carnations showed a reduction over last year. While cut flowers had a heavy call, pot plants were a larger factor this year. As this day is also observed by a good many children, small and inexpensive plants in ornamented pots, pans and baskets were quickly sold. Geraniums, begonias, calceolarias, daisies, roses and some bulbous stock about constituted the list. The cut of sweet peas was exceptionally large, but the brisk demand cleaned them up with everything else.

NOTES.

The local papers last week contained the wedding announcement of Miss Hilda C. Kellner to Oscar Golin. Mr. Golin has charge of the decorating department of the A. F. Kellner Co., while his bride is a niece of Aug. F. Kellner. Both are well known to the trade and are extended our best wishes for a happy future.

Friday, May 6, was the best day in the history of the Holton and Hunkel Co. Shipping and local business in both cut flowers and pot plants was very satisfactory, even if orders had to be reduced, in order to give all customers an equal chance.

Gust Rusch & Co. report an excellent week. Although their receipts in roses was about 25 per cent less than last year, the supply in other lines helped to practically satisfy the great demand.

The Florists' Club meeting on May 5 was very well attended in spite of the near proximity to Mothers' Day. Only routine business was transacted.

Rieb Bros., North Milwaukee, who completed a large house late last fall and planted it to sweet peas, cut over 40,000 blooms last week.

With unfavorable weather conditions up to last week, local carnation growers have begun to plant their young stock in the field.

The Florists' Publicity Association held a meeting on May 2, and formulated plans for the months of May and June.

The Schroeder Floral Co. had a good supply of carnations and snapdragons for the Mothers' Day business.

A satisfactory trade in all lines was reported by the C. C. Pollworth Co.

Ageratum Fraseri
We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅞ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.
Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.
2-inch, $1.00 per doz; $ 6.00 per 100.
3-inch, 1.50 per doz.; 10 00 per 100.

MOONVINES.

MOON VINES.
The wonderful giant Moonflower, Ipomea Maxima—a giant in growth and flower and wonderfully fragrant. This grand new moonflower is a decided improvement over the old well-known variety Ipomea Grandiflora. The flowers are more than twice the size of the old variety, oftentimes measuring from six to seven and one-half inches across, and are produced in such wonderful profusion that they completely cover the vine with a veil of glistening white. Fine plants.

New Moonflower, Heavenly Blue.—This makes a splendid companion plant to the White Moonflower. It is equally rapid in growth, and a much freer blooming variety than the white one. The blooms come in clusters of five to twelve, and at times almost hide the vines. The flowers are the most heavenly blue, with reddish-purple rays, and six inches across. Nothing is more beautiful.

We have a splendid lot of these vines which we will close out at the price of $4.00 per 100, $37.50 per 1000.

Losses.

"Speakin' o' losses," a feller said,
Talkin' serious like,
"You never know the heart of a man
Till the losses start t' strike."
I have t' laff at the squeals I hear,
As the values tumble down,
An' the groans of the precious profiteer
When his missus wants a gown.
Ain't it tough that the world must pay
For the debts that fightin' makes,
An' all the dreams of a dizzy day
Are a myth when the mornin' breaks?
Can't help thinkin' o' sartin men
That took losses game—
Who felt some pride in the way they died
In a cloak of gas an' flame.

MEMORIAL DAY SUGGESTIONS.

Memorial Day.

Flowers are the first choice as carriers of love, sympathy, and congratulations, and are by common consent the medium through which to pay last tribute to the dead and place on their graves in annual memorial. When the government selected and set aside May 30 of each year as a day of memorial to those who gave their lives for their country in the civil war, it was also decreed as a part of the martial ceremony that flowers were to be strewn on the graves of the fallen heroes. For a number of years this was a great patriotic event, but as time rolled by and the ranks of the veterans grew thinner there was not the same interest displayed, and this has continued to diminish until now its observance with flowers in many localities has almost ceased. Although this latter condition is generally prevalent, yet in some communities, notably the New England states, the custom has grown to such an extent that all graves, civilians as well as soldiers, are strewn with flowers, in consequence of which the trade in these centers finds the last week in May their busiest and most profitable of the year. No one appears to know just how this universal custom of decorating all graves has been brought about, but in its observance and demand for flowers it appears to be as firmly established as Christmas or Easter.

If Memorial Day is such a factor in the sale of flowers throughout New England, why cannot its celebration along the same lines be carried out the country over? The new order of veterans of the recent great war, the American Legion, should and will no doubt revive the old and create a new interest in this patriotic event. President Harding, in his admirable Memorial Day preclamation, does not mention flowers, but invites his fellow citizens "fittingly to pay homage on this day to a noble dead who sleep in homeland, beneath the sea or on foreign fields." There is no more fitting way in which to pay homage to the dead than, where possible, visit their final resting place and lovingly strew it with flowers, as was decreed when the day was founded.

A campaign along educational lines to arouse a patriotic interest in the event and the use of flowers in its observance should be backed by the trade in every community. Reminiscences of both wars, with exploits of local heroes, would make interesting historical news matter that would find space in the columns of the local papers. The history of the day and the use of flowers in its observance could be worked into a readable story that would have educational value. Similar articles of a more general character prepared by a practical newspaper writer could be sent to papers all over the country, many of which would give them free space in their columns.

Arousing Local Interest.

Much can be done by each retail florist through his own organization, and in his own shop, to create an interest in the event and thereby help the sale of flowers. The most popular design, and which has become associated with the day, is the wreath prepared of magnolia or oak leaves, which can be decorated with artificial flowers of many kinds and prepared months in advance. Plain, well-made wreaths of the same materials should also be on hand in quantity for decoration with fresh flowers the last day or two. Samples of these, decorated with tri-color ribbon or small flags, should be shown well to the front of the store. A shield with the date May 30 will bring to mind the day and the reason for display. "Lest

We Forget" will make another good card. At most art stores there can be found a good-sized copy of President Lincoln's memorable address at Gettysburg. This, placed in a flag-draped frame, is a capital and patriotic attraction for either store or window.

A folder giving a short history of the day and the patriotic spirit it arouses at each occurrence of the event, the beauty of the custom of decorating the graves of soldiers who fought, both in the rebellion and the great European war, and in fact all relatives, and describing at some length the various flowers and designs in stock that are appropriate, should be mailed to the store's list of customers and prospects, well in advance. The splendid invitation of President Harding, in his Memorial Day proclamation, will make an excellent selection for the front cover page. In fact, it could at small cost be made into an effective window card, which, if displayed in all flower shops, would call especial attention to the occasion. The proclamation as it appeared in the papers could be pasted to the glass in the show window, and would be read by many who probably had not seen or paid attention to it before.

Window Display.

The event should be featured for at least two weeks before May 30, the final setting to be elaborate, giving a publicity to the day that will show its importance to all who are at all interested. Such a decoration should be given considerable thought and preparation. Prominent features are handsome flags, a show wreath or two, busts of General Grant and President Lincoln, several muskets, a drum, a framed copy of Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg, etc. Busts of men of such prominence can be rented or purchased from makers or dealers in plaster ornaments at a comparatively small cost, and also fluted pedestals of various heights. With these and stock materials of the store, several very showy and effective decorations can be easily worked up by the window artist.

For those who do not care to go to this trouble, the window can be effectively featured by a well placed arrangement of made-up wreaths, sprays and other designs, as well as low pans of blooming geraniums, candytuft, daisies, etc. Sufficiently large but not too conspicuous price marks on the various articles will induce many to purchase or leave orders, who without this knowledge would pass them by as probably too expensive.

Decorated Wreaths.

The prepared magnolia or oak wreath is good ground work for all kinds of embellishment. Red, white and blue immortelles with a small flag or two and a bow of tricolor ribbon presents a patriotic appearance. A cluster at the full part of a crescent wreath, of red, white and blue ruscus with the same ribbon and flag adornment is quite showy. The prepared cycas

Memorial Day Spray.
Cycas, Flags, Immortelles and Tricolor Ribbon are most useful at this time, as they work in so well with all wreaths and as a background for sprays. A pair of palms across the center of a wreath, secured underneath at one side adds considerably to its size and importance. Two or three palms alone decorated with tri-colored ruscus, immortelles, etc., and tied with tricolor ribbon makes a very effective display.

On the final delivery days when fresh flowers are available, clusters of two or three palm leaves are a splendid background for peonies, which can also be made into double sprays of sufficient length to cover a grave. Everything in a preparatory way should be done in advance to facilitate the handling of cut flowers the last two days. Peonies can be tied in bunches of 12 and 25, being much more quickly handled in this way. Other kinds of outside flowers such as snowballs deutzias and spireas can be made into bunches of several sizes at fixed prices for quick handling. Peonies and other outside flowers make very fine decorative effects on the prepared wreaths, which work takes but a little time for the practiced hand. Roses, carnations and other inside flowers will be in demand, sold loose or made up in combinations with the outside shrubbery to add bulk, as most customers expect a good deal for their money at this time.

There is always a demand for flowering stock, roses, geraniums, hydrangeas, and for bedding plants to be taken to the cemetery. A favorite with many are the low bulb pans filled with geraniums and the same with candytuft which with its cloud of white blossoms is always much admired.

The Cemetery Florist.

Memorial week is the busiest of the year for the cemetery florist, the grower-retailer, who makes a specialty of cemetery work, care of lots, planting vases and hanging baskets and placing flowers on graves on memorial dates. For weeks ahead vases have been filled as well as the baskets, in order that they shall be at their very best for the last week in May. These occupy the space on the tables made clear by the sale of bedding stock, much of which has been planted out in the larger lots. In some of these the designing is quite elaborate. All this planting must be finished, the grass and shrubbery at its best, and all vases and baskets in place and the lot looking its finest Memorial Day.

To be on time with every item means considerable planning and weeks of hard work, so that all is finished and ready by May 28, so time can be given to the cut flower work of the last two days. There is always a list of regular orders, designs, baskets and sprays that are the same year after year, for which the frames are mossed and as far as possible made up with prepared leaves and flowers, all of which greatly relieves the rush of the last two days.

The transient trade must be taken care of as there are numbers of people who are seldom seen except at this time and for which there must be a good variety of stock. The wholesale supply houses cater to this cemetery demand with a variety of made-up wreaths, crosses, sprays, etc., including the metal designs, of which latter great quantities are sold. Crosses of birch bark are also popular, as with a spray of natural flowers tied in the center they present a finished appearance. There is also a good demand for plants, low pans filled with geraniums and other flowering stock, as well as roses and hardy shrubbery that will last year after year.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Success in the flower shop depends on punctuality, quality in stock, artistic arrangement and all round good service. This may seem a large programme, but it only contains the rudiments of the methods that if not practiced are sure to cause trouble and delay in the advancement of the business.

The most effective method of carrying out this programme is planning ahead. Each week's business, in fact that of each day, should be so arranged and laid out that it would be possible to crowd two days' work into one should necessity arise to do so, as is sometimes the case. Systematizing and dividing amongst the store force keeps things running smoothly, as each has then to think of nothing but attending to his own job. Business frequently develops in one day that doubles the work of the next, and then only by careful planning are the orders gotten out successfully and in good time. "Drive the business but don't let the business drive you" is a good motto, but only the man who has the reins in his hand and everything under perfect control is able to realize this.

The June weddings are almost here and as they form an important part of the business every preparation should be made to take advantage of the opportunities they offer. In a noted recipe for hare soup the initial item was, "First catch the Hare." So it is with June weddings, they have to be caught first before there is anything to be made out of them. There can be much done to bring them your way, which even if the efforts do not succeed, is better than not to have tried at all.

Newspaper advertising is a plan that many make use of to advantage. Well written booklets or circulars, presenting the subject in an up to date way sent to the store's list of customers and prospects, is also effective. Watching the newspaper announcements and writing, soliciting the privilege of submitting an estimate, is direct and not infrequently leads to the order. Another plan is to get in line with the sextons of the various churches, who are pretty sure to have advance information, particularly if it is to be a church wedding. The bouquets are at times the best part of the job and as it is the groom's place to order these, it is good policy to try and get into his good graces and secure this business as well. If as is often the case, he resides in another city, he will very likely be glad to have estimates submitted and close up the matter in advance.

PORCH PLANTS GOOD STOCK TO SELL.

Porch plants, window boxes and hanging baskets are still good stock to feature, as many do not make up their mind until they see that others have made such an effective use of these summer plants.

Are you a member of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association? If not join at once and feature its service at every opportunity. It will increase your profits and business to a greater extent than any other agency or plan you can adopt. Your greatest gain will come from the business you create in your own store, as it will make many customers that otherwise would not find you out.

Growers of bedding plants frequently have an overstock of plants in several lines that if put up in small, cheap baskets, a dozen assorted together—out of pots, with a little sphagnum over the bottom, and on the top to hold the moisture when offered for sale, can run off a lot of these through the retail shops, particularly in those that make a specialty of handling plants. A hundred baskets a day and over have been sold by stores in busy retail districts. As many as the law allows are arranged attractively on the pavement in front of the shop with a showy price card, when the sale at once commences.

Take a look about the shop and see if it could be improved or made to appear a little different, by a rearranging or addition of a few decorative plants and some few changes in the positions of the display tables. These latter should always contain their quota of decorated plants, made up plant baskets, or vase baskets in which long stemmed stock is displayed the same as in jars. The decorative effect in the basket is much better than in the plain fibre vase, and the flowers are as easily removed when necessary. A little table of quick selling, arranged small baskets and boxes of cut flowers, is certainly to be appreciated by customers in a hurry, or to others their attractiveness suggests or brings to mind a friend who would enjoy them.

MEMORIAL DAY WREATH.

Lavender Lilac and Ruscus (Standard Wreath of New England for This Occasion).

It is commencement time in many of the schools and colleges, a lucrative field for the florist who is on the job. The orders are waiting for somebody, and the men who feature and go after the business are mostly likely to bring home the trade.

Number or Volume of Sales.

Every business has to have a beginning, men who are leaders today in their various branches, for the most part, started in a very humble way with scarcely any capital. Money was so scarce and their needs so urgent that every dollar was made to do its utmost and turned as often as possible and used over and over again. It was necessary to invest in stock for which there was a ready sale, something that could be moved quickly, so that the money with its little bit of profit could at once be put in motion again.

It is the number of sales and not their volume that counts most, for the reason that few are so poor but they have a dime to offer and the utilization of this fact has made many millionaires. It is the principle on which the five and ten cent stores carry on their business, enabling them to go into the congested retail districts and pay enormous rents for such locations. They get it all back and a profit because of their multiplicity of small sales. When a business is being established it should seek the good will of every one, nothing is found to be too much trouble, the smallest purchase is welcome and as long as this spirit is dominant there is certain to be a vigorous growth. It is only when the volume has so increased that the proprietor has to divide his energies that the seeker after little things is neglected, and not catered to as in the beginning.

In many stores the customer who asks for 50 cents worth is almost snubbed; this is a great mistake, for they have selected this store in which to make their small purchase and they should be made most welcome and receive courteous and careful attention. The shop that will make a specialty of catering to those who have both a quarter to a half-dollar to spend, or just want a flower for a dime, will find its number of sales steadily increasing. There are many times during the season when special sales of various stocks may be featured, with the idea of giving this class of buyers a bargain; all of which helps to make a busy looking shop and is a great help to the general business.

Those who are purchasers of small lots frequently from force of circumstances have larger orders to be filled and their trade is brought to the store where they have been well treated in small things, and in this way the business grows. One cannot have too large a clientelle; the more customers the greater opportunity, so that in every way in which the number of sales can be increased there is an opportunity for advancement.

The window and store front display in which are featured the many little "bargains" that are to interest the passers by, is a great factor in getting the eye of the general public. There must be a punch to the window that compells attention, and which almost says. "See here what we have to offer; are these not pretty and for so little?" It is the multiplicity of small sales from such featured displays as these that bring people into the store the first time and when the ice is broken they come in again and again, when formerly they passed by without interest.

The flower for the buttonhole for a dime, or even five cents, has wonderful possibilities as a creator of better business. The man who stops in occassionally for such a purchase will constantly have the store in mind, at least to such an extent that when he wants something more important he will call there to make his purchase.

Nothing could be better from a publicity standpoint than an organized "Wear a Flower Campaign." It might take sometime to make it the custom to wear a flower, but if this can be brought about, and it is easily possible, it will be a wonderful factor, in increasing the sale of plants and cut flowers as they will then be brought before so many more possible customers.

SALISBURY, N. C.—The range of J. Evan Hanford was badly damaged by hail recently.

WASHINGTON, PA.—Carter F. Woods sustained a loss of $2,000 recently when fire started in the engine room of his greenhouse.

BLUEFIELD, W. VA.—J. W. Thornton and wife recently purchased the Alexander Cut Flower & Plant Co., 16 Bland street, the style of the business to be known hereafter as the Flower Shop.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Mothers' Day business was excellent here, the volume being greater than for Easter. Complaints in the newspapers and a proposed boycott had no effect on the buying for the occasion.

PLANT NOTES.

Ficus Elastica.

While the rubber plants do not enjoy the popularity that they did 10 or more years ago, yet there is always more or less demand for good small plants every fall, and cuttings rooted now and given good culture can be grown to fine stock at that time. Every plantsman will have plants of Ficus elastica that have outgrown the salable size or have lost many of the lower leaves, and the tops of these can be propagated during the warm weather. The best way to root the young plants is on the plant by mossing the cut. Make an incision in the stem about half way through, in which insert a small stick about the size of a matchstick to keep the cut open. Bind around the cut wet moss, which should be firmly tied on with raffia and kept wet constantly. The plant should then be placed in a warm, moist house, kept fairly close, and in two or four weeks the roots will be seen protruding from the moss. The top should then be cut off and potted in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot and grown in a warm, close house until the roots have become established in the soil. If a number of these plants are being grown, a mild hotbed can be made up outside, built up with boards so as to allow 18 inches of room between the soil and glass, and covered with a shaded sash. Plunge the pots in the soil and if the frame is kept close, allowing air only on the warmest days, the plants will grow rapidly. As fall approaches more air can be admitted, the plants gradually hardened off and splendid stock will be the resut.

Peonies.

The peony is one of the most important flowers to the florist during the early part of summer, and they are used in large quantities for decorations and other floral work. In cutting peonies for market, especially those that are to be shipped, it is best to cut them when the first petals unfold, and allow them to open in water. They ship much better in this condition and also last much longer. Where they are allowed to remain on the plant until open, the flowers not only bruse more or less in transportation, but the petals drop more easily when the flowers are unpacked if they are open when cut and made ready for shipment. In cutting the flowers from the plant, many growers make the mistake of cutting too low. The demand of the customers is, of course, for long stems, but for the good of the plant there should be left two well-formed leaves upon the stem when the flower is cut off. This will allow enough foliage for the plant to continue its growth and thoroughly ripen off. Where the plant is cut back too severely the root action is injured and a diminished number of flowers will be the result in the succeeding year. Keep the plants tied up by stakes and strings outside of the row; a heavy rain when the plants are heavy with buds will often knock them down and ruin many of the flowers.

Callas.

As the summer weather approaches the callas will cease producing flowers and will require a rest to prepare them for another year. They should be dried off gradually until they become "dust dry," when the roots will be thoroughly ripened, shaken out and stored will grow all the year around, but plants grown in this way will not produce as many flowers as those that are rested. Those grown in pots can be laid on their sides in the greenhouse until all danger from freezing weather is passed, when they can be removed outdoors, still placing the pots on the side in full sunlight. Those grown on the bench can be lifted with as much soil as possible and placed under the bench, where they will dry out gradually, and later planted in the full sun outside in a dry location, and as soon as thoroughly ripened, shaken out and stored until wanted to start for another season. The yellow calla, Ricardia Elliottiana, is being grown more largely and the blooms have been used the last winter in many elaborate decorations. The culture of these is in pots and similar to the older varieties.

Marguerites for Winter.

To have good marguerites for winter flowers the plants must have a good start in the spring. For large plants the stock should now be in 2½ or 3-inch pots and growing vigorously, but if the cuttings have not been made they can now be propagated in a cool bench and good-sized plants grown, or stock should be secured at once. Do not allow these plants to become pot-bound, but shift them into 4-inch pots as soon as they require it and pot very firmly. Keep the plants pinched back, that they may branch more freely, and keep all flowers and buds picked off. For many years these plants were grown in the open ground but in some localities they have been attacked with a club root in field culture, and inside culture has become necessary for success. A cold frame in which the pots are plunged is the culture successfully practiced by many growers. In late summer they should be potted in large pots, 8-inch or 9-inch, or planted in the bench in good, rich soil, so that they will be well established for fall and winter flowering. The plants grown in pots are more prolific in flowering, and the size of the flowers can be maintained with liquid manure. Aphis should be kept down by fumigation, while the leaf miner is a very destructive insect if once firmly established, but persistent spraying with a strong nicotine solution will eradicate this pest.

Dahlias.

Although the dahlia is of very robust growth and comparatively easy of culture, yet it is one of the most tender plants and will not stand any cold treatment, for the slightest frost will check the growth and almost invariably kill the plant back. It is then, too early yet to plant the clumps except where all danger of late frosts has passed, but the eyes may start into growth during the warm days of May, so they should be kept in safe and warm quarters. Where the grower has a good, tight frame that is from storage and placed in the frame frost-proof the clumps can be taken and the tubers will grow plump and the eyes break ready for planting as soon as the weather grows warm enough. The place selected for growing them the coming season should, however, be prepared, the ground spaded deeply and, if not manured last fall, some well rotted manure spaded in. Many growers do not advise heavy manuring when the clumps are planted, and especially no fresh manure, much preferring to get a fair supply in the ground the previous fall, so that the rankness will be dissipated in the soil, for too strong manure causes a rank growth and the plants do not bloom as early. With enough manure incorporated in the soil to produce a good hard growth, and not too soft, then mulch with manure when the buds begin to set, is the manner of some of the most successful growers. The young stock that was propagated from clumps started in March should now be good stocky little plants, and the last of the propagating should be done early in May to have good stock for June planting. Keep the young plants under safe cover and plunge the pots in soil to keep them moist and not require too frequent or too heavy watering.

MARGUERITES AT THEIR BEST.

New Early Asters.

W. J. Kramer, Rocky River, O., in the suburbs of Cleveland, has, by careful selection, developed an extra early strain of asters, comprising the best double compact flowers as well as the tasseled varieties. His Queen of the Market strain, as well as most of the others, in all the best shades, are for the most part cut out before the ordinary field crops that flood the market are in.

Mr. Kramer has made a specialty of asters, and by constant and careful selection for the past 10 years, has been able to develop this early blooming feature which enables him to have the market to himself for almost his entire crop. He has, so far, refused to part with any of the seed, as in saving only from his best plants, he does not have more than he needs for his own planting. K.

THE S. A. F.

National Publicity Campaign.

Each week of late the trade papers have been kind enough to publish for us the names of those in the trade who have paid their 1921 subscriptions to the campaign fund. Our committee has made urgent appeals for the speedy payment of the subscriptions for the current year, and, so far, the response has been most satisfactory. There are still however, numbers of guarantors who have not yet made remittances. If the reader of this article should happen to be one of them, he can materially assist the committee in their earnest effort to resume national advertising now when the trade needs it, by sending a check at once to the secretary, who will publish the subscription in accordance with the new custom. If the reader has not yet subscribed to the fund, he is reminded that his assistance would be thankfully acknowledged in the same way.

The benefit received through the campaign has been so large that it is far from the committee's intentions to cease effort, indeed the campaign is to be prosecuted with greater vigor than ever, and indefinitely, but they look for the support of the trade in this work, and all who contribute are most assuredly helping themselves and the whole trade in the direction of bigger and better business. None should wait to receive a subscription blank, a subscription can be sent in just as well without.

National Flower Show.

Prints of the floor plan showing the areas available in the large Municipal building in Cleveland, Ohio., for trade exhibits at the forthcoming National Flower Show will be ready for mailing very shortly. Prospective exhibitors are advised to give early consideration to the matter of making their exhibits, so as to be in readiness to make reservations on receipt of plans, for only by acting promptly can the best locations be assured.

Full details concerning the grand capital prize of $5,000, offered for the best development of a garden, will be forthcoming in a short time. Even with an indefinite knowledge of conditions, great interest is already being taken in this feature of the show, which will be the most important and grandest ever attempted at an exhibition in this country, or, indeed, anywhere. Never before was so large a prize offered. Several other large prizes to be given should be equally attractive to those able to compete for them. George Bate, 227 High avenue Cleveland, is chairman of the committee appointed to secure out-of-town exhibits, and is particularly anxious to get into communication with any grower who can show either in the private or commercial classes. It is not at all too early to commence preparations for exhibits in many of the classes, in fact, they should be commenced now. As President Roland stated at a recent meeting in Cleveland, no private estate or growing establishment is too small to undertake some kind of exhibit, and small as well as large exhibits are cordially welcomed. If a large number of these small exhibits are forthcoming, there can be no question as to the success of the show. Bear this in mind, Mr. Grower, and do what you can to swell the list of exhibits.

The Washington Convention.

Additional exhibitors in the trade exhibition are the following:

Ever Ready Pot Cover Co., Buffalo.

L. C. Stroh & Sons, Batavia, N. Y.

Macaw Bros., Norwood, Pa.

The president and secretary of the society will be in Washington on June 2, and will have a meeting with Adolph Gude, Z. D. Blackistone and David Grillbortzer, the local advisory committee, at which will be discussed the arrangements now being made for the trade exhibition, which at this time bids fair to break all previous exhibition records in point of size and comprehensiveness. If any prospective exhibitor desires any further or special information in regard to the exhibition he should communicate with the Secretary at once, so that, if necessary, the matter may be taken up at the meeting mentioned.

Membership Statistics.

President Roland is of the opinion that the society should be in possession of statistics covering the business of each and all of our members for publication in its annual report. Such information would be of great value when the society is called upon to make trade representations before legislative bodies. In addition to stating our membership, figures could be given covering what our membership represented in the way of glass operated, invested interests, etc. With the idea of collecting this information, the secretary will prepare and shortly mail to each member a questionnaire, which should be completed and returned for the compilation process. It will be interesting to our members to know how many retail florists, growers, private growers and gardeners, and others representing branches of allied trades are comprised in our membership, and how many grow the whole or part of the products which they sell. It is not thought that even a guess could be hazarded as to the number of square feet of glass operated by Society American Florists' members.

It would also, in the opinion of our president, be desirable to publish in the annual report all statistical information it is possible to secure in the direction of horticultural industry and practice in this country. Much data of this kind is obtainable through the departmental research of the government bureaus at Washington and the secretary will endeavor to assemble all the information available at the proper time. JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Membership Drive.

The big spring holidays are about over, and the trade will soon have a little breathing spell. So for a little recreation for ourselves and for the good of the Society of American Florists, let's jump into our automobiles and go on a little hunt, filling our bags with Society of American Florists' application blanks and scour the cities, woods and fields around about us for new members, and on the way greet old ones. The goal is to double the membership in 90 days, and the slogan is "Every member get a member." But let us beat that, and kill the old saying, "The workers are few."

Every member of the society has had blanks mailed him. If you were overlooked, write any of the following members of the membership committee, who will supply them immediately:

J. Fred Ammann, chairman, Edwardsville, Ill.; Jos. H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Paul R. Klingsporn, 182 N. Wabash avenue, Chicago; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; and S. S. Pennock, 1620 Ludlow street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Lawn Pennywort.

TROUBLESOME NEW WEED.

A few years ago lawn pennywort occurred as a greenhouse weed. It was set in the open for use as a border plant, where it became so aggressive and spread so rapidly that it is now regarded as a troublesome weed. Unless it is eradicated when it first appears in new localities it bids fair to become one of the worst lawn weeds in the east, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. To familiarize people with this pest the department has recently published department circular No. 165, "Lawn Pennywort: A new Weed," which describes it and discusses methods of eradication.

The plant was introduced from southern Asia, and about 1890 florists found it useful as a border plant and for flat bedding purposes. The species is particularly undesirable on golf greens, where the seeds are readily spread when they adhere to the shoes of the players.

The weed not only damages the turf, but is also obnoxious because it sometimes becomes infested with a fungus which causes the diseased areas to become affected. Lawn pennywort is a creeping perennial which grows in dense patches. The slender stems not only creep along the surface of the soil, but also grow a short distance below the soil surface. The mass of closely interwoven stems enables the plant to live over winter. The plant starts from seeds, which are numerous, and also from the underground stems. It is not widely distributed as yet, the specialists say, but its range seems to be increasing rapidly.

When the weed first appears the patches should be dug out with a spade and the plants burned or otherwise destroyed, says the circular. If the removed plants are simply cast aside they are likely to mature seed in a short time, and these seeds may cause a new infestation of the weed. Experiments to eradicate this weed by spraying with solutions of common salt, arsenic, iron sulphate, and gasoline, have proven unsucessful. So closely does the plant trail to the ground that its leaves are not harmed when the grass is being cut with a lawn mower.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

The meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association held at Detroit, Mich., April 11-12, was one of the best in the history of the association. Many important matters pertaining to this progressive organization were thoroughly discussed. The attendance was 99 per cent, which is phenomenal when it is considered that the directors are distributed all over the United States and Canada. W. L. Rock, treasurer, was the only absentee, being unable to attend owing to personal matters at home. Night and day sessions were held to complete the programme arranged by the secretary.

RECORD DEMAND FOR STOCK.

Mothers' Day business was the best that has ever been experienced by the trade here. The demand was expected to be good, but the trade was hardly prepared for such a large volume of business as was handled. For several days previous to Sunday, business was splendid and by Saturday, it had surpassed all expectations. The publicity given Mothers' Day by the advertising of the Retail Florists' Association was no doubt a great factor in this increase of trade. For several days prior to Sunday space was taken in all the daily newspapers advising the public that any flower would be appropriate for the occasion, and this had a fine effect on the demand, as nearly every class of flowers cleaned up in good shape. Carnations, as was expected, were held at prohibitive prices by the Japanese growers and jumped from 50 cents to $2 a bunch and over, especially for whites. The chief demand, however, was for carnations, but because of the high prices asked the public turned its attention to other flowers, with the result that every seasonable flower shared in the heavy demand. There was a fine supply of roses to draw upon and nearly every variety sold well. The supply of American Beauty roses was excellent and sold at fancy prices. Premier, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Hadley were the leaders in their color. Ophelia was plentiful and extra good. A good cut of Ulrich Brunner came in just right for the holiday and was very popular. Cecil Brunner was plentiful but was somewhat off color, due to the warm weather in the early part of the week. Irish Elegance was in fine supply and was largely sold for basket work. A few white roses from out-doors were eagerly bought up. Lily of the valley was another prime favorite and more could have been sold if it was possible to secure the stock. Sweet peas came into the market in large quantities and sold well, notwithstanding the fact that many of the lavender and pink varieties were very much off color. Iris also entered largely into the demand, due in a great measure to the excellency of the offerings. There was only a limited amount of snapdragons to be had and it cleaned out early each day. Peonies were in short supply but of excellent quality. The white varieties brought fancy prices. Lilium Giganteum was in ample supply and prices remained steady. There was a good call for gardenias. Cattleyas were about equal to the demand with no change in prices. Outdoor perennials were in the market in many varieties and shared in the demand also. There was a great call for made up baskets of assorted flowers, selling at $5 to $7.50 each. Plants also came in for considerable attention and a great many were disposed of. As there were very few flowering plants to be had the public turned their attention to foliage plants and palms. Greens of all descriptions were in good supply and cleaned up well. The shipping demand is reported by the wholesalers as being much stronger than anticipated, great quantities of roses being shipped to various plants. Much difficulty was experienced by the shippers in securing enough white carnations to fill all orders.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

A largely attended meeting of the Retail Florists' association was held May 4. Owing to the unavoidable absence of President A. O. Stein, Vice-President Chas. W. Brown occupied the chair. A communication from the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., was read, requesting the association to meet George Beban, the famous moving picture actor, on his arrival here for an engagement at a local theatre and co-operate with him to make his sketch "The Sign of the Rose," a success by donating flowers every evening during his stay. It was also asked that the association tender Mr. Beban a luncheon during his stay, as a testimonial for giving so much valuable publicity to flowers in his stage work. P. Vincent Matraia, chairman of the exhibition committee, reported that the fall show would be held October 26-28 in the Exposition auditorium. He said the preliminary schedule was now in the hands of the printer and would be mailed shortly. The coming visit to this city of J. F. Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson of the national publicity committee of the Society of American Florists was gone into thoroughly and it was decided that the large meeting of growers, wholesalers and retailers be held June 7, where they would be addressed by this committee. The following committees from the various branches of the trade were appointed for the meeting: Growers, Victor Ferrari, H. Plath and Eric James; Wholesalers, J. A. Axell and Mrs. R. E. Darbee; retailers, Albert O. Stein, Angelo J. Rossi and Charles W. Brown. It was also decided to entertain the committee at a luncheon, the date to be decided later. Much enthusiasm was manifested by the members present over the forthcoming visit of Messrs. Ammann and Swenson, and they will be assured of a hearty welcome upon their arrival.

NOTES.

The Dahlia Society of California feels very much elated over the fact of having secured a trial garden at the University of California, which will be under the supervision of Prof. J. W. Gregg and a committee of this society. Very favorable preparations have been made to make these gardens a great success. They are to be fenced in and the best possible attention given. A charge of $1 per tuber will be made. This is to be sent with the tubers to Prof. J. W. Gregg, Division of Landscape Gardening, 304 Agricultural hall, University of California, Berkeley, Calif. The same rules will govern this garden exhibit and competition as were in effect at the San Rafael trial gardens.

Many prominent members of the Retail Florists' association met George Beban, the moving picture actor, at the Ferry Building on his arrival here May 8. He was presented with a huge basket of roses by Fred Bertrand of the Bertrand Flower Shop on behalf of the association. Among those who greeted Mr. Beban were Angelo J. Rossi, V. L. Podesta, Albert O. Stein and B. M. Joseph.

Angelo J. Rossi says that Mothers' Day will soon be a better flower holiday that Decoration Day if it continues to increase as it has during the past two years. Many other of the downtown stores share his views, stating that for many years past Memorial Day business is not what it used to be in years gone by.

J. A. Axell is handling a splendid lot of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses from the Ferrari Bros. greenhouses. He says the extreme heat of two weeks ago had a bad effect on much of the rose stock, making the flowers smaller and of not so good color as is usual at this season of the year.

On May 7 the daily papers published reading notices calling attention to the high prices asked by the Japanese growers for their carnations and asked the public to buy other flowers instead. The Mayor issued a proclamation asking all citizens to wear a white flower on that day.

F. Schlotzhauer, manager of the Francis Floral Co. on Powell street, reports a great demand for his new flower basket. His firm enjoyed an excellent Mothers' Day business and cleaned up well on all stock.

A large supply of Lilium giganteum and roses is being shipped to this market by Domoto Bros. Plant trade this spring has been quite satisfactory, the sale of ornamentals being ahead of previous years.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting last week. A large number of growers were present.

San Leandro bulb growers are now cutting some very handsome varieties of iris, which are finding much favor in this market.

The Art Floral Co. enjoyed a fine telegraph trade for Mothers' Day.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Washington, D. C.

Peonies are in full swing now, and sales are good; roses in general are plentiful; carnations and sweet peas scarce owing to the great amount of cloudy weather.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society will meet here June 1-2. The programme will be as follows: Meet at Gude Bros. Co.'s offices at 10 a. m., visit Arlington farms until 12 noon, where the Secretary of Agriculture or other prominent officials will address the gathering. Then a drive through Rock Creek park to Twin Oaks, the home of the former Mrs. Garden Hubbart, who donated a gold medal to be awarded every five years for new roses. This is now the home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell. Here refreshments will be served and the rose garden inspected. After that another drive through Executive avenue and the Soldiers' Home to the New Ebbitt house where luncheon will be served. On the morning of June 2 there will be a visit to the Shaw water lily gardens at Kenniworth, Md., and in the afternoon a visit to Dr. Van Fleet's rose garden at Bell's station, Md.

NOTES.

At a parade held May 13 by the Humane Society, Gude Bros. Co. decorated a float that was drawn by six horses. The float was 30 feet long, eight feet wide and had a pergola erected on top, covered with climbing roses, American Beauties and palms. On this float the President's dog, Laddie Boy, lead the animal parade. Needless to say this float created much favorable comment throughout the entire parade.

Adolph Gude, vice president of the Society American Florists, was unanimously elected as grand commander of the Grand Commandery Knights Templar of the District of Columbia. He is already past commander, past high priest, past grand high priest, past patron of the Eastern Star, and past grand patron of the Eastern Star and past potentate of Almas Temple.

The Florists' Club met on Monday in special session, the committees appointed and general plans made for the entertainment of the visitors for the forthcoming convention in August of the Society of American Florists. It is now expected that the Secretary of Agriculture will be present to address the members at the opening session.

William F. Gude, the representative of the Society American Florists for this city, has been appointed by President Harding as a member of the rent commission for the District.

Boston.

DECIDED DECLINE IN PRICES.

The market, as was expected, weakened after the opening on May 9. The prices were fully as good and in some cases better than at the closing the previous week. Every store in the city and all near-by retailers cleaned up their stock completely for Mothers' Day and consequently were all stocking up for business again. This acted as a prop to the market for two days and then stock slumped. Toward the end of the week values had decreased 50 to 70 per cent and stock moved only with great urging. Carnations which have been leaders for the past few weeks were also the best sellers on the downward trend. Fancy ones which would have brought at least 20 cents a week ago sold as low as four to six cents. Roses also had to follow quickly and even at the ridiculous prices asked, would not move readily. All other stock followed, and all things combined, caused a very poor market. The only bright spot to be seen was the demand for red carnations and Calla lilies, which rose above the decline, owing to the rather sharp demand on them for church work on Pentecost Sunday. Snapdragons, sweet peas, marguerites, and pansies are now drugs on the market. Some very fine lily of the valley is arriving with little call. Gladioli have made their appearance, Halley and baby gladioli being the chief items. Halley sold at $2.50 per dozen and the smaller eight cents each. At present the outlook is very discouraging for any immediate increase in business. There will likely be another week such as this one. It is not probable that prices will go as high for Memorial Day as they did for Mothers' Day, owing to the great amount of artificial flowers that have been shipped in.

NOTES.

B. Hammond Tracy, Jr., Wenham, Mass., an account of whose death appeared in our issue of May 14, page 807, was well known here. He was the son of B. Hammond Tracy, of the Cedar Acres Gladioli Farm.

The Waban Rose Conservatories at Natick, consisting of 60 acres of land and 15,000 square feet of glass were sold at auction May 9, price $30,000, to the Park Trust Co., Worcester, purchaser.

The daily press had editorials after Mothers' Day criticising the prices charged for carnations.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Glen Cove, N. Y., May 11, President Wm. Noonan in the chair. In the display held in connection with the session, the following exhibits were shown:

Twelve pink Darwin tulips, collection of lilacs, brasso cattleyas and a vase of outdoor flowering shrubs. Frank O. Johnson won first prize in all these items. Wm. Allen carried off the honors for three head of lettuce. Exhibits for the meeting June 8 will consist of 12 mixed hybrid tea roses, 25 mixed sweet peas, and 12 mixed hardy perennial roses.

Wm. Popp gave a very interesting talk on gladioli and the different methods of growing them. C. Wallace was present and spoke about the lawn and garden contest being conducted in Glen Cove. The chairman of the executive committee read the schedule of the rose show to be held early in June.

C. Zanderberger was elected to active membership, and one membership petition was received.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mrs. Cora B. Thompson.

The late Mrs. Cora Belle Thompson, an account of whose death appeared in our issue of May 14, page 807, was a worthy example of a business woman, being one of the best known florists of Louisville, Ky., and well known to the the trade at large. She had been president of C. B. Thompson & Co., since its incorporation. Mrs. Thompson was connected with the industry for nearly 40 years, beginning with the firm of Geo. Thompson & Sons, that city. She married Samuel J. Thompson, a member of this concern, and for many years assisted him in the management of its retail store. When the firm dissolved partnership, her husband purchased the retail end of the business and under the name of S. J. Thompson, they continued in business until the death of Mr. Thompson in 1909. She then incorporated under the name of C. B. Thompson & Co.

Mrs. Thompson took a deep interest in the various trade organizations of which she was a member, and attended many of the conventions. She was a great believer in co-operation. She was also a member of numerous civic and fraternal organizations.

The funeral services were held at the church of the Advent (Episcopal). The popularity of Mrs. Thompson was shown at the cemetery, where the gathering of relatives and friends around the grave was the largest in several years. Louis Kirch represented the professional and Geo. W. Plinke the amateur florists among the pallbearers. The honorary pall bearers were Wm. Walker, Anders Rasmussen, Henry Fuchs, Emil Walther, August R. Baumer and Wm. Mann.

She is survived by a son, Edward, who is connected with the firm, a brother and a grand-daughter, and a number of nieces and nephews. Those best known to the trade are Jos. L. Able, secretary and treasurer of C. B. Thompson & Co., Miss Nellie Able, one of the designers for the firm and Miss Mary Schleeter.

In the death of Mrs. Thompson, the son has lost a loving mother, the Louisville business world a shining light among the modern business woman, the florists an upright friend and competitor, the various trade organizations a staunch advocate and the civic and fraternal bodies to which she belonged an active member. —A. R. B.

GERING, NEB.—Daly Brothers recently purchased the Mitchell greenhouse from Jess Morse, former owner.

BENTONVILLE, ARK.—F. B. Anderson, Eureka Springs, has rented the Eastham & Berry greenhouse, making additions.

Aster Diseases.

Commenting on the reply by Elmer D. Smith to Z. C. F. on Aster diseases, we would say that according to our experience Mr. Smith is quite right that the tarnished plant bug is responsible for the "yellows." This pest is so tricky that many growers have been entirely unaware that an insect is usually at the bottom of the trouble. This is similar in other cases; for instance, the so-called blight of lettuce going to seed. We have had growers tell us that it is impossible to obtain lettuce seed in their section because it blights before forming seed. A closer acquaintance would have shown the tarnished plant bug injuring the seed stalks to such an extent as causing "yellows," and a complete cessation of development.

In regard to remedies, we have studied diligently, and have found a partial remedy in a powerful dusting device, something like the Niagara blower, and applying irritating powder frequently. A favorite mixture with us is hydrate lime and tobacco dust, using the latter sparingly. In the morning when the sun warms things up, a good powerful dusting will drive the pest out of the field, and frequent repetition is necessary. The bugs begin their attacks as soon as flower shoots appear and continue until the buds are well formed, or as long as there are off shoots to puncture. After the wood hardens, they turn the job over to the black aster beetle to devour the blossoms.

The stem rot of asters has been definitely determined to be fusarium wilt, a disease well known in many other kinds of plants. It can only be controlled by sterilization, either steam or formaldehyde. While field sterilization is impossible, we can sterilize our seeds, plant boxes or benches and then plant into new fields, or we can plant sterilized seed with a seed drill directly into the field. This is a good method, and avoiding greenhouse contamination. We are quite certain that we have handled this malady with our seeds, as seeds from other sources behave differently. Some lots have been free and others badly infested. The variation in appearance of this disease depends upon weather conditions, as this wilt flourishes during cloudy, close and hot weather; and once attacked, there is no remedy. We have had plants carrying a dozen fine flowers succumb the last moment, just before cutting the crop. We have abandoned greenhouse culture of asters on this account, as sterilization has proved too expensive. The field seeding proves cheaper and simpler. MARKETMAN.

Protection of Plant Raisers in England.

F. J. Chittenden attended the recent meeting of the Council of the Chamber of Horticulture by invitation, as also did the committee for the protection of raisers of new varieties of plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables. He made it clear at the outset that the views he expressed were entirely his own. He agreed that the raisers of new varieties should receive the fullest recompense and recognition, and considered there were two categories of plants: (1) Perennials, capable of vegetative propagation; and (2) Plants raised from seed.

The method of protection, and mode of ensuring satisfactory recompense to raiser might be: (1) Restriction of right to propagate; which entails (a) registration of recognizable description, (b) circulation of warning of protection; (c) the right to prosecute for infringement of protection. (2) Restriction of right to propagate to the raiser, and sale on the understanding that none of the plants shall leave the hands of the purchaser, again involving registration with an accurate and recognizable description.

The registration of new plants is much like patenting, but differs from it in certain ways. A patented article is a finished thing, but a plant is not; different plants have different periods in which they come to maturity. So many new "varieties" are not the result of long work or study, but just come by chance. If a plant were patented, or legally protected, a large number of prosecutions would be necessary to ensure the collection of royalties. There is no method of marking plants, such as the secret mark of a patented article. There are also many instances of two or more persons raising the same thing. A patent is often the result of prolonged experiment and careful calculation, whereas a new plant is frequently the result of nature's work.

With regard to the protection of the name, Mr. Chittenden asked if this really were worth while—in a large number of cases it is not, as it leads to the multiplication of names, which most people deplore. Multiplication of names is not to the best interest of horticulture. The best means of gaining a recompense for new varieties lies with the man who raises them, without any legal protection. He should be ensured of the value of the plant he raises; he should work up a big stock, and advertise well.

The effective registration of names of new plants is a desirable thing but this, in itself, is not sufficient. It is most desirable that there should be a photographic record made of the plant, so as to bring out its salient points, and, in certain circumstances, there should be preserved specimens. It is also extremely desirable that some understanding be arrived at as to the kind of name to be used. Ofttimes names are too long, and apt to be confused with others. When a plant is brought from one country to another, the name it is known by in the country of origin should be translated into the language of the country to which it is imported.

A scheme for an international bureau for the registration of names of new plants had recently been circulated, but it seemed to fall short of what might be done. Effective registration entails the use of a full and accurate description of each plant, and the provision made in the scheme is totally inadequate. Further, the description should be drawn up by a competent person, and raisers are not always competent in this direction. Everything depends upon the accuracy of a description.—British Gardeners' Chronicle.

Brooklyn Notes.

Rodman & Sons, who have two fine stores on Conway street, reported excellent trade. While carnations were bought there, as elsewhere, they were but an incident in the business, as the people took all available flowers. This firm being located near Evergreen cemetery is looking forward to a fine Memorial Day business.

Joseph Trepel has so many stores here that it is hard to keep in touch with them. It is only by reference to his brother and buyer, Adam Trepel, who sometimes takes us about in his electric automobile, that we can ever reach them. All these shops reported an excellent Mothers' Day trade.

As this city is to a greater extent than Manhattan, a city of homes, it was expected that the Mothers' Day trade would be good in that borough and so it proved.

Trepel & Landsmann, who recently opened a store on Quincy street, near Broadway, state that their business is excellent. They are now pushing bedding plants.

A good sale of all flowers for Mothers' Day is reported by Dick, the Florist, 391 Knickerbocker avenue. He has a tastefuly arranged store, well stocked.

Edward McCarthy, president and manager of James Weir, Inc., Fulton street, who has been ill, is well again. This store reports good business.

FORCING BULBS FOR IMPORT

When you buy imported bulbs from us, you buy them by measure, in centimeters or inches and so accepted by us. This means much, as against those people who sell "firsts," "seconds" or "thirds" and give you no assurance as to what such grades measure.

For 40 years VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE at New York and Chicago has supplied the most critical FLORISTS with forcing bulbs. If you have not placed your ORDER or you have not confirmed your order at stated prices why not send us your list for pricing. Where prices are not fixed we can give you valuable information.

1st. Long and satisfactory connections with the best foreign houses.

2nd. Credit arrangements and closest buying at favorable exchange rates.

3rd. First early shipments, followed by one or more later ones covering entire shipping season.

4th. Earliest deliveries of early forcing items which cannot rightly be delayed for main supply.

5th. Covering by us of all "Special Expenses" excess brokers' fees and port charges at New York, in which nearly every U. S. Florist grower has been persistently robbed for the past five years. We eliminate this.

6th. Because of the above, we ask that you submit to us a list as nearly as possible of what you expect to use between now and next November in these imports, part of which we specify below, and let us submit to you approximate prices and certain further details regarding delivery dates which we know will interest you.

We take this opportune time to list here a few vital reasons why Vaughan's Seed Store at New York and Chicago is especially well prepared to take the responsibility of supplying in season at right prices your whole list of Forcing Bulbs both American grown and imported French, Dutch and Japanese.

STOCK IS PLENTIFUL.

Stock is plentiful at this writing, but the demand is strengthening and the supply is not as heavy as it was last week. Business last week was quiet in the wholesale market and the retailers as a whole were disappointed with the total sales. Stock was sacrificed at low prices in order to move it, and one of the leading loop stores sold roses as low as $1 per dozen May 14. Roses are in good supply with Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Premier having the best call. White Killarney is in good supply and fine Sunburst are arriving in quantity. Butterfly roses are quite a factor in the market and has made so many friends that it will be grown on a large scale in this vicinity next season. Dunlop, Ward, Hoosier Beauty, Milady, Montrose, Ophelia, Cecile Brunner and all the other varieties grown for this market are in ample supply. Carnations are arriving in fair sized quantities. Orchids are plentiful and so is lily of the valley. Sweet peas are holding their own. Cape Jasmines are arriving in splendid condition. Snapdragons are to be had in quantity. Lupines, stocks, daisies, mignonette, cornflowers, gardenias, daisies, gladioli, tulips, narcissi, pansies, larkspurs, candytuft, lilies callas and calendulas are included in the offerings. Peonies are arriving, but the outlook for a large supply of this stock is discouraging for Memorial Day. Most of the wholesalers are predicting a shortage of stock for this occasion, while others are inclined to believe the offerings will be ample to meet the demand. Everyone will do well to place their orders early so as to protect their supply, for prices in some instances are likely to advance above the advertised quotations.

NOTES.

T. E. Waters attended the annual dance and frolic of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, May 12, at the Calumet Club, Milwaukee, Wis. The big event of the evening was the "snake dance." Ask Tim, he will tell you all about it.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving regular shipments of choice peonies in good sized quantities and will have a large supply for Memorial Day. This firm's sales for May continue to show a healthy increase.

Paul Klingsporn says that the early demand for Memorial Day at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association leads him to believe that stock will be none too plentiful for this occasion.

One grower reports that he averaged 13 cents for his carnations for Mothers' Day week.

Phil Brodbeck of Evanston is confined to his home with rheumatism.

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

FOUNDED BY FLINT, KENNICOTT & CO. 1st

Our Sales System to the Out-of-town buyer is the best in CHICAGO. Our "Report of Sales" to the grower is the best in this country.

The Wholesale Cut Flower Association held its regular monthly meeting May 12 when the nomination of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: For president, John Michelsen; vice-president, H. B. Kennicott; secretary, Paul Klingsporn, A. T. Pyfer and A. C. Kohlbrand; treasurer Philip J. Schupp.

The Boy Scout Drive is on and anyone in the trade who wishes to contribute to the worthy cause may send their check or leave their contribution with George Wienhoeber, who is looking after the retailers, John Michelsen, the wholesalers, and Paul Weiss, who is canvassing the growers.

Vaughan's Seed Store is distributing to its city trade very fine new sphagnum, pressed in new, clean burlap, quite in contrast to soiled, patched and ragged coverings often seen on this stock.

Curtis Kindler of the Raedlein Basket Co. is in Germany looking after his firm's importations for the next season. This firm has a large stock of baskets on hand at present.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a splendid supply of roses and will be in good crop for Memorial Day. The shipping trade is holding up remarkably well at this establishment.

Henry Wehrmann has recovered sufficiently from his recent operation for appendicitis to be removed from the West Suburban hospital to his home at Maywood.

M. C. Gunterberg is using a part of Kennicott Bros. Co.'s old store as a shipping department. She maintains her office headquarters in the Masonic Temple.

Kennicott Bros. Co. will have a good supply of peonies to offer for Memorial Day as in former years but are advising its customers to place their orders early.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is enjoying a splendid shipping business and the advance orders for Memorial Day are starting to come in quite heavily.

Fred W. Kuhlmann and wife celebrated their silver wedding anniversary May 15, when about 75 friends and relatives joined in the festivities.

Zech & Mann are handling a fine supply of stock, especially roses and peonies, which will be in good supply with them for Memorial Day.

Frank Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., who is making an eastern business trip, stopped off between trains May 14.

A. M. Pekarek, who sold his retail florist store several years ago, is planning on opening a new establishment in the near future.

Bassett & Washburn have booked a large number of orders for Memorial Day with the demand exceptionally strong for roses.

Wietor Bros. will have a good supply of roses for Memorial Day, especially Sunburst, which are just coming in crop.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is supplying its trade with choice sweet peas in addition to its usual complete line of stock.

Max Awizzus, of the Zech & Mann force, will spend the week-end with his wife, who is visiting at Toledo, O.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., is back from an out-of-town business trip.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports a heavy demand for magnolia leaves for Memorial Day.

John Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., celebrated his twenty-sixth birthday May 14.

Julius Kline, of the A. L. Randall Co., is the proud father of a baby girl.

E. C. Amling and wife returned from California May 14.

H. N. Bruns has had excellent business in lily of the valley, cut flowers and pot plants as well as pips. The business of the retail store, he says, continues remarkably brisk.

Chas. Grabig, 1843 Irving Park boulevard, has been confined to his home since Mothers' Day with a nervous breakdown.

Anton Then and wife returned last week from their winter's vacation in Alabama, near Mobile.

Frost the night of May 14 produced ice in the open and killed early vegetables.

MARKET STEADY AFTER HOLIDAY.

Conditions have been steady, after a holiday like Mothers' Day, which was the best ever known. Stock is obtainable at a fair price and moves well, there being considerable funeral work to tone it up. Roses, as is the case always at this time of the year, are more plentiful than anything else, but at that move fairly well. Gladioli are arriving in larger quantities and go quickly because of their newness, the best are bringing $10 to $12.50 per hundred. Carnations now are better than ever and also move well. Sweet peas of the Margaret Atlee, Yarrawa, and Blanche Ferry varieties, are arriving in good numbers and clean up well. Snapdragons of the larger varieties are to be had at a popular price and bring $10 per hundred. A few of the early red peonies arrived and moved well because of the good business. Miscellaneous stock, including Cape Jasmines, Spanish iris, calendulas and cornflowers all move well, and so do green goods.

NOTES.

We regret to report the death of our pioneer florist-grower, Gustave Meyer, of The Hyde Park Rose Co. He was connected with this concern for over 20 years. He had a host of friends here who will certainly miss him because of his extremely pleasant disposition. Mr. Meyer was a member of the Cincinnati Florists' Society and of several fraternal organizations.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been receiving some very good lily of the valley from Wm. Schuman, Highlands, and also some especially fine snapdragons from Aug. Juriet, Fairmount.

The Wm. Murphy Co. is receiving some excellent Columbia and Hoosier Beauty roses from Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., and also some very good gladioli.

C. E. Critchell is receiving the best orchids in this city for some time from T. J. Vesey, Muncie, Ind., and also reports the first Cape Jasmines from the south.

STOCK MOVING WELL.

The market was a little slow during the fore part of the week, but stiffened up perceptibly during the latter part, and stock was selling readily Saturday. The weather, which has been very mild, has brought out the spring flowers with a rush. Roses are in the lead this week and varieties such as Ward, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia, Ophelia, Milady, Butterfly and Killarney are to be had at most establishments. The stock coming in at present is of excellent quality, and the demand for them is excellent. Vast quantities have been used for weddings recently. Carnations of high grade are offered in limited quantities. Dark colored varieties bring very good prices and the demand is brisk. There is an abundance of white specimens and they do not sell well. Gladioli offerings are on the increase and some spikes are offered by many tradesmen. Loveliness and Hadley are most popular. The prices are high for the best quality of blooms. Sweet peas of good quality are not over abundant and practically all the stock received during the past week has been exceptionally poor. The demand, however, is good. Daisies in abundance are found among the floral offerings; both white and yellow varieties sell well and bring a moderately good price. Calendulas of unusual size and quality are to be had in unlimited quantities. There is not a big demand for them. Calla lilies are limited in quantity and bring a good price. They find a place in all funeral decorations. Stock plants of Lilium Harrissii are offered by a few establishments and sell moderately well, considering the price asked for them. Snapdragons of good size and quality are plentiful and bring a good price. Delphiniums as yet are only offered in shades of blue, but they sell at good figures. Mignonette, though a very popular flower and good seller, seems to be off crop. Spanish iris is in short supply. Fine German iris is offered and it readily takes the place of the former. It is the season's first and but few people can afford to buy it. The stock coming in is of excellent quality and unusual keeping power. The supply of corn flowers is steadily increasing and despite this fact they continue to be a good seller. The prices are moderate. Lily of the valley is seen in all windows and is in large demand for use in brides' bouquets, of which there has been several during the past week. Long stemmed pansies are few and bring a good price. A few fancy plants are still available. Orchids are limited in quantity and the call is poor. Baby primroses and calceolarias are offered by a few establishments. Begonias have sold very well during the past week and are being displayed in many windows. Pink varieties were in greatest evidence. Straw flowers and stock of the everlasting type is seen in a few stores. All retailers are carrying a good stock of bedding plants, which are sold as pot plants. Geraniums in shades of red, pink and

STOCK IN GOOD DEMAND.

That most every dealer was well sold out for Mothers' Day was evident on the Monday following when the demand was very brisk. As the weather was cool nearly all the week the daily receipts were not heavy, and with considerable funeral work and week-end parties, market conditions and business in general were good. Common ferns have again advanced in price and now command $6 per 100. The few locally grown gladioli move well. Snapdragons, calendulas, stocks and sweet peas about complete the spring offerings.

FLORISTS' CLUB BALL.

The annual May ball given by the Florists' Club on May 12, at the Calumet Club, was a great success, the various mantels and fire places, as well as the dance hall, being artistically decorated for this occasion, and nearly everybody wore flowers. Great credit is due the entertainment committee consisting of Walter Halliday, chairman, Chas. Dettmann and Carl P. Menger, for the success of this affair. Out of town guests included Rudolph Guderson, Henry Benz, Ed. Miller, Gordon Pierce, the Misses Lillian Kuehneman, Della Pierce, Eleanore Hartnett, May Jartinell, Konrad Larson and Eug. Mack of Racine; Peter Oberlin and wife and Miss Tesch, Kenosha, and T. E. Waters, Chicago.

NOTES.

Instead of paying more rent for the premises he has occupied since he went into the retail flower business, Richard Lietz has bought the place. Besides the store and living quarters overhead, he has two small greenhouses and a spacious cellar both for bulbous stock and his heating plant.

Wm. Lubliner had the good fortune to remain in his stand at 31 Grand avenue just long enough to reap the harvest of a fine Mothers' Day business. His new address now is 413 Grand avenue.

Gimbel Bros. ran a large newspaper advertisement on May 15, soliciting orders for Memorial Day in their flower department.

At Fox's, Inc., they were very busy getting ready for numerous table decorations for May 14. Past business was very satisfactory.

Bryan Seeley of Gust Rusch & Co. was initiated into the Knights of Pythias lodge May 12.

A FINE MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

There was a great increase in business the latter part of the week preceding Mothers' Day, and on Saturday all the stores closed because they were completely sold out. However, some shipments received Saturday night enabled them to open until noon on Sunday, May 8. There was no change in the prices asked as compared with the same period last year. Carnations, which were scarce, sold at $4 per dozen. Select Laddie brought $5. A limited supply of roses went at $4 to $15

BUSINESS LULL AFTER HOLIDAY.

Mothers' Day showed an increase of 40 per cent in the volume of business transacted over the previous year. Carnations as usual were more in demand than any other flower. It is hoped that next year will see roses, snapdragons and plants competing with carnations for popularity. All the day needs is advertising and the public will soon learn that mother, if living, appreciates all flowers. Trade in general was good until May 9, when there was a lull, always expected in May.

S. A. Anderson and wife are in Michigan on their annual fishing trip. The employees at his store each had a day off in rotation to rest up from the Mothers' Day rush. BISON.

CHOICE ROSES, All Grades.
CARNATIONS, EASTER LILIES and All Seasonable Flowers.
This is the exclusive shop, only one block from Express Depots.
1619-1621 Ranstead Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Philadelphia.

USUAL PRICE DECLINE NOTED.

With the return of warm sunny weather the flowers came back and appeared to be working overtime, as there was a quantity of all seasonable stock. There were roses of all grades and with the exception of American Beauties, which are beginning to suffer from the spring weather, the quality is fine. Carnations are also showing the effects and on their merits are only bringing four to six cents as against the Mothers' Day price of 15 cents last week. Snapdragons are quite a factor, the stock in all lengths being very well flowered. White and yellow daisies and cornflowers are good sellers, sweet peas are in demand and good stock would sell well, but there is very little that grades up. Easter lilies are in good demand, as are also callas.

MEMORIAL DAY.

All indications point to a good business for Memorial Day. The American Legion is joining hands with the old veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic and great preparations are under way to make the observance of the day patriotic in every sense of the word. The city council was appealed to and appropriated $17,000 to be turned over to the two organizations for the expenses of the celebration. There is a grand opportunity for the trade to feature flowers in this connection, and bring about the decorating of all graves, as is the custom throughout the New England states.

CARNATIONS.

A prominent wholesaler in speaking of the trend of the market, said there had been considerable talk about carnations losing their popularity with flower lovers. He believed this to be a false presumption, for the demand for carnations the past season had frequently over run the supply and that good quality flowers of all grades had sold during the season at top prices. He was advising carnation growers to add to rather than diminish their stock.

NOTES.

Chas. H. Grakelow reports that the recent meeting of the directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in Detroit, which he attended, was a most enthusiastic gathering. The membership is growing rapidly and the new business developing through this extension is something wonderful. The man, he added, who does not affiliate himself with this organization is certainly a back number and is losing one of the greatest factors for increasing his business.

The National Flower Growers' Association appears to be making wonderful strides in nearly all localities except the region in and about this city. The growers are as prosperous here as in any other part of the country, or more so, and it may be this "more so" condition that accounts for the lethargy. This city must and will be represented. Where is the leader who will get this branch of the trade in line?

The street front of the Henry F. Michell store is wonderful in their pavement display. The amount of bedding, vegetables and other plants and bulbs that are sold because of this featuring of the stock, makes this an important adjunct to the business. Price and explanatory cards are important factors.

Mole street had a scare last week when a large restaurant building at the entrance to the thoroughfare burned out. Charles Meehan's store adjoined an annex to this in the rear, and for a time it appeared threatening but he escaped with but little loss.

Sydney Bayersdorfer thinks the trade must expect a record Memorial Day business, judging from the great demand they have had for all kinds of wreath materials, made up wreaths and other prepared stock.

The forwardness of the season should insure a full crop of peonies without question for Memorial Day. Last year there was practically no local stock, the bulk of it not making the market until 10 days later.

A good outlook for Memorial Day business is forecasted by Edw. Reid. Many orders are being received for peonies, and he added that this is the year we are going to have them without fail.

An enormous spring business is taxing every facility of the Henry A. Dreer, Inc. Both at their city store and at the Riverton Nurseries, the demand is as great as they have ever experienced.

Jos. G. Neidinger has had a wonderful business for Memorial Day, which has taxed his facilities for the past month. It is the greatest volume of business they have ever experienced.

The Leo Niessen Co. is featuring Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, this being their quantity item. With all due credit to the new ones they claim this to be the best all round forcing rose.

In addition to other seasonable stock, peonies in quantity will be featured at Berger Bros. They are prepared for a heavy Memorial Day business.

K.

Providence, R. I.

Trade the past week has been rather quiet. Authough stock is plentiful, the quality is good. Roses are the leaders, and after Mothers' Day, for the first two or three days, prices remained at the same level as for the week previous. Roses sell from 25 to 40 cents; carnations, 10 to 12 cents each wholesale, and other flowers in proportion. Sweet peas of good quality are in strong demand.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held in this city May 18. J. K. M. L. Farquhar of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., gave an interesting lecture on his recent tour of horticultural centers in Europe.

LULL AFTER MOTHERS' DAY RUSH.

There was a considerable increase in the supply of stock during the past week and as usually happens after a drive for high prices, there was a marked falling off in buying. There are men in the trade who are wondering where the profit comes in, after a few days of extravagant prices, as it is usually dull for weeks, both before and after the forcing up of prices. Many people will pay high figures for a special occasion, but they go away in bad humor and make up for it by staying away from the florists until they have cooled off. An exceptionally heavy stock of roses arrived on May 14 and as the weather is warmer large supplies may be expected for some time to come, which will keep prices at a low level. There is also a marked increase in the carnation supply. Peony offerings have increased, but there is no surplus. A few days of warm weather is likely to bring in many more. Lily of the valley is plentiful and hard to move. In cattleyas, gaskelliona, mossiae and gigas are now fairly plentiful, prices on the two former ranging from $50 to $75 per 100, on the latter, $150 per 100 or at that rate. Sweet peas are arriving in considerable quantity, most of them short stemmed. Although lilac was reported killed by the frost, there is now plenty of it on the market. Gladioli are on the increase and there is some good stock on the market. A liberal supply of iris is arriving. The calla season is about finished, but there is enough Easter lilies to supply the demand. Snapdragons, stocks, bouvardia and a miscellaneous collection of other flowers, including flowering shrubbery, are noted.

May 16.—The market is quiet with a heavy supply of stock. Light buying and low prices prevail in roses and carnations.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The Horticultural Society of New York staged a show in the Museum building, Bronx park, May 14-15. The number of exhibitors was small, but the displays were creditable, noteworthy being cut flowers from shrubs and trees. In this class Mrs. F. H. Allen, Pelham Manor, N. Y., (James Lenaue, gardener) took first prize; Mrs. Harold Pratt, Glen Cove, N. Y., (F. O. Johnson, gardener), second. James Stewart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., made excellent displays of calceolarias and pelargoniums, taking first prize. Mrs. Pratt and Mrs. Allen were awarded first and second prizes respectively for tulips. John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., received a special prize for a number of vases of Iris Pallida Lohengrin. The Botanic garden made a good exhibit of flowers from trees and shrubs and a collection of iris. Among the flowering trees and shrubs, lilac, snowballs, hardy azaleas, Cornus floridas, virburnums and a number of others were seen.

NOTES.

H. E. Froment received over 100 boxes of roses on May 14 from L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J.

Mrs. Smith, wife of Fred Smith, a well known grower of Woodside, L. I., died suddenly on May 12.

MOTHERS' DAY BETTER THAN EVER.

The weather was ideal for Mothers' Day and the co-operative publicity of the local florists put across the largest business on record. This despite an untoward market in which cut flowers were scarcer than usual for the event. Realizing that carnations and roses would be hard to supply, the trade staged an intensive drive for the sale of all kinds of plants. In the advertising, little prominence was given to cut blooms, and plants were pictured as the ideal gift for mother. Fortunately, plants were more plentiful than ever before. Hydrangeas, begonias, pelargoniums, primroses, daisies and pansies were in good supply and sold out. Even ferns, crotons and geraniums were called for and went quickly. There were not nearly enough carnations to go around and although retailers sold them for less than their usual profit, they were again charged with being profiteers. Roses were scarce but cleaned out at good prices. The supply of sweet peas was better than was expected, and these came in handy for bouttonieres. Telegraph orders, both outgoing and incoming, were more numerous than on previous occasions.

NOTES.

National Hospital Day was celebrated with considerable success. The hospitals advertised the day co-operatively and florists contributed their share to its success by donating flowers and decorations. Schramm Bros. gave a rose to each patient and nurse. Harry Turney and Armine Suder also furnished flowers. A number of orders were received from the hospitals. This day will be featured annually here, and offers a fine opportunity. Its only handicap is that it comes too near to Mothers' Day.

Schramm Bros. used carnations for telegraph orders only, but stocked up heavily on plants of all kinds. The fact that they did a regular Easter business proves that carnations are not necessary for Mothers' Day. The front of their place has been repainted and two handsome and distinctive signs with the national slogan and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association message painted on the walls.

Publicity certainly made Mothers' Day a success here, and the trade is so pleased that it is planning to repeat the campaign for Decoration Day. The American Legion will give a monster parade and it appears that the sentiment for this great flower event can be revived.

Miss Josephine Barrow, who recently opened a new shop in the populous Dorr street district, reported a splendid demand for plants and cut flowers for Mothers' Day. She is a daughter of John Barrow, who conducts a prosperous flower store at 2250 Detroit avenue.

An excellent trade was enjoyed by Max Spanner, who considers it remarkable, when one takes into account the large number of unemployed in this city, greater, no doubt, than many other places of its size. Pot plants and roses were features at his store.

Bedding plants are being featured and are enjoying a brisk demand. One newspaper is conducting a campaign to beautify the city with flower beds for the big Moose convention to be held in June.

Other establishments that enjoyed record Mothers' Day trade were: Metz & Bateman, the Patten Flower Store, A. E. Warning, Helmar Flower Shop, and Krueger Bros.

A specialty of hydrangeas was made by Thos. Magee of the Scottwood Greenhouses, for Mothers' Day.

Feniger's two stores were heavily stocked and sold out completely.

STOCK IN PLENTIFUL SUPPLY.

Monday found this market with very few flowers and a demand that could not be taken care of, with prices almost equal to Mothers' Day prevailing. By Wednesday, May 11, the supply was more equal to the call and prices had eased up somewhat, while Friday and Saturday stock of all kinds was plentiful and price concessions had to be made in order to move it. This just goes to show the different conditions that can exist in one week. Business has been good, in fact, better than usual for this season of the year, and from all indications May will show a much greater volume than the same month last year. American Beauty roses have been in heavy supply with a light demand. The supply of roses has been heavy and of excellent quality. It is remarkable the large numbers that were moved the last three days of the week. The supply of carnations is equal to the demand, but some of them are soft and unfit for sale. Those varieties having the call are Laddie, Ward and Matchless. Easter and calla lilies are in moderate supply and clean up daily at good prices. The supply of snapdragons is not nearly equal to the demand. The first peonies of the season arrived last week, and while not of the best, they sold out completely. Outdoor lily of the valley is in competition with the indoor stock and has pulled the price down somewhat. Some fine outdoor poeticus is also on the market. Sweet peas are of better quality than they have been for some time and meet with ready sale. Other seasonable flowers include iris, baby breath, calendulas, and larkspurs, all of which move readily. The supply of greens and ferns is equal to the demand.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum, of the McCallum Co. was among those who left on the annual trade tour of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce last Monday. The party left in a special train and were to be gone one week taking in towns in southeastern Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. is featuring everything for the porch, including willow furniture, plants and fancy pottery.

The E. A. Williams Co., Inc., have a beautiful window display of French hydrangeas and baskets of gladioli and iris.

TRADE FAIRLY ACTIVE.

Trade the past week was good. While the weather was not the most favorable, still buying was generally active and a good volume of business was done. The supply of flowers was fairly plentiful and all stock cleaned up. There was a shortage of flowers for Mothers' Day as a result of the weather. The varieties in the best demand are roses, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons. There is some call also for calendulas, which are now appearing on the market. Roses sell from $3 to $8 per dozen, while carnations are quoted at $2 per dozen. Snapdragons retail at $2 per dozen and sweet peas at from $1.50 to $2.50 per bunch. Some spring flowers are arriving. Funeral work has been fairly active. There is also some party work and more of this class of business is in prospect for the latter part of the month. A number of weddings are scheduled for the next few weeks.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY

"How sleep the Brave who sink to rest
By all their Country's wishes blest!
When Spring with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

"By fairy hands their knell is rung;
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And Freedom shall awhile repair
To dwell, a weeping hermit, there!
—William Collins.

MISS EILEEN LOW, of Stuart Low & Co., London, Eng., who is calling on the American trade, was in Chicago this week enroute to the Pacific coast.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—John C. Bodger, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., has returned from a business and pleasure trip in British Columbia and the northwest.

ADDED to other little annoyances, some members of the seed trade have had their old income tax reports checked by the internal revenue officials.

MRS. A. H. GOODWIN desires to express her appreciation of the many expressions of sympathy extended her by the trade, in the recent loss of her husband.

BOARD OF TRADE—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, May 18, were as follows: Timothy, $4.25 to $6.00 per 100 pounds, Red Clover, $10.00 to $16.00.

MANY acres of seedlings in the southern California seed growing districts have been seriously damaged by high winds, especially portulaca, which is grown on light sandy soil.

UNPRECEDENTED demand for watermelon seed suggests the crop may be intended for making wine or gin, or that heavy freights on long hauls from the south will give local growers much better demand.

J. K. M. L. FARQUHAR, of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., addressed the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at Providence, May 18, on his recent tour of European horticultural centers.

JOHN FOTTLER, of the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, Mass., is closing his sixty-second year in the seed business by preparing the Harwich Port summer home for the coming of the family next month.

DR. FRANKLIN, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadaloupe, Calif., has returned from the east with copious notes of his observations. Another inch of rain has fallen here and seed crops in general look much better than at the same time last year.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich; Theo. Cobb, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit Mich.; A. H. Luck, with S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.; G. C. Eldering, Overveen, Haarlem, Holland.

PRESENT indications in some California sections are that early flowering Spencer sweet peas will be a short crop again this season, aphis causing much damage. L. D. Waller, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadaloupe, says however, the sweet peas there are looking well and improving every day.

W. B. HAYT, now returned to his home at Fishkill Village, N. Y., from a long trip, writes: "I am greatly shocked at the news of the death of William Barnard. I have worked with him and against him. I never knew a better man, morally speaking; but this fact interests me, I am left alone of all the seedsmen who were in the business when I started in 1880. I sleep well."

IT is reported the firm of Henry & Lee, New York, at the request of the Henry F. Mitchell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has called a meeting of representatives of seven other French bulb importing houses with a view to reaching an equitable price basis which, in their opinion, should constitute a reasonable offer to French jobbers in Paper White narcissus and other bulbs grown in southern France. The suggested date is May 23, at New York.

French Bulbs Lower.

An important jobber in French bulbs cables May 16, offering 13 centimeter Paper White narcissus bulbs at 120 francs and 14 centimeter bulbs at 140 francs per thousand, guaranteeing to meet later decline, if any.

Continental Seed Company.

W. D. Collins, secretary, May 14, was appointed receiver of the assets of the Continental Seed Company, a $1,000,000 corporation, whose warehouses are in Hammond, Ind., by Fred Rush on application of C. Arch Johnson and C. W. Hales. Chas. A. Heath is president and Arch C. Johnson, treasurer, of the company.

Puget Sound Seed Growing.

The Charles H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Wash., is distributing a four page circular explaining the forming of an association of farmers under the name of Skagit Valley Seed Growers, Inc., for producing the highest possible type of seed. A contract has now been entered into by this association, giving the Chas. H. Lilly Co. absolute control for a period of years, of the marketing of all seed crops grown by the association, which it is understood admits as members, only men of the highest standing and subject to the supervision and control of the Lilly company. In addition to cabbage seed, the association will continue to produce beet, mangel, rutabaga and kale seed, all of which grow and mature well in the Puget Sound country.

The Late D. I. Bushnell's Will.

The will of the late David I. Bushnell, of St. Louis, Mo., whose death was recorded in our issue of May 7, has been filed for probate. It contains bequests amounting to more than $508,000, to relatives, friends and public objects.

To his son, Prof. David I. Bushnell, Jr., of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., $100,000 is bequeathed, as are Mr. Bushnell's collections of coins and postage stamps, and the "first shirt I ever wore." A brother, S. H. Bushnell and Arthur I. Hoye, a nephew, of Sheffield, Mass., are each the recipients of $100,000. To Raymond Hoyt, also of Sheffield.

A New Pot Plant ISOLOMA (Hirsutum Multiflorum Hybridum).

The large leaves, which are of a texture similar to those of the Gloxinia, are of a rich dark green; the reverse of them, as well as the flower stalks are covered with bright red hair, which renders them very attractive. The flowers are produced in abundance and in various colors and color combinations, white, orange, yellow and scarlet. The plants grow from 12 to 18 inches high, are bushy and require no staking. Their culture is similar to that of the Gloxinia and other Gesneriaceas. Their constitution is very robust which enables them to thrive in living rooms. This is a most desirable pot plant and florists will do well to get familiar with it. Trade pkt., $1.00

Pommer, an executor, is left $5,000 to be distributed among drivers and porters for the firm. Various other amounts are bequeathed to distant relatives and friends.

The chief public bequest aggregating $50,000, are distributed among St. Louis charities, the will stipulating, however, that the Young Men's Christian Association and the St. Louis Provident Association should not be included in the distribution. A preference was expressed in the same clause of the will for the Salvation Army, homes for the aged persons and children. An oil painting of Marquette was bequeathed to the Missouri Historical Society. Churches, Congregational, Methodist, Episcopal and Catholic, are liberally remembered.

The executors of the estate are Robt. W. Pommer, Henry A. Baker and Fred B. Chamberlain. They are directed to divide the residue pro rata among those receiving cash bequests. It is provided that any heir contesting the will is to forfeit his or her bequest.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

NURSERYMEN in northern Illinois have sustained heavy loss by the freezing of the young growths of specimen evergreens May 14-15.

PRESIDENT HARDING, from his desk at the White House, opened by telephone the first annual California orange show at Anaheim, Calif., May 17.

Michigan Parks.

LANSING, May 17.—Since its creation by the legislature of 1919, the state park commission has accepted gifts from various individuals, municipalities and counties of some 2,000 acres of land.

Twenty-one of these state parks have been set apart and will be ready for the use of the public by June 15, according to the office of the commission here. These beauty spots have been set aside by the state as out-of-door playgrounds for the people of Michigan and tourists. Fishing is permitted and nuts, fruits, berries and flowers may be gathered in any of the parks, so long as they are not to be marketed.

Forest Protection Week.

Forest fires during the five years ending 1920 devastated an area much greater in extent than that occupied by the New England states, and occasioned a loss of more than $85,000,000. Because the destruction of our forests by fire spells disaster unless the rate of burning is materially checked, Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, has written the governors of all states requesting their co-operation in the nation-wide observance of Forest Protection Week, May 22-28, recently proclaimed by President Harding. In this letter Mr. Wallace urges the governors to set apart this week for the purpose of such educational and instructive exercises as shall bring to the people the serious effects of the present unnecessary waste by forest fires.

Diervilla or Weigelias.

The Korean Diervilla florida is one of the species which has played an important part in the evolution of the diervillas or weigelias of gardens, and many of its hybrids and varieties have been propagated by nurserymen. The wild type of the species, if it is still cultivated in Europe, is a rare plant, and the arboretum is fortunate in having raised plants from the seeds collected by Wilson during his recent journey in Korea. These are now flowering for the first time and their pure pink flowers promise to make it one of the most attractive of all the diervillas. It has bloomed three or four days earlier than its variety venusta, another Korean plant, which until this spring has been the first diervilla in the collection to flower. This variety has generally been considered here the handsomest of all diervillas, but the flowers are not as pure pink as those of the type.

Diervilla Middendorfiana var. Maximowiczii is flowering this year on Hickory path near Centre street. This is the Japanese variety of the yellow-flowered diervilla of eastern Siberia and northern Japan, and a common shrub on the mountain slopes of central Hondo where it grows from five to 15 feet tall. The large pale yellow or yellowish green flowers are attractive but not as showy as those of the species with more highly colored flowers. The Siberian form just lives here, and has resisted the efforts of more than 20 years to induce it to bloom in the arboretum.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 9, 1921.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Wm. Lubliner has moved his flower shop from 31 Grand avenue to 413 Grand avenue.

CINCINNATI, O.—Gustave Meyer of the Hyde Park Rose Co., died recently. He had been connected with the florists' industry for over 20 years in this city.

NOGALES, ARIZ.—The Tucson Greenhouses recently opened a branch establishment at 313½ Morley avenue, specializing in shrubs, trees, bedding plants and cut flowers.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

Louis F. Miller, Toledo, O., President; A. J. Dooley, Cook County, Ill., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids Mich., Treas.

It is reported that Delaware tomato growers will not plant at low prices suggested.

THE season's movement of vegetables thus far is considerably in excess of last year's at this time.

THE French now till 7,250,000 acres of the 8,900,000 acres of French soil upturned for trenches during the war.

FROST in Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Minnesota, May 14-15, caused much damage to fruit and early vegetables.

SENATOR TRAMMELL, of Florida, has introduced a resolution in the senate designed to direct the senate committee on interstate commerce to investigate the present high freight rates being charged on citrus fruits, vegetables and other perishable farm products, with a view to bringing about early legislation that will result in a reduction of the existing freight rates on such perishable products.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 17.—Cucumbers, 2 dozen box, $3.25 to $3.75; leaf lettuce, per doz., 35 cents.

New York, May 13.—Cauliflower per dozen, $2 to $6; cucumbers, 50 to $1.75 per dozen; mushrooms, per basket, 50 cents to $1.65; radishes, 100 bunches, $3.00 to $8.00; tomatoes per pound, 10 to 25 cents.

Texas Spinach.

The Texas farmer sells the spinach he raises for $5 a ton. The railroad carries it to Chicago for $30.66 a ton. The consumer of the spinach in Chicago gets it on his dining table at the rate of $800 a ton.

The farmer gets $5 out of a ton of "greens," the railroad gets six times that amount for hauling it, and somebody in between the farmer and the eater gets 60 times what the farmer receives.

Peanut Convention.

Growers, packers and manufacturers gathered in Chicago May 16 to give three patriotic cheers for that 100 per cent American, the peanut.

As the United Peanut Association they are celebrating the national nut's birthday and arranging a program of publicity intended to put such upstarts as the almond and the walnut in their proper places.

The peanut, they proclaimed from headquarters in the Congress hotel, is as American as the Indian. Even its name is native, for other countries know it only as the goober or the earth nut. It is the chief support of baseball, the ace in the hole of the circus and the only good excuse ever offered for the country fair.

"Careless persons," said John F. Bitner of the Suffolk Peanut Company, 'may use the adjective 'peanut' to express contempt, but in truth the lady on the dollar is not more honestly American."

Before they complete their convention here the peanut delegates will ask for a protective tariff against the oriental earth nut, an inferior alien cousin. Peanut growers and manufacturers of peanut butter are now working for the tariff.

According to John Fleming of the Weatherford Peanut mills, the industry in America, exclusive of imported products, averages $75,000,000 in business annually.

Cranberry Disease Control.

Long continued growing of cranberries on the same land under the same conditions has favored the development and spread of certain diseases, some of which at present are unknown or rarely found on wild cranberries. Because these diseases are gradually spreading and becoming more destructive, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture conducted a series of experiments with the most serious of them in order to determine control measures. These diseases are described and control measures given in farmers' bulletin No. 1081, entitled "Cranberry Diseases and Their Control."

The average annual cranberry crop of the United States is about 500,000 barrels, valued at $3,000,000. The total loss from disease is estimated to average 25 per cent, or $750,000 a year. Of this loss about 10 per cent occurs before the fruit is picked and 15 per cent after picking. The loss seems to be greater in the southern localities, for the longer summers and higher average temperatures are apparently less favorable to the production of hardy cranberry plants, while they seem more favorable to the development of certain serious fungous parasites.

The principal fungous diseases can be largely prevented by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, according to the bulletin. The large losses due to smothering can be avoided by proper methods and conditions of picking, storing, and handling the fruit. Berries should be picked dry or dried immediately after picking. They should be kept in a cool, well-ventilated place, handled carefully to prevent bruising, and packed preferably in bushel or half-barrel boxes.

Much can be done to prevent the development and spread of fungous diseases and increase the vigor and resistance of the vines by carefully regulating the water supply of the bog during the growing season. Many growers, according to the bulletin, keep the bogs too wet, especially on rich peat bottoms. This tends to produce an excessive growth of vines and favors fungous diseases. Regular and judicious pruning should be practiced whenever the growth of vines is heavy. The prunings, unless used for planting, should be burned in order to prevent spread of the fungi, which soon develop on them and furnish a source of infection.

Though little attention has been given to the selection and breeding of varieties, the bulletin suggests that when resistant varieties, it is known that some are more susceptible to disease than others. In general, the smaller, firmer-fruited varieties are less subject to rot than those bearing larger berries. New plantings are being made, growers should use varieties that have proven most healthy in their locality.

Fredericton, N. B.

Mothers' Day trade was a great success here. White carnations sold at $3 to $4 per dozen and white roses bought $4 to $5 for the same quantity. The fact that a quantity of this stock was imported from Boston, Mass., increased the prices considerably. Pot plants also had a good sale. Some of the florists had stands in the drug stores, which greatly increased business. It is gratifying to note the hold Mothers' Day is taking on the public in Canada. Telegraph orders were exceptionally good. There has been a considerable increase in hospital and funeral work.

Ageratum Fraseri
We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 6 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ½ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.
Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.
2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $ 6.00 per 100.
3-inch, 1.50 per doz.; 10.00 per 100.

A Popular Callahan Design.

Here is a Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse that is popular with both florists and market gardeners. It is a very economical house to erect and is staunch, sturdy and good looking.

It is built in three widths, which lend themselves well to convenient benching arrangement. The widths (D) are 20 ft. 6 ins., 24 ft., and 27 ft. 6 ins.

The sidewalls (A) may be of concrete or lumber of any height desired. Dimensions A and B are variable at the discretion of the buyer. Dimension C is governed by the width of the house, the pitch being 7 to 12. The detail sections shown are (1) Single Member Plate, (2) Two-Member Plate, (3) Side Gutter, (4) Center Gutter.

Write for estimate on your new house. We can save you money.

THE JUNE WEDDINGS.

Outdoor Weddings.

June is, by common accord, the most important wedding month of the year. Nature is at its best and all out-doors is in blossom. Trees with their luxurious foliage, and the emerald green of the fields, the rose, the queen of flowers, with its rich and gorgeous blooms, and the clouds of color formed by the cluster laden sprays of its climbing varieties, add so much to the lawns of suburban residences. It is nature's welcome to the fairest flower of all, the June bride.

With perfect weather there is no more beautiful ceremony than the outdoor afternoon wedding in June. The green velvety lawn with the background of shrubbery and borders gay with color, provides a perfect setting for the floral altar. An enclosure canopied with laurel wreathing is fitted with chairs, so that the guests may be seated formally and view the ceremony as comfortably as in church. A wide path to this temporary arbor from the dwelling is outlined with palms and hydrangeas, or green covered posts connected with strands of laurel, and each finished with a bunch of flowers.

The chancel should be a bower of white and pink flowering roses, made to look as natural in arrangement as if growing. There should be a platform one foot in height covered with green denim. This must have sufficient space for the entire wedding party. A rather elaborate decorated Prie Dieu behind which the clergyman stands to perform the ceremony gives the necessary finish.

Should it rain the wedding must be transferred to the house, which at all events must present a good decorative effect to receive the guests, and can readily be made more elaborate with the stock that was to be used outside. With the palms and rambler roses, a charming bower can be arranged at one end of the largest room. All doorways and arches should be decorated with oak leaved branches and rambler rose sprays. The oak leaves are a very good substitute for southern smilax and will last very well if soaked in tubs of water the night before. The same material will make an effective showing on the stair or bannister railings.

Different color schemes for each room offer pleasing surprises. Pink roses and larkspur are good, Mrs. Chas. Russell roses and white snapdragons are striking; yellow snapdragons and white lupines make a choice combination. White and yellow daisies are dainty where not much is desired. Generous vases of peonies will be found effective in the halls and lower rooms.

Mirrors and mantels are vantage points for the artistic decorator and can be handled in many ways. A good effect is made with vases of several heights from 18 inches at one end, down to a rose bowl at the other. Longer roses in the tall vase can be continued up over the top of the mirror, while the other vases carry the decoration gradually lower and over the other end of the mantel. The mantel shelf can be filled in between the vases with oak leaves and sprays of sprengeri and rambler roses.

When the bridal couple and their attendants are served with refreshments in a separate room, the table is generally decorated in white. White roses, lupines and sweet peas are appropriate and can be arranged attractively in three vases with a spraying on the cloth to connect them.

The Church Wedding.

Possibly there are no two church edifices exactly alike; they vary in size and interior arrangement so that each has to have its own decorative scheme worked out to get the best artistic effect. In general, however, the vantage points are the chancel and altar in some churches, and the pulpit platform in others. The middle or main aisle, the columns if any, and the front of the balcony or galleries the window sills, the vestibule entrance, and the baptismal font all make good decorative returns.

In churches with altar and chancel, there should be a profusion of flowers in the vases on the altar and a banking of cibotiums on either side. The cibotium is now recognized as one of the best of decorative plants. A pair of extra large vases, kept for state occasions, standing boldly out on each side of the ferns and elaborately filled with long stemmed roses, peonies, Easter lilies or snapdragons, will be very striking.

Palms and hydrangeas can be used here giving an entirely different effect. Where there is a rood screen or other railing at the front of the chancel this can be fully decorated with cut flowers or banked with blooming plants, all kept below the top of the railing so as not to obstruct the view of the wedding ceremony.

The main aisle can be treated in a number of ways, with a series of decorated arches, with standards, surmounted with flowers, or supporting mossed pots of cibotiums giving a tree fern effect. Clusters of flowers at each pew end tied with ribbons, or only the pews reserved for invited guests, is a popular form of decoration.

Where the ceremony is performed at the head of the main aisle in front of the pulpit platform, several pews are usually taken out to make room for an elevated stage a foot high, sufficiently large for the bridal party. In the center of this is placed the decorated prie dieu or kneeling stool. The window ledges are banked with foliage and flowering plants, which are also used in other places as the work is more or less elaborate.

The Bridal Bouquets.

One of the most important features of the wedding are the flowers for the bride and her maids. Dainty and beautiful as are the dresses of the bridal party, it is the well selected, artistically arranged bouquets that give life and color and add the necessary finish to the costume. There is an infinite variety in the flowers to be used and their arrangement, everything seasonable being appropriate. First choice with many will be roses either by themselves or in combination with other flowers. The bride's bunch will be of white with lilies of the valley, either in colonial full round, half cluster or full shower effect.

The maid of honor carries American Beauties or red roses, while the maid's bunches are of pink roses in clusters to carry over the arm. The flower girls are given baskets or small hats filled with smaller pink roses. The ribbons had best match the flowers in color, it being as a rule very difficult to get the same shades as the dresses.

Next to pink, yellow is a popular color, when yellow roses, snapdragons and yellow daisies are in order. These can be arranged in bouquets or in ribboned hats to carry on the arms. Selected sprays of snapdragons in clusters, borne in the same way, are effective. The flower girls carry baskets of yellow pansies. A pretty effect is to have them strew these in the path of the bride.

Where the gowns are mauve colored, lavender sweet peas in hat baskets or spray bunches are appropriate. Light blue hydrangeas are also wonderfully effective. These latter are also carried with the pink costumes, making a beautiful color contrast.

Shepherd's staffs tied with appropriately colored flowers, in a cluster near the top are also carried, where it is desired to have something different. Then there are satchel baskets that hang at the side supported by a ribbon over the shoulder. Floral muffs to be used as bouquets are not difficult to make over light wire frames and in their novelty are quite effective.

The old colonial style is very effective for the bride's bouquet. White orchids, orange blossoms, lilies of the valley, gardenias, small white roses, white snapdragons, and swainsona, the flowers artistically placed in circles and finished with a silk lace bouquet holder, is sure to be much admired.

The full shower bunch is still very popular. As frequently seen the main body of the bunch is too round and compact, the shower being but a fringe of very long ribbons tied with a few flowers. The correct form is a half cluster rather compact but loosely arranged, which is then given the shower effect with tule or chiffon and narrow ribbons. The chiffon is cut diagonally in eight to 12 inch lengths, doubled and wired in the middle, and then pulled through the flowers of the bouquet with the diagonal edges standing above so as not to conceal the buds. There must not be too much used but enough to give a light fluffy appearance. Then a bolt of No. 2 satin taffeta is tied to the flowers in and on the outer edges of the bunch. This is done without cutting the ribbon, commencing at one side and making loops of varying lengths at each tie. These are then cut, not in the center of the loops but so that when they hang free, the ends of the ribbons will present a symmetrical finish. Small flowers are then tied on the ribbons to make a generous showing, giving to the whole a complete shower effect.

A daisy wedding is popular at this time, the maids all carrying shower bunches of these dainty blossoms. All sweet peas are also favorites, the bride carrying white, with pink for the maids.

The boutonnieres for the ushers, can be made of pompons of white carnations, lily of the valley or sweet peas, or a single rose or gardenia. The groom's boutonniere should be of the same flowers as carried by the bride.

Commencement Flowers.

In every community, the closing exercises of the schools, and in cities where there are seminaries, universities and colleges, are certain to create a demand for flowers, which in the hands of the enterprising and energetic members of the trade can be worked into a business of considerable importance. These annual exercises are all fixed events covering a week and sometimes more from class days to commencement, each day bringing a greater or less demand for decorations or cut flowers. Many of the trade do not see the advantage or possibilities in the business that, properly encouraged, would result in a much greater demand. They are satisfied with what in a measure is forced on them when with a little well-directed exertion on their part they might double their sales.

The first events are the class days at which there is or should be a demand for decorations. It is the business of the florist not to let such an opportunity pass without making a bid, and showing how a few plants and flowers would add to the occasion. Sometimes it will be hard work to get the committee to see it as you do, while others are glad of the suggestion and give the order at once. Class days at ladies' seminaries are frequently quite elaborate, as in most cases each member carries a bouquet, all of which are alike, being made of the class flower, such as all red roses, all pink sweet peas, daisies, etc., and such orders are usually placed as a whole with one firm, and often run into considerable sums of money.

On commencement day each scholar as a rule receives gifts from friends, most of which are flowers. This beautiful custom can be largely increased by well prepared propaganda, extolling the beauty of flowers to carry and express congratulations and best wishes to the graduates. Well prepared circulars sent to the parents and relatives of the students, the addresses of whom can be obtained from the school lists or from an interested student, who for a small consideration would be glad to work up this detail.

The floral arrangements for gifts are now for the most part vase baskets which enable the stems of the flowers to be placed in water. For occasions of this kind it is best to fill the tins or water containers with moss or at least well packed in, over the top to prevent splashing. The suggestion of a box of flowers that are sure to keep fresh and can be placed in water at home, will often meet with approval. Great care should be taken with addresses in seeing to initials and proper spelling and legibility of names, so that each order shall reach its proper owner. The donor's cards should also be firmly attached in an eyeletted envelope that will not become loosened in the handling.

Flowers sent to all such public gatherings should be accompanied by a list of the addresses which the person receiving can check up and receipt for. This is then a record of delivery which proves to a doubting customer, who has failed to receive an acknowledgment, that the flowers as ordered were sent.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The coming week ends the period of preparation for the last floral holiday of the season, and every effort should be made to have the stock full and in ready display when the actual buying commences. Sales will start early this year, as many will visit the cemetery on Sunday, it being so close to Memorial Day, which is an advantage, as it relieves somewhat the congestive buying on Monday. It is not yet too late for a last minute post card reminding customers of the day, and a request that orders be given early.

It frequently happens that at the busy holiday times when one wonders how they are ever going to get through, that a lot of funeral orders are received, which at any other time would be gladly welcomed, but now are looked upon as an additional burden to the already heavy load. They must be attended to however and in the orders taken all set pieces, which require stemming of flowers and tedious construction, should be avoided. A clever salesman can control the demands of his customers so as to best meet the requirements of his time and stock, and in this way greatly expedite the work.

COURTESY.

One of the greatest factors in securing the good will of customers is courtesy, and in all transactions a willingness to please and "nothing too much trouble" manner, that is not forced but unmistakably genuine. Frequently customers are in a hurry and appreciate immediate attention, far too often they are allowed to stand waiting, while clerks are talking together or doing some trifling thing that should have been dropped at once. They must not be approached with that brusque "what do you want" manner, but with a pleasant smile and cheerful good morning or afternoon, which will be returned and most likely their wants immediately made known. Some people are very hard to please, taking quite a while to make up their minds as to just what they want, and in the matter of cut flowers will often doubt if they are quite fresh. There must be no annoyance shown to this rather tiresome procedure, but always a pleasant answer that finally wins their confidence and the order is placed. Courtesy is one of the greatest assets in business and a smiling force of salespeople, from the head of the establishment down to the errand boys, is a "we strive to please" combination that is sure to win out.

KEEPING THE CUSTOMERS INFORMED.

Comparatively few retailers circularize their trade or strive to get in touch with them in any way except when they, of their own volition, visit the shop. When the trade of a customer has been secured, his business is one of the store's assets and in every way possible he should be encouraged to visit and make the store his own. Every one who is interested in flowers will be glad to know of this or that seasonable favorite that is now in season and the first flowers of which have arrived. The little display of cut roses containing some new varieties will be visited with pleasure, as will also the store's exhibits of dahlias and later chrysanthemums. How best to keep cut flowers and some instructions as to their arrangement in simple table decorations will be well received, as will hints on the culture of plants in the house.

When flowers are plentiful and a special sale is on, many more flowers will be sold when every customer is informed of the opportunity presented. These notices can go out weekly, semi-monthly or monthly, taking the form of special post cards, leaflets or folders, all of which can be mailed for one cent. This is direct advertising to a list of customers who are certain to be interested and will lead to greatly increased business. Leaflets advertising some feature of the business should be enclosed with all bills and letters and in all boxes and packages that are sent from the establishment.

The best wedding season of the year is throughout the month of June and every effort should be made to get as much of this business as possible. Keep these events featured in the window. A decorated Prie Dieu or kneeling stool is always attractive, as is also the bride's shower bunch.

The Store Window.

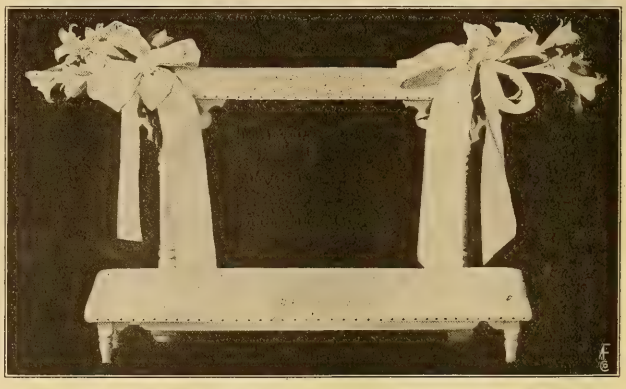
The general majority of retailers do not appreciate the importance of their show window as a factor in creating business. All are on more or less crowded thoroughfares and whether 100 or 1,000 pass the store within the hour, the featuring and display of plants and flowers should be so effective as to attract a certain percentage of the throng, nearly all of whom are possible buyers, causing them to pause and take a look. Some will be satisfied with a mere glance and pass on; others will move up closer for a better view, comment on the display with their friend and move along with a favorable impression of the shop. Some will be so interested that they enter, look around, make inquiries and perhaps a purchase, in which case a new customer is added to the store's list.

Nearly every retail shop arranges or makes a pretense of fixing up the window. Fifty per cent put in a few plants, a fibre jar of callas, Easter lilies or a bunch or two of carnations and perhaps a few bunches of sweet peas or bulbous flowers. At times these are taken out, a few or a bunch at a time, and the empty jars stand sometimes for a day. Not over 20 per cent of the retail florists of any community are really alive to their opportunities. These men have real flower shops, carry at all times reasonable stocks, which are invitingly displayed and featured in every possible way. Whether they cater to a high or medium class of trade their service and flowers are all that can be desired; they make a bid for business and their stores are thronged at all times. The other 30 per cent have their in and out days, one period very busy, so much so that the window gets no attention at all, and then so dull that it is not worth while to waste any flowers on it, as there is no business; or the window is banked up with ferns or flowering plants, a mass of flowers and greens, but having no distinctive feature to catch the eye.

It is the decorative effect, the bold head lines so to speak, that attracts the attention, and holds the observer long enough to take in the details. The store stands in the identical spot the year round, many of the same people passing by, week in and week out. Without anything in particular to make it noticeable or attractive it would be no more to them than any other shop in the block. If, however, its arrangement is changed every few days; all red and green at one time, a pink and blue effect at another, followed by all yellow, then a window of spring flowers and succeeded by a display of birthday suggestions, an aroused interest will be attained. A stork window, a special in small vase baskets of sweet peas, daffodils or calendulas, all artistically arranged to show to the best advantage, will have a decided effect upon the public.

DRAPERY EFFECTS.

There are a number of accessories wonderfully helpful in giving variety



THE JUNE WEDDINGS.
Prie-Dieu by J. H. Small & Son, Washington, D. C., and New York.

to the decoration of the window. A series of Porto Rico mats in blue, yellow, pink, green and white, sufficient in number to cover the floor of the window, give striking color effects. Velveteen and other drapery can be used with good artistic effects. Baskets of pink roses, peas, or carnations will stand out splendidly in a light blue mat covering. White on yellow is effective. Daffodils on a green ground are also good. With a deep blue the calendula is well brought out. Decorated flowering pot plants also look better for such color combinations.

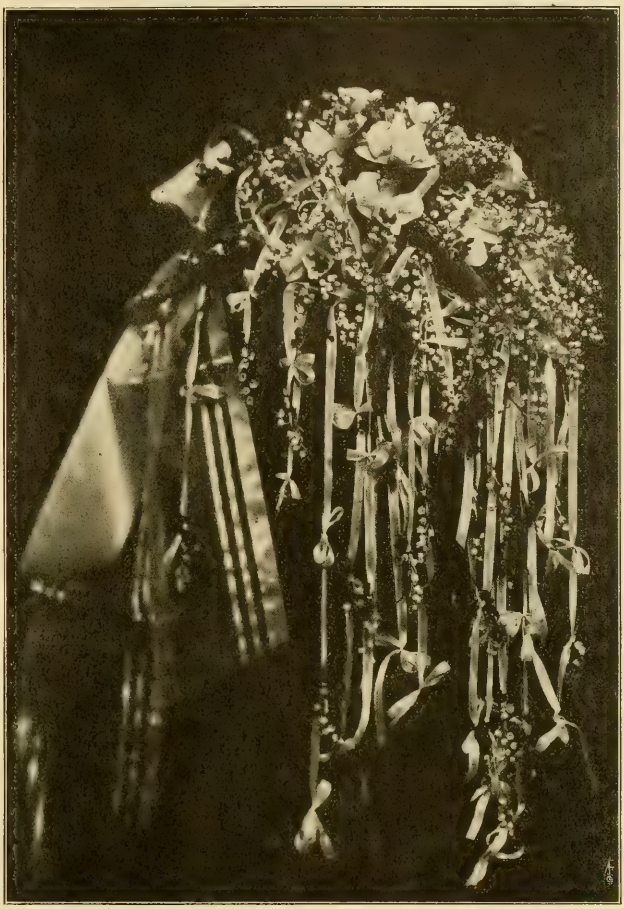
One of the most compelling features in attracting the attention are explanatory cards. These contain but a short sentence such as, "The first of the season," "Laddie, the largest carnation," "When words fail," Say it with Flowers," "Take home a box of spring flowers," "A bit of cheer for the sick room," and short descriptive lines on the display. People will stop a moment to read these sentences which should be neatly printed on cards about six by 10 inches. A window generally productive of good results, features a sale of cut flowers in popular priced boxes: these take up the space, some few filled with the lids off, other tied up and decorated as if filled and tagged, ready to go, and some empty with the covers on. The effect when attractively arranged, is of a window full of cut flowers just like those exposed in the few that are open. The little explantory card and the price does the rest.

A special on ferns is sure to attract attention. The explanatory card and the price marked, "special," leads people to believe they must be a bargain which for all sales of this character they should be. Picture frames, second hand, that can be bought at art stores for a small sum, can be brought out frequently to fill in for late night effects. Just a vase of flowers or basket is given an entirely different look when encased in such a frame. With a piece or two of silk or velvetine drapery the picture can be made quite realistic. When the store is closed and a spot light thrown on the frame, pedestrians across the street will come over to have a better view.

The principal thing to keep in mind is that every display must feature something striking, a little out of the ordinary, not always new, but presented if possible in some novel way, so as to attract attention. A collection of eight to 10 different plants or cut flowers will not be noticed like a window full of all one kind. In this case, it is the mass of color and the fact of so many of one thing that excites the curiosity.

Prepared Magnolia and Autumn Leaves

The dyeing and treatment of foliage of all kinds has attained a perfection that at one time seemed almost impossible. Oak and birch branches are now offered in such seeming natural condition, that one marvels at the wonderful preservation. Magnolia leaves have been prepared and dyed a bronze color in shade almost exactly like that of the frost-tinted galax, and with qualities that seem almost everlasting. This latter foliage has become one of the most popular for working up into all kinds of funeral designs. Wreaths of magnolia leaves are to be found in stock everywhere, except in some of the high class shops, where all artificial or prepared stock is tabooed. We question, however, wherether anything has ever been introduced that has been more profitable to the average retail florist than the prepared magnolia. No matter how long they may have been "kicking about" the shop, if given a rub up, they look as good as new and are at once ready for use. Wreaths and other designs can be made up and stored away in a dry place that will keep an indefinite time. With these to draw upon there is always stock on hand for hurried orders, especially at holiday seasons.



BRIDE'S SHOWER BOUQUET OF CATTLEYAS AND LILY OF THE VALLEY.
By George M. Geraghty, Toronto, Ont.

The magnolia wreath, with its artificial flower decoration, is now inseperably connected in many parts of the country with Memorial day, many thousands of these wreaths being sold for the decoration of the graves of soldiers and others. Having a well mossed frame, the making up of the wreath is very simple. The leaves are stemmed to sticks, one at a time, with No. 23 wire and stuck into the frame, one over lapping the other, much the same as the galax. The leaves without stemming, pinned to the frame with the ordinary greening or fern pins, makes the best job. Some outline the edges first with the largest leaves. In this work it is best to sort them into about three sizes, with the largest for the outer edge, then the medium and the smallest for the center. A rosette of several leaves, doubled up and wired, give a finish to where the full ends of the crescent wreath come together.

Oak leaves also make a very pretty wreath and are particularly suitable for the funeral of elderly persons. These can be laid flat or stemmed as the galax and more loosely arranged. In the fall, bronze pompon chrysanthemums and autumn leaves are a combination that is seasonable and very effective.

For almost all kinds of stemming the large match or stemming sticks are the best. They are to be had wired or plain, blunt or pointed, dyed green or natural, which latter is preferred as they seldom show and the dye frequently runs when wet.

PLANT NOTES.

Winter-Flowering Geraniums.

With all growers having a greenhouse and doing a retail business there is in the fall a good demand for pot geraniums for house culture. Plants lifted from the open ground and potted in the fall are not very satisfactory, for the plants recover from the later transplanting slowly and go out of bloom and often do not flower again until spring. It is better to grow plants for this purpose in pots through the summer, and these, with good culture, will bloom all winter long if in a sunny position. Cuttings taken at this time, will make nice stock for this purpose, or small plants left over after the spring sales can be used. The plants should be potted firmly, so that they will make a short, stocky growth, and kept well pinched back throughout the summer, that as many branches may be procured as is possible. All buds should be picked off as soon as formed, allowing no blooms until the plants are firmly established in blooming pots, in which they should be planted the last of August. A 6-inch pot makes the best size for house culture, and the plant can be easily grown so that it will fill this size nicely. A frame outside is the most convenient and best place for growing them through the summer.

Cinerarias.

The sowing of cinerarias is better done in June than later. Many postpone this until July, but during the extremely hot days of that month it is often difficult to obtain good germination, and the seed pans or boxes will have to be watched carefully or they will become dry and the young seedlings burn off. The soil should be well shaded until the young seedlings show themselves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as the plants have one or two well defined leaves they should be potted in small pots and given a nice, dry position near the glass, which should be shaded, but care should be taken that the young stock does not get drawn. Always bear in mind that the one thing in growing cinerarias to be on the watch for is the aphis. These insects quickly infest these plants and rapidly suck the life out of them. Constant fumigation will keep them in check, but if not attended to regularly it will be time and money thrown away to attempt their culture. Cineraria hybrida is the variety most grown, and these are obtainable in some elegant strains with large high-colored flowers. The Cineraria stellata is much larger and more rapid growing plant which is very showy but is not so well adapted for house culture when in flower.

Ardisias.

One of the most popular berried plants for Christmas is the ardisia, but it is not grown as generally as it should be, the production being left to a few plant growers, for it is of very easy culture, the only drawback being that it is of very slow growth. When the seeds of the old plants are thoroughly ripe, they should be sown. They germinate slowly, and should be sown about an inch apart, in rows the same distance apart, and they can be left in the seed box until early summer and plotted in 2½ or 3 inch pots and grown in a warm, lightly shaded location. They should be potted in good fibrous loam and kept in a moist, close house, that all the growth possible may be obtained at this time, for the plant naturally checks in winter. In early spring these young plants will flower and produce a crop of berries for the next winter. The plants that have been grown for three years or more have generally passed the ornamental stage, for they lose their leaves and have a "leggy" appearance. When they reach this stage the tops can be rooted and fine plants obtained. This can best be done at this time of the year by cutting into the stem and wrapping the cut with wet moss firmly tied around. Keep the plants in a warm, close atmosphere and the moss continually damp, and in four or five weeks new roots will grow in the moss, when the tops can be cut off and potted, still keeping the plant in the same temperature until new growths start. This operation will not in any way interfere with the plants blooming, for they frequently set an abundance of buds while the top is making new roots. The brown scale is the greatest enemy of ardisias, even in the young stage, and they must be removed at once when found, for they sap the growth of the plant. The older plants should be frequently sponged with a strong nicotine solution.

Small Ferns.

The fern spores that were sown in late winter should now be in condition to transplant into flats. It will be difficult to separate the plants yet into individual specimens, but little clumps can be lifted with a toothpick and planted in flats about an inch apart. The flats or boxes should not be deep; about an inch and a half of soil is sufficient. The soil should be composed of two parts or live loam and one part leaf mold, with a generous sprinkling of sand, and sifted through a fine sieve. The flats should be placed in a moist house that is well shaded and the walks kept well wet down all through the hot weather. If a nice, warm, moist temperature is maintained the plants themselves will not require much watering, only light sprinklings, and they will very rapidly root into the new soil and send forth their fronds. If the grower has not grown his own ferns, it is a good time now to place an order for them with the fern specialists, for they can be purchased at very low prices and they are very easily grown on, and where there are many fern dishes to be filled in the fall the difference in cost of the young plants lifted from the flats in midsummer and those purchased out of small pots in the fall is considerable. A thousand or more of this small stock does not take up much space and will be disposed of before the bench room is needed in the winter.

GLADIOLUS AMERICA AND CRESTED FERNS ON MAGNOLIA WREATH.

Peonies.

The work on these plants is not by any means finished when the blooms are cut, for they must be taken care of to insure a good crop for another year. Where the plants are grown in rows the constant traveling has packed the soil down hard, and the ground should be given a good cultivation in order to lighten it up. The weeds should be kept down all summer and not allowed to rob the soil of its richness. If the plants were severely cut in harvesting the bloom, so that there is not much foliage left on them, it is well to spread a mulch of strawy manure on the surface. This is often the case with the officinalis varieties, which do not make the heavy growth of the later varieties, and, as it is natural for the roots of the peonies to have the shade of the heavy foliage of the plants during the summer, the cutting of the stems and foliage of these varieties robs the roots of this, and a mulch that will protect the ground from the hot summer sun is very beneficial and will also reduce the labor of weeding. Any old blooms left on the plant should be cut and thrown away. Plants that have become broken down by high winds or heavy rains should be tied up in shape.

Solanums.

These little Christmas plants should not be allowed to stand around in the hot greenhouses, badly pot bound and drying up every day for they will grow hard, and it cannot be expected to obtain a good plant under these conditions. They will stand lots of abuse and do fairly well, and that is the reason, probably, that they are so often neglected during the busy days. But it is much better to plant them out in the field than to carry them along in this condition. They can easily be handled in this manner, lifting them early in the fall. They will need to be kept pinched back into shape—any strong leading shoots should be cut back when they are soft. They can be planted fairly close together, and will need frequent cultivation. If there is no suitable outside location where they can be planted out, they can be plunged in a frame and potted up as it becomes necessary, but outside treatment of some kind is far preferable to the greenhouse, which is too warm, unless shaded, and they make better growth and bloom more freely in the bright sunlight.

Primulas.

The young primulas that were sown early should now be in 3-inch pots and be given as cool and airy a location as possible. To get the best growth on these plants, they should never be subjected to great heat, for the species are naturally cool growing plants on the edges of the woodland, in their native state. Outside in a frame with a lath covering is the best place that they can be grown, the pots sunk in the soil even with the rim. In potting these plants they should be placed in the soil deep enough for them to stand firmly; they will not stand deep potting, but many growers do not pot them deeply enough, and they frequently get turned over sideways during watering. They must be watered carefully, and preferably with a can with a fine rose. The later sowings will have to be carried on in the houses until they are large enough to be placed outside. They will have to be shaded, but do not shade them heavily enough to cause them to get drawn.

The Membership Drive.

The drive for increased membership in the society is moving apace. Many enthusiastic members are living up to the slogan of "Every member get a member," as is noted in our administration offices by the memberships sent in. There are few communities in this country where a florist is not on the best of terms with his neighbors in the trade, and if that florist is already a member, few words are or should be required to make those outside the fold interested in our organization and our work. The membership fee is so small, and the possibilities for benefit so great that, really, argument should not be a necessity. Here is our society, organized and standing for the advancement of our industry in every direction likely to be productive of good—and, it may be said, the elimination of everything likely to be derogatory, ready to take up the problems of the individual members of the trade in so far as they have a bearing on those of the whole trade, without cost, and with a backing in the trade which, even today, is powerful. "What is the extent of your representation?" is usually the first question asked of our delegations when seeking legislation to advance our industry, or relief from legislation likely to prove to our disadvantage. We can hardly hope ever to claim that we are 100 per cent representative of our industry, but we can and must advance beyond our present standing, and if this membership drive attains its object, we shall not have to be ashamed of our statistics as to trade representation.

The National Flower Show.

A most enthusiastic meeting of the Cleveland O., local executive committee which is arranging details covering the 1922 National Flower Show to be held in that city next spring, was held in Cleveland on May 19. The secretary is compelled to withhold an account of that session for a few days, but it may be said that the aims of the National Flower Show Committee were found quite possible of accomplishment, and the arrangements in progress vigorously prosecuted.

National Publicity Campaign.

Over $500 was paid into the publicity fund last week, swelling the total for the year to $24,461.10. The following were the subscriptions made of record:

The publicity committee are in hopes of being able to resume the national advertising very shortly now. They are compelled to see that the necessary funds to cover the contracts now under consideration are available when completion of these contracts on their part is called for. The advertisements in publications such as it is found desirable to use are printed in editions which go to press some weeks in advance of the date of issue, hence the anxiety of the committee in regard to speedy fulfillment of the guarantees of our subscribers.

The Washington Convention.

Reservations of space in the trade exhibition at the Washington, D. C., Convention continue to come in and at this time, approximately 11 weeks in advance of the convention dates, a goodly portion of the space available has been reserved. Nine reservations were made last week, the exhibitors being as follows:

W. M. Woodruff & Son, Lowgap, N. C.
Lion & Co., New York.
Carl Hagenburger, W. Mentor, O.
C. U. Liggit, Philadelphia.
Duro Paper Products Co., Chicago.
The George Wittbold Co., Chicago.
M. Adler, New York.
Fruitland Nurseries, Augusta, Ga.
Wertheimer Bros., New York.

Membership Committee's Message.

At the suggestion of President Roland and a liberal contribution from an enthusiastic member to cover the expense of a membership drive in the Society of American Florists, a resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the board of directors in Washington, D. C., to have a committee appointed to launch this movement, and the undersigned committee is the result.

Our goal is "To double the membership in 90 days," and our slogan is "Every member get a member." This campaign opened May 15 and closes at convention time in August. It has heretofore been an unwritten rule that a part of every state vice-president's duty was to secure new members. In very rare instances this was adhered to, but in most cases it was entirely overlooked. This is a fine chance for state vice-presidents to prove that they are useful as well as ornamental and we believe they will.

Should the state vice-presidents want more material, circulars or application blanks, kindly write any of the undersigned and they will be forthcoming.

SPOKANE MEETING.

Messrs. J. Fred Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson who are making a Pacific coast trip in the interest of co-operative advertising, held a very successful meeting in Spokane, Wash., May 18. The following were elected members of the local executive board, under the auspices of the Spokane Florists' Club: H. J. Lozier, chairman; John Duncan, secretary-treasurer; C. T. Kipp, E. S. Eugene, F. R. McCormack, A. Rahn, Water E. Peters and H. E. Reimer, members. The movement will be managed in that city by the above named board.

OHIO DISTRICT.

A state meeting of the Ohio District of the National Flower Growers' Association will be held in Columbus on Tuesday, June 21, at 2 p. m., at the Deschler hotel. This session will be held for the purpose of electing permanent officers for the district and appointing a committee to take up the active work of securing data on cost systems for growers and retailers, the standardizing of the grading of cut flowers and plants, legislative matters, co-operative buying of supplies and other important subjects.

American Iris Society.

ANNUAL CONVENTION AND FLOWER SHOW.

The annual meeting and flower show of the American Iris Society, was held in Columbus, O., May 19-21, under the auspices of the Columbus Iris Society. It was the second yearly session, the organization having been formed at the Bronx Botanic gardens, New York, February 1920.

Immense crowds visited the salesrooms of the Oldsmobile Automobile Co., where the exhibitions and executive sessions were held. Hundreds of different hues and colors were seen and the displays were so numerous that some had to be placed in the lobby of the Columbus Library.

All the exhibits were in place ready for the judging, which began May 19, at 11 a. m. Notice of the entries was sent to the iris show committee, care of Professor A. C. Hottes, Columbus. All varieties were named, and in the case of seedlings it was required that they be numbered. The judges were F. P. Mead, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; C. P. Connell, Nashville, Tenn., and B. H. Barr, Wyomissing, Pa.

One of the features of the show was irises grown from seed by the exhibitor, but not introduced to commerce. No prize was given for the best display, but American Iris Society certificates of honorable mention were awarded to all seedlings rated over 80 per cent. The rules provided that to receive that rating a seedling must be distinct, of good height, size and color and each, in its class, should at least compare favorably with the following: Ingeborg, Amas, Mrs. Alan Grey, Pallida, Dalmatica, Alcazar, Caterina, Rhein Nixe, Monsignor, Loreley, King of Iris, Jacquesiana, or Anna Farr. Varieties given the 80 per cent grading were registered and descriptions were filed with the secretary.

FORMER OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

At the annual business session, all of the former officers were re-elected as follows:

President, John C. Wister, Philadelphia, Pa.; Vice-President, William A. Peterson, Chicago; Secretary, R. S. Sturtevant, Wellesley Farms, Mass., and Frank H. Presley, Montclair, N. J., Treasurer. Directors: Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd, Haverford, Pa., and Mrs. E. P. McKinney, Madison, N. J. The regional vice-presidents are I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. J., eastern district; Mrs. Samuel H. Taft, Cincinnati, O., central district; T. A. Kenning, Minneapolis, Minn., northwestern district; C. P. Connell, Nashville, Tenn., southern district; Sydney B. Mitchell, Berkeley, Calif., Pacific coast district; and Dr. E. Bennett, St. Thomas, Ont., Canadian district.

Reports of the secretary showed a total membership of 531 in good standing with applications being received every week. The finances of the society are in excellent condition.

One of the features of the annual meeting was an illustrated talk by John C. Wister, on "The Development and Culture of the Iris." This lecture was illustrated by lantern slides in color and was most interesting. Prof. A. C. Hottes of the Ohio State university also gave a talk on "The Iris" which went into the scientific methods employed in developing this flower. This address showed the wide scope of the author in his work in the university.

A resolution was adopted in which the society went on record as encouraging new seedlings, but discouraged putting these on the market until approval had been secured from experts.

F. M. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O., who displayed more than 250 varieties of iris, is president of the American Poeny Society, and as such will be in charge of the big show to be held soon in conjunction with the annual meeting. Mr. Bonnewitz was the winner of the American Iris Society medal given to the commercial exhibitor making the most comprehensive display in any or all classes. The silver cup presented by Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd, Haverford, Pa., to the amateur making the most comprehensive display in any or all classes was won by Mrs. Dudley Filler, Bexley, O.

EXHIBITORS.

Exhibitors outside of Columbus were: Mrs. J. C. Arbukle, Shepard; Mrs. Samuel H. Taft, Cincinnati; Mrs. J. F. Emigholz, Cincinnati; Miss Marie Williams, Grand View; W. J. Engle & Son, Dayton; Mrs. C. O. Tracy, Bexley; Mrs. W. W. Kirkpatrick, Grandview. Those from Columbus, who had displays included: Mrs. Anna Hess, Calvin Lloyd, E. Main street; Clay W. Roberts, 1430 Eastwood avenue; Mrs. Emma W. Thomas, 2585 W. Broad street; Miss Nellie F. Ustick, 213 Webster Park avenue; Mrs. E. J. Spencer, 1026 Franklin avenue; Mrs. Olive L. Syfert, 1541 Franklin Park, S.; Mrs. W. M. Ritter, 1453 E. Broad street; Mrs. W. S. Pickering, 33 Hoffman avenue; Mrs. Malcolm McDonald, 1038 Franklin avenue; Mrs. J. M. Phillips, 32 W. Woodruff avenue; Mrs. W. E. Postle, 248 S. 17th street; Miss Grace Sherman, 244 N. 20th street; Mrs. C. C. Williams, Mrs. C. F. Butterworth, Mrs. Claude Meeker, Mrs. Hugh Means and Mrs. Raymond Dalzell.—J. W. L.

MARKET GREATLY IMPROVED.

Last week saw a decided improvement in market conditions. The supply of many items of cut flowers has begun to shorten up considerably and the heavy spring cut of roses has also decreased, with demand better. For several days after Mothers' Day stock remained high, owing to light arrivals. The cool weather has been of great benefit to roses. American Beauties are plentiful; Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier, Columbia and Ophelia scarce. Prices are good. Cecile Brunner is now of first class quality, and is in good supply. Short stemmed Ulrich Brunner continues plentiful, but seems to lack the quality of past seasons. Red roses are in good supply as are Irish Elegance and Fireflame. Carnations are plentiful and have dropped back to the old prices. Laddie is scarce. Sweet peas are about the only item that seems to be in over supply this week. Much of the stock is very poor in quality, being decidedly off color. Fancy stock sells readily. Gladioi put in their first appearance of the season this week and were eagerly sought by buyers. The cut is of fine quality with very long stems. The smaller flowered gladioli have also come in but lack quality as yet. Lilium giganteum is getting scarce and prices have advanced. Peonies are among the best sellers. They bring from $8 to $10 per 100. Gardenias are scarce. There is a very strong demand for orchids, with the supply short. There is also excellent call for lily of the valley. This flower is very strongly entrenched in corsage and wedding bouquet work. Iris continues in fairly good supply. There is a scarcity of good snapdragons and all offerings sell out quickly. Lupines also add to the variety. Outdoor perennials are well represented. An increased demand for foliage plants is noted. Rambler roses in pots are seen. Asparagus and adiantums are in large supply. Out of town demand for Decoration Day is starting in earlier than usual, indicating a promise of a large shipping business.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Florists' Association was host to George Beban, noted screen star, at a luncheon at the Palace hotel on May 12. This testimonial to Mr. Beban was in recognition of the great advertising he has given the florist industry through his motion pictures. President Albert O. Stein, in a splendid address, presented Mr. Beban with a valuable scarf pin. In responding, Mr. Beban thanked the members and told them that in his new picture, which he is now preparing, the main scene will be in a flower shop and that a large "Say it with Flowers" sign will be prominently displayed. On the evening of his last appearance here at a local theatre, the association presented him with a large floral panel, eight feet high and four feet wide, representing a single red rose. It was a fine piece of work and the association deserves much credit for its enterprise.

NOTES.

J. F. Ammann and H. V. Swenson of the national publicity committee will arrive in this city June 6. A mass meeting of all branches of the trade has been called for June 7 at Native Sons' hall at 8 p. m. The Retail Florists' Association urges everyone connected with the growing, wholesaling and retailing of plants and cut flowers to be in attendance that evening to perfect a strong organization. Mr. Ammann and Mr. Swenson will make the Hotel St. Francis their headquarters during their stay in this city. They will leave for Los Angeles June 9 to form a similar organization in that city.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been making elaborate showings of peonies during the past week. Large vases of red, pink and white varieties are seen. Victor Podesta says the peony has come to the front with great strides during the past two years and is now one of the indespensible spring favorites. The stock is well grown, proving beyond a doubt that this flower can be profitably produced in this locality.

The issue of "San Francisco Business," published by the Chamber of Commerce, on May 8 was devoted to exploiting the floral industry. Many fine illustrations appeared in the article. Among those contributing were J. A. Axell, Donald McLaren, James T. Lynch, Angelo J. Rossi and Victor Ferrari.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is growing a fine lot of cyclamens and other holiday plants at their greenhouse in San Mateo. Now that they have discontinued the retail flower business they propose to grow plant stock on a large scale. Ericas in variety will continue to be one of their leaders.

One of the most progressive stores in the Mission district is the Castro Flower Shop at 489 Castro street. This store is owned by John Kilroy and E. McMahan. Manager J. Kilroy states that trade has been most satisfactory all season.

J. C. Bell, Costella, Shasta County, shipped 1,200,000 young strawberry plants this season, all going to Watsonville and vicinity. He has already booked orders for 320,000 for next season.

One of the finest private collections of orchids in the west is now housed in the greenhouses of Louis Stern at Menlo Park. It contains many valuable hybrids and little known varieties.

John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, was the principal speaker before the Chamber of Commerce at Bakersfield last week

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. are making a splendid display of specimen rhododendrons and Strelitzia blooms in their store. JAMES T. LYNCH.

Nashville, Tenn.

MARKET IN FIRM TONE

Trade continues very good. Roses have been unusually fine but will soon diminish in supply due to the increasing hot weather. Carnations have been excellent. Sweet peas almost glut the market. Miscellaneous stock has been plentiful and sales good. There is a fine demand for pot plants and many of the growers report their supply nearly exhausted. This is unusual at this season, which has been very unfavorable for bedding plants and much of the earlier plantings were badly nipped by the frost. The commencement season is opening up very well, and the call is not confined to the city limits, but the demand is from the country schools and all the surrounding towns. Roses and carnations are the rule.

NOTES

The Joy Floral Co. has a superabundance of flowers of all kinds and an ample supply for their Chattanooga, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., establishments, and have even been able to wholesale considerable stock to northern markets. Their roses were never better and their carnations are in full flower. Easter lilies and a great variety of miscellaneous stock is seen at their greenhouses.

The florists here do not make many preparations for Memorial Day. There is a National cemetery about six miles out and there is generally a programme, music and speech making, but very few flowers are used.

Geny Bros. have a full supply of roses, carnations and sweet peas. They have virtually sold out their stock of bedding plants, and are making little or no preparations for Memorial Day, as the day is not very generally observed in this city. The use of outdoor flowers also puts a damper on business.

McIntyre Bros. have a full supply of roses and carnations. They are retailing roses at $4 to $5. Their carnations are excellent. M. C. D.

Indianapolis, Ind.

STOCK IN PLENTIFUL SUPPLY.

Prospects indicate one of the best trades for Memorial Day in the history of the local florists. Prices tend a little lower than a month ago, mostly to the good growing weather of the past two weeks, but the increased volume of business is expected to make up the loss. Carnations of all kinds appear to be plentiful, and many shipments are being made to other cities where weather conditions have not been favorable. Pot plants of all descriptions are in good demand considering the fact that it is a week before Memorial Day. Rose growers here say the medium and short stemmed varieties will hold their own in price, but the long stemmed kinds will likely be somewhat lower in price than before. So far as this city is concerned values are lower on Memorial Day than any other of the floral holidays. The general public seems to want quantity and cares nothing at all for quality.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held in the offices of Smith & Young, June 7. Oscar Karstedt, secretary of this association, is working on a programme, which will be completed before the end of the month.

Wm. B. Flick, Lawrence, Ind., a former secretary of the State Horticultural Society, died recently, age 80 years. See obituary column.

Bertermann Bros. recently made a shipment of 20,000 peonies to Chicago. E. B.

OBITUARY.

The Late B. Hammond Tracy, Jr.

The body of B. Hammond Tracy, Jr., who was drowned off the coast of Brittany, France, May 5, an account of whose death appeared in our issue of May 14, page 807, is being brought back to his former home at Wenham, Mass., by Paul Doolin, his very dear friend and fellow student. The young men were graduates of Harvard university, class 1920, and both were awarded fellowships for French universities. They had been inseparable companions during the year. Mr. Tracy had just been awarded a renewal of the American Ambulance fellowship which would have entitled him to a second year of study in France.

The funeral services will be held from the Congregational church, Wenham, on June 2.

William B. Flick.

William B. Flick, at one time secretary of the Indiana State Horticultural Society, died at his home near Lawrence, Ind., recently. He was born in Brown county Ohio, June 22, 1840, and came to Indiana in his youth. Mr. Flick had been connected with the schools of Marion county for over 20 years, and had been county superintendent for 14 years. At the time of his death he was president of the Lawrence State Bank. He is survived by his wife, Mary Hoover Flick.

CANNA plants are well sold out.

HAVE you bought your coal? Get the cars rolling.

LINSEED oil, boiled, at New York is 75 cents per gallon in 5-barrel lots.

LIGHT frosts in New York, May 16-18, were the latest in the history of the weather bureau.

FERTILIZER tonnage sold for the spring of the current year will not average 65 per cent of the normal volume.

CAN it be that the Harding party considers the new proposed plant law, outlined on our Nursery page, in line with its expressed intention of not annoying or disturbing business?

FLORISTS, according to the proposed law (see Nursery page) must, if it passes, put the name on every plant, grower's name and location, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, or both.

International Flower Day.

It is proposed to establish an international flower day in honor of the soldiers of the world, dead and living. The idea originated with Mrs. Simeon Shaw, Canyon, Texas, and Armistice Day, November 11, has been suggested as the day to celebrate. Eugene Woerz, of Woerz Bros., Ardmore, Okla., is the first practical supporter of the movement, subscribing $10. The members of the provisional committee in charge of the work are Eugene Woerz, chairman; Otto Lang of the Lang Floral & Nursery Co., Dallas, Texas, and A. S. Gray, of the Gray Floral Co., Chickasha, Okla.

American Rose Society.

The annual meeting and pilgrimage of the American Rose Society will be held in Washington, D. C., June 2. A very interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion.

The members will assemble at Gude Bros. Co.'s flower store between 9 and 10 a. m. An inspection trip will be made by automobile to Dr. Van Fleet's rose test garden, at Bell's station, Md., followed by a visit to the Shaw Water Gardens and Twin Oaks. The annual meeting of the society will then take place. The day's programme will be concluded by a banquet. All members are urged to attend this meeting which promises to be full of interest.

JOHN C. WISTER, Sec'y.

French Chrysanthemum Show.

After a lapse of eight years, the French Chrysanthemum Society will hold its twenty-first congress at Le Mans, November 5-13, 1921. In conjunction therewith, the local authorities have arranged to organize a great international exhibition of flowers, fruit, vegetables, manures, garden sundries, tools, artistic and literary objects.

The officials are very desirous of having a good attendance of British and American exhibitors in all the classes, and a very cordial welcome will be extended to all visitors. Special arrangements will be made for staging any exhibits sent without attendants. It is hoped that customs formalities will be modified so that parcels will go straight through to the show. There will be British horticulturists on the jury and American ones, too, if there are any available. Reduced railway rates are expected.

C. Harman Payne, 195 Welmeadow road, Catford, London, S. E., Eng., who has been appointed commissioner general of the British section, will be pleased to act for any American exhibitor.

Carnation Year Book.

We are in receipt of the year book of the British Carnation Society for 1921, containing the usual array of useful matter pertaining to carnations and carnation growers, also, the following interesting papers: "Building a Plant," by S. A. Pascoe, The Royal Gardens, Windsor; "Development of the Carnation," by Montague C. Allwood, Haywards Heath; "Soils and Manures for Carnations," by A. E. Usher, Ranston, Blandford; "Carnations in South Africa," by Edward Bray, De Beers Workshops, Kimberley, South Africa; "Culture and Usefulness of the Carnation for Decoration," by T. Pateman, The Node Gardens, Welwyn Herts; "Carnations at Washington, D. C.," by T. A. Weston, New York. The secretary is P. F. Bunyard, 57 Kidderminster road, Croydon, London, S. E., Eng.

Washington Convention Railroad Rates.

The different trunk line and passenger associations have authorized reduced rates to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Washington, D. C., August 16-18, as follows:

New England Passenger Association, which comprises the territory north of New York and east of Albany, have authorized a fare of double local from starting point to New York plus one and one-half fare New York to Washington for the round trip on identification certificates.

The Trunk Line Association comprising the territory between New York, Albany, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Louisville, Kenova and Washington, D. C., have granted a fare of one and one-half for round trip on identification certificates.

The Central and Western Passenger Associations comprising the territory between Pittsburgh, Buffalo, St. Paul, Bismarck, N. D., Cheyenne, Wyo., Denver, Kansas City, Butte, Mont., Salt Lake City, Utah, St. Louis, Cairo and Cincinnati have authorized a fare and one-half for round trip on identification certificates.

The Trans-Continental Passenger Association will have on sale a round trip ticket at approximately one and one-third fare for the round trip from all Pacific Coast points, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle to Chicago, Ill., where passengers can repurchase tickets at one and one-half fare to Washington, D. C., on identification certificates.

The dates of sale for the tickets from all points mentioned above to Washington, D. C., for the meeting will be August 14-16 inclusive, validation August 16-19 inclusive, return limit August 21.

While the round trip tickets sold by the Trans-Continental Association will be on sale daily June 15 to August 15 inclusive, return limit three months from date of sale, but not later than October 31, 1921.

There has been no rate authorized from points south of Washington, D. C., to and including Key West, New Orleans, Laredo and El Paso, Tex., Oklahoma City and Springfield, Mo.

The Drummer Boys.

James J. Karins, the well known representative of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., is forty-eight.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is making a western trip.

WARM WEATHER AFFECTS STOCK.

The weather during the past week has been warm and consequently many cut flowers have gone to the bad. Everything has come on with a rush but despite this fact the market has been fairly stiff, especially during the latter part of the week. Generally speaking, there is an abundance of stock of all kinds, and prices are reasonable. Roses are plentiful and the call continues to be brisk. The varieties in greatest demand are Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ward, Columbia, Milady, Ophelia, Butterfly and White Killarney. The condition of the rose stock is very good and fine, long-stemmed blooms may be had at from $3 to $6 per dozen retail. Carnations are coming in in large quantities and the supply is ample to fill the great demand. Fancy varieties are not plentiful and bring good figures. Dark reds are popular and sell well. Some fine gladioli are arriving. Loveliness and Hadley are the two most common kinds. The price though still high, is gradually coming down. The demand however is very good. Many are being used for both funerals and weddings. A limited quantity of first class delphiniums are seen among this week's offerings. They are good sellers and clean up daily. Cornflowers are becoming more plentiful and sell well for table ornaments. Daisies, both yellow and white specimens, are more numerous than grass blades, and the yellow variety is being used to a considerable extent in combination with the dark blue iris and also with dark blue corn flowers. Snapdragons of excellent quality are scarce. Pink, white and yellow varieties are offered, and they sell readily. Some fine callas are seen and clean up daily. A few pot plants of both white and yellow callas are offered at some of the stores. Spanish iris is few and far between, being replaced by the more popular German iris. They are offered in all colors and combinations and are in big demand. The stock offered is of the highest quality. Some excellent peonies are being sold as low as $4 per dozen retail. There is, however, no very great call for them. This is due no doubt to so many being grown outdoors. There is a slight demand for Lilium Harrissi and a few pot plants are available at reasonable prices. Calceolarias are not common and they bring good prices. The demand for them is not pressing. Begonias are good sellers this week and some very finely grown specimens are seen. Sweet peas are more than plentiful and sell well. The lighter varieties are most common. Calendulas are very plentiful and do not sell very well. The flowers are superb as to size and color. Orchids are scarce and the demand is fairly good. A few snapdragons are offered. Hydrangeas are fast becoming a thing of the past. Pansies are not to be found. Foxglove has made its first appearance upon this market and the supply is very limited. It is greatly in demand. Pot plants of geraniums, ageratums, daisies, coleus, etc., are offered at reasonable prices by all florists. There is a limited quantity of calendulas on the market. Lily of the valley is becoming scarce, with a good call. Novelties, such as pandanus, dracaenas, cibotiums, etc., are common and their price remains about the same. All bedding plants are not as plentiful this year as they were last, but some fine stock may be had at a number of growers at very reasonable prices. Greens are plentiful, prices remain about the same. Ferns are bringing $4.50 per 1,000.

GARDEN CLUB FLOWER SHOW.

The Garden Club held its second annual flower show at the display house of the Missouri Botanical Gardens during the days and evenings of May 21-22. Immense crowds filled the house from its opening to its close. The public was entertained by a 10 piece orchestra. Many fine prizes were awarded. Some of the florists receiving prizes were: W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, Mo.; F. J. Fillmore & Sons; F. C. Weber; Bourdet Floral Co.; Paul Heife; Mullanphy Floral Co.; Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney; Geo. Walbart; Philip J. Goebel, Jr.; W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, Mo.; Woodlawn Gardens; J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co.; J. F. Ammann Co., Edwardsville, Ill., and John Steidel Floral Co., Olivette, Mo.

NOTES.

Windler Wholesale Floral Co. report a very heavy business in carnations and roses.

Mullanphy Floral Co. is offering some beautiful baskets of roses and gladioli.

Memorial Day orders are heavy with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co.

Some fine bedding plants are being displayed by the Bourdet Floral Co.

Numerous orders for Memorial Day are being booked by C. A. Kuehn.

Grimm & Gorly have an unusually attractive window this week.

H. G. Berning has received some very fine gladioli and roses.

Some exceptional window boxes are being sold by F. C. Weber.

Alex Walbart & Sons, are making a specialty of German iris.

EXCELLENT DEMAND FOR PLANTS.

The cut flower trade has been somewhat slack since Mothers' Day, but the sale of plants, seedlings and bedding stock has been very brisk. All sorts of plants are in demand for Memorial Day. Veranda boxes and vases are being filled for the summer. Carnations are very fine, and the price has dropped considerably since May 1. Roses are excellent and sell at good figures. Sweet peas are plentiful and have a good call. Orchids are very scarce and the prices are high. Outdoor lily of the valley is just about over with, and the greenhouse stock is hard to obtain. Geraniums are wholesaling at $15 to $18 per 100 and are hardly enough to go around. Everything in the plant line is much higher than a year ago at this time. Seedlings, such as asters, zinnias, snapdragons, etc., are bringing $22 a 1,000 wholesale.

NOTES.

A large number of orders for filling porch boxes, urns, etc., are being received by John B. Keller & Sons. This firm recently completed an order with the East Side Savings Bank to fill 40 of its boxes with geraniums.

A unique electric floor lamp equipped with a round wicker basket for holding flowers is displayed in the window of Collatus Bros. store.

Geo. B. Hart and Wm. L. Keller have returned from a fishing trip at Cranberry lake in the Adirondack mountains.

An excellent business in their nursery and plant department is reported by the Maurer-Haap Co.

A good sale in bedding plants for Memorial Day is being experienced by Geo. T. Boucher.

E. C. Armbrust and family are residing in the home he purchased at 29 Pumall road.

Miss Stevens is spending a short vacation with her parents at Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Fred Himball of Geo. B. Hart's basket department will sail soon for England.

Cecil Lester recently returned from a trip in southern New York.

Hugo Teute is having an excellent sale of Poitevine geraniums and bedding stock.

Max, the Florist, is operating a new Ford delivery car.

STOCK MOVES SLOWLY.

The past week was a peculiar one in the local market, due to the fact that the annual flood of peonies set in just about two weeks earlier than usual. It is the first time in years that the local crop has come in before Memorial Day, but unless the weather moderates to a great extent the entire crop will be done before that time. The late frosts do not seem to have hurt the crop to any extent in this district and the growers are sending in some fine stock. Taking the peonies on top of an extra heavy cut of roses and carnations made a heavy market and prices came down rapidly, and the wholesale houses were not talking stock by the hundred but by the thousand; and what is more, they were moving it too, but in some cases at very low prices. The supply of Easter lilies is about equal to the demand, while callas are about done for this season. Gladioli are good property and clean up on sight at good prices. The demand for orchids and lily of the valley is light and it is with difficulty that either are moved at all. The stores are all busy with bedding stock, and from all reports this business is the largest in years.

NOTES.

Earl Ludwig, of The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., is again to be found in the line up of the Bellevue baseball team. Earl believes in a certain amount of recreation with his work, and using him as an example would help us all.

Abe Krongold, proprietor of the Victoria Flower Shop is at the Presbyterian hospital, where he had an operation performed on one of his eyes. At the last reports he was getting along nicely.

This section has been one of the last to feel the business depression but it has finally reached us. In spite of that we are all looking for the largest Memorial Day business in the history of the trade.

The local wholesale houses do not need to worry whether their peonies will make it for Decoration Day or not, their chief trouble this year is whether the crop will last until then.

Wm. Wampler has taken hold of his new position as manager of the cut flower department of The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and has the best wishes of all the trade.

Homer Wood and Clarence Phillips of the McCallum Co. are on a short fishing trip, but they will be back in time to assist with the firm's increased business for Decoration Day.

The Blind Floral Co. has disposed of all bedding stock for this season, and most of the local growers report the same thing.

Montgomery's Priscilla

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following growers:

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Dailledouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.
Duckham-Pierson Co., Madison, N. J.
Rowayton Greenhouses, Rowayton, Conn.
Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah
Wellworth Farm Greenhouses, Downers Grove, Ill.
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.
A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley, N. Y.
Robt. Simpson, Clifton, N. J.
Chas. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.
Noe-Ruzicka Co., Madison, N. J.
Wm. H. Elliott Co., Madbury, N. H.
Anthony Ruzicka, Madison, N. J.
W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, Mo.
Jos. Heacock Co., Roelofs, Pa.
Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, Ill.
Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn.
Roberts Rose Co., Denver, Colo.
Geo. C. Welland, Evanston, Ill.
Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.
Exeter Rose Conservatories, Exeter, N. H.
Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill.
Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.
F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.
L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J.
Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, Pa.
Briar Cliff Gardens, Scarborough, N. Y.

Ask them about it, if you will, at any time. They have our permission to tell the truth. We are going to let this rose sell itself! We shall be simply order takers.

WARM WEATHER INCREASES SUPPLY.

There is nothing favorable to report on conditions this week. Prices were lower than at any time since last summer. The warm weather has brought in stock in such abundance that even were there a holiday, prices could not have gone very high. All retail stores report very quiet business; nothing moving only what little funeral work comes in. Roses brought from two cents on shorts to eight to 10 cents on fancies. Carnations sold from three cents on ordinary ones to five cents on fancies. Lily of the valley went slowly. Marguerites were offered at from one to three cents and fancy iris six to 10 cents. The growers are looking ahead a week for a more favorable break, although it is not expected that prices will be exceptionally high at Memorial Day owing to the over supply of wax and crepe flowers. The artificial floral stock is on sale in all department stores. The hardware and provision stores are even selling them on a commission basis for some of the manufacturers who overdid it this year.

NOTES.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting was held at Horticultural hall May 17. W. H. Judd gave an interesting talk on new and desirable shrubs for New England. Miss Marion Roby Case, of Weston, sent an invitation for the club members to attend a series of lectures to be given at her place every Wednesday from June 22 to August 31. The executive committee will arrange for a ladies' night in the near future and a picnic in June.

The Christian Benevolent Home, Chestnut Hill, will erect greenhouses on its property in the near future.

N. Silverman of Winter street has opened a flower store at Norwich, Conn. This is his third shop now.

The local grown stock is in good supply. Sweet peas are improving rapidly and will soon be in normal crop. Laddie carnations are plentiful, quality good. It is expected that gladioli will soon make their appearance.

NOTES.

It is rumored that the trade of this city is endeavoring to establish Sunday closing.

The Stiles Co. worked overtime this week taking care of funeral work.

Funeral trade at Norman, Okla., has been exceptionally good.

An excellent trade in party work was had by Furrow & Co.

FORCING BULBS FOR IMPORT

When you buy imported bulbs from us, you buy them by measure, in centimeters or inches and so accepted by us. This means much, as against those people who sell "firsts," "seconds" or "thirds" and give you no assurance as to what such grades measure.

For 40 years VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE at New York and Chicago has supplied the most critical FLORISTS with forcing bulbs. If you have not placed your ORDER or you have not confirmed your order at stated prices why not send us your list for pricing. Where prices are not fixed we can give you valuable information.

1st. Long and satisfactory connections with the best foreign houses.

2nd. Credit arrangements and closest buying at favorable exchange rates.

3rd. First early shipments, followed by one or more later ones covering entire shipping season.

4th. Earliest deliveries of early forcing items which cannot rightly be delayed for main supply.

5th. Covering by us of all "Special Expenses" excess brokers' fees and port charges at New York, in which nearly every U. S. Florist grower has been persistently robbed for the past five years. We eliminate this.

6th. Because of the above, we ask that you submit to us a list as nearly as possible of what you expect to use between now and next November in these imports, part of which we specify below, and let us submit to you approximate prices and certain further details regarding delivery dates which we know will interest you.

We take this opportune time to list here a few vital reasons why Vaughan's Seed Store at New York and Chicago is especially well prepared to take the responsibility of supplying in season at right prices your whole list of Forcing Bulbs both American grown and imported French, Dutch and Japanese.

HOT WEATHER AFFECTS STOCK.

Sunday, May 22, when the thermometer registered 91.2 was the hottest May day in 10 years, and the heat has affected stock to such an extent that it is arriving in very poor condition at this writing, Monday, May 23, and in some instances unfit for sale. The wholesalers are doing the best they can under the circumstances for the out-of-town buyers by selecting the best stock available for shipping orders, which is proving to be a difficult task owing to the fact that there is very little first-class shipping stock arriving. Stock in general, such as it is, continues to arrive in quantity. Columbia and Premier are in heavy supply and the receipts of Mrs. Chas. Russell are quite large. Ophelia, Sunburst, White Killarney, Butterfly, Crusader, Montrose, Hoosier Beauty, Dunlop, Milady, Killarney Brilliant, Ward, Cecile Brunner and all other varieties grown for this market are to be had in quantity. Carnations are seen in large numbers and while the supply in general is showing the effects of the weather there is some fairly good stock obtainable. Sweet peas are arriving in poor condition and in some instances unfit for sale. Lilies are more plentiful this week and callas are in fairly good supply. Peonies are to be had in fair-sized quantities, including some local stock, but are in strong demand and not any too plentiful. Daisies are plentiful. Snapdragons, feverfew, calendulas, orchids, pansies, Darwin tulips, statice, lupines, candytuft, iris, larkspurs, forget-me-nots, Cape Jasmines, lily of the valley and orchids are in large supply, together with all other miscellaneous stock, including local indoor grown and southern out-door gladioli. Greens are in fair supply but good ferns are scarce, although new stock is arriving.

NOTES.

Geraniums are scarce and in strong demand with Nutt the only variety offered in quantity, although a few Buchner, Richard, Poitevine and others are seen but almost completely sold out. The scarcity is due partly to the fact that a large quantity was sold for Mothers' Day. One grower made up special combinations for this occasion and found a ready market for three plants in a 6-inch pot at 75 cents each wholesale. Four-inch is about the only size offered and cost 15 cents each in bud and 18 cents in bloom at wholesale. Some poitevine sold wholesale the past week at 20 cents each and in some instances at 25 cents. The department stores, retailers, seed stores and cemeteries are offering stock at practically the same prices this season. Geraniums in four-inch pots are selling at 35 cents each; English ivy, 59 cents:

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

vincas, 39 cents, and petunias 35 cents. Coleus in two-inch pots are selling retail at 10 cents each and pansies at 25 cents per basket of six plants and up. Aster plants out of flats are in good demand at 35 cents per dozen. Prices in some instances have been higher and lower but those given are the average obtained from the leading dealers in their respective lines each season. Some dealers have men canvassing this entire vicinity in quest of stock which probably accounts for the cancellations that the retailers are receiving on orders placed earlier in the season.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report business as brisk this month, with the total sales up to May 15 showing an increase of over $1,500 for the same period of 1920. Mr. Vaughan was seen inspecting an R. & V. Knight sedan at one of the local auto sales and display rooms this week. Business surely is good at this establishment.

The Commercial Flower Growers' Association met at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday, May 19, when Chas. N. Miller and Brother, Morton Grove, and Spitze & Ollenburg were admitted as members. The Pageant of Progress was discussed but no definite action was taken. The annual banquet will be held in June when the nomination and election of officers takes place.

Allie Zech, George Mohn and E. C. Pruner and wives were the guests of Fred Longren at Des Plaines, May 22. Wm. Duntemann and wife of Bensonville joined the crowd in the evening and it is needless to add that everyone had a most enjoyable time.

The directors of the Allied Florists' Association held a meeting May 24 when plans were completed for the advertising campaign for Memorial Day. The possibility of raising money for the Pageant of Progress was discussed.

Norman Stuart, of the Bohannon Floral Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his sister, whose death occurred at Buffalo, N. Y., last week. Mr. Stuart and wife are expected home almost any minute.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a good supply of gladioli in addition to its regular line of stock, which is coming in handy for Memorial Day. The supply department reports a heavy call for made-up wreaths.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. are all through planting roses. Mrs. Chas. Russell will again be on their list of offerings next season and so will Butterfly, which is being given considerable bench space.

Tonner's cut their first peonies at their farm at Galewood, May 18, and the prospects are bright for a good supply for Memorial day. Red especially will be plentiful with them.

STOCK SELLING READILY.

With good weather prevailing there has been a good trade in all kinds of flowers and bulbs. The rainy weather has at last ceased and bright sunny days have succeeded one another. All of the down-town florists are having a good steady business. Supplies are better now, and the demand just about absorbs the offerings. Roses, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas are the best features to the trade. Prices are holding steady at previous levels. Pot plants are rather scarce and few are moving as a result. There is fairly good demand for vines and creepers for home decorations and greenhouses are securing a good business from that source. Funeral work has been rather good. There is also a fair number of parties, and receptions and graduation exercises with the attending social affairs are causing a demand for loose flowers and corsages.

The trade is making preparations for Memorial Day. This is expected to be exceptionally heavy this year because of the many bodies of soldiers which have been returned from France, and also the cause of the general feeling which is engendered around the day. Prospects are good for a heavy supply of flowers. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons, lilies and many garden flowers will be used.

ANNUAL ROSE SHOW.

The third annual rose show to be given under the auspices of the Columbus Horticultural Society will be held in the Museum building, on the campus of the Ohio State university June 4-5. This is shown under the direction of Prof. A. C. Hottes, instructor in the department of floriculture at the university. The annual rose exhibitions have been attracting thousands of people and it is planned to make the 1921 show the best of all. Many varieties of roses will be exhibited.

publicity and show matters. John Moore, a Rotarian visitor with his brother Jack Moore, of the Rosary, thought we were working along the right lines by cutting out all commercial features and making it an educational show exclusively.

Mothers' Day was discussed from two viewpoints—production and selling. B. F. Barr, advocated the idea of cutting carnations back to have them come in heavier crop for this occasion. Messrs Chas. B. Herr and Elmer Weaver, two large growers, claimed this to be impractical and that weather conditions were alone responsible for the shortage of cut flowers. This use of more plants was suggested as a help, but some of the members seemed to think that a plant did not express the proper sentiment for Mothers' Day.

Walter Markley, sales agent and publicity man for the B. F. Barr & Co., establishment was elected to membership in the club. The programme committee reported a visit to the Du Point gardens for the June meeting. The following ladies won prizes in the drawing contest: Mesdames B. F. Barr, Lemar Landis, Rudolph Nagel, A. K. Rohrer, E. P. Hostetter, Phares Hostetter and J. Moore.

STOCK MOVING SLOWLY.

The warm weather of the past week has brought in quantities of flowers of all kinds, a production that greatly exceeded the demand. Roses have been particularly plentiful, splendid stock, much of it in the higher grades that had to be sold at very low prices, as buyers were loath to stock up, their customers being so few and far between. There are plenty of carnations, but aside from one or two varieties they grade low. Callas are almost over while Easter lilies are in good supply. Snapdragon is a feature. Cornflowers are plentiful. Cattleyas and lily of the valley are about equal to the demand. Local peonies are in and next week will find them at their flood. The commission men on the wharves, who handle country produce, have been selling them the past week at $3 to $5 per hundred, stock cut from the farmers' yards, much of it of inferior quality. The offerings from regular peony growers is exceptionally good, the heavy rains of the past month having been of great benefit. Southern gladioli will be a factor as it is coming in in large quantities. The quality is fine. A wholesaler sizing up the business of the week said that although it seemed very light, it was found on comparison to have been somewhat better than that of a year ago for the same period.

NOTES.

It is time the florists' baseball league was getting into working order. There is considerable detail in arranging dates satisfactory to all, and it must be certain that there are the requisite number of clubs composed of men who are enthusiastic enough to hold together to finish out the schedule. "Ringers" are to be provided against. Perhaps it would be well for the committee to prepare several questionnaires to be tried out on batteries whose standing as to membership in the trade is in doubt. The older members of the trade remember with pleasure the league of some 20 or more years ago when Henry Dreer, Inc., the Robt. Craig Co., Lonsdale & Burton, and a club of boys from the stores had for several seasons an interchange of games, that were always looked forward to with pleasure and very much enjoyed.

At this writing, all signs point to a big Memorial Day's business; many large advance orders have been received by the wholesalers, the out of town demand being exceptionally strong. In this city the American Legion, which has added largely to its membership the past year and is now well organized, is working hard to make the day a great patriotic event.

The drive to double the membership of the Society of American Florists is on. This city and community must do its part and at least increase its membership 100 per cent. Everybody get busy and let us go down to Washington, D. C., with a century of new names to add to the roll.

The closing meeting for the season of the Florists' Club, to be held on June 7, will be most interesting. Prof. E. I. Wilde, of Pennsylvania State College, will be the speaker, his subject being, "The College and its Relative Importance to the Trade." A higher education along scientific lines pertaining to the culture of plants and flowers has been discussed for some time in the trade press and Prof. Wilde's lecture will be most timely. The subject will then be taken up from the business men's point of view, the discussion being opened by Robert Craig.

The Robt. Craig Co., who have had a splendid spring business, are booking large orders for young ferns of the Boston types to be grown on for fall sales. Many plant growers find it more advantageous and cheaper to buy this young stock than produce it themselves.

The annual flower fair of the society people, the proceeds going to the benefit of charitable institutions, was held on Thursday last in Rittenhouse square. The trade, in their assistance both by donations of plants, cut flowers, salespeople and decorators, added greatly to its success.

J. Otto Thilow, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., reports a wonderful demand for all kinds of flower and vegetable seeds and summer bulbs. He added there is no evidence of depression here as their business is constantly increasing all the time.

A wholesale dealer referring to Memorial Day cut flowers, stated that a full crop of peonies will be a great help to the market, as in this neighborhood most of the shrubbery which was always such a factor at this time is past.

The Leo Niessen Co. are prepared for a record Memorial Day's business. Advance orders have been very large. Mrs. Chas. Russell and other choice roses, peonies in quantity and carnations are leaders in their large assortment.

Edward Reid said of Memorial Day's outlook, "It's all right; we have the flowers and the orders as well, there is no question that it is going to be a hummer this year."

Lots of flowers and lots of business is the report of Berger Bros. for Memorial Day. Peonies, roses, carnations and snapdragons are features of their large stock.

Large shipments from the Roelfs, Pa., rose houses are being received by the Jos. Heacock Co. They anticipate a large Memorial Day business.

MARKET IN GOOD CONDITION.

The outlook for Memorial Day is good, especially the demand for wreaths. The late frost has limited the peony crop which is the leading flower for this occasion. If this warm weather continues the balance of the week all stock will be plentiful.

NOTES.

The sixth annual spring flower show of the Amateur Flower Gardeners' Association was held May 21 under the auspices of the American Iris Society. Peonies and irises were the only flowers entered.

Arthur Newell has an attractive Memorial Day window, featuring a large star spangled banner done in red, white and blue straw flowers.

W. L. Rock is preparing for heavy Memorial Day business with full supplies of excellent stock in all lines.

MARKET CONDITIONS BAD.

Not for many months has there been such a breakdown in prices as occurred the past week. Although up to May 21 the weather was exceptionally cool for the season, great stocks of roses, carnations and sweet peas came pouring in. On that day the weather suddenly turned hot, which further complicated the situation. Throughout the week there had been more than enough peonies to supply the demand and one day of heat was enough to bring an avalanche upon the market. It can be safely stated that for Memorial Day there will be more than enough of everything that will be wanted. The offerings in roses were so great that sales were practically at buyers' prices and everyone in the trade is well informed on that score. After a few specials were selected in the morning, Columbias, Premiers and Ophelias at from $10 to $12, and in an exceptional case, $15 per 100, the bulk of the stock literally went begging. Sweet peas and carnations did not fare much better. The former sold from 50 cents to $2 per 100; carnations $1 to $4, with a slight advance over the last figure on the best Wards and Laddie. American Beauty roses were slow at from $20 to $40 per 100 for long stems. In cattleyas a few gigas brought good prices, but mossiaes and gaskellianas ranged from $25 to $50 per 100. Lily of the valley was plentiful and cheap, good stock going as low as $3 per 100. Easter lilies, on account of a rather light supply, did better than other stocks, ranging from $15 to $25 per 100. There is little relief in sight for present conditions until the peony crop is out of the way. Memorial Day business, as we forecast it, will be merely an incident. It is only the cemetery and small town florists that do much buying for the occasion and they usually want cheap stock. In cool weather, Saturday is almost always a good day for the retailers, but the week of May 21 cut down their sales and the forecast is for continued warm weather.

May 23.—With temperatures ranging from 85 to 90 degrees on May 21-22, an immense quantity of stock is arriving, particularly in roses and peonies, and an over supply in practically all lines.

NOTES.

President Hendrickson of the Florists' Club acted as chairman of the committee on decorations for the Memorial Festival given to the American hero dead, held in the 22nd Regiment armory on May 20. Miss Julia Arthur recited the late Lieut-Colonel John McCrae's poem, "In Flanders Fields," just as a blanket of poppies were laid on a caisson covered by the American flag. There were elaborate decorations throughout the armory. The address for the occasion was delivered by Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas.

A pleasing ceremony took place on May 22 at Greeley square when Miss Daisie DeWitte at the head of a group of California girls crowned the statue of Horace Greeley with a large wreath of pink roses and sweet peas. Miss De Witte said that her grandfather had lived in this city as a young man and largely on Mr. Greeley's advice to young men to "Go west and grow up with the country," went to California in 1862. Members of Typographical Union No. 6, of which Mr. Greeley was a member, took part in the ceremony.

Forewarned is forearmed. Mrs. John W. Paris, president of the Flushing Garden Club, took out $1,500 rain insurance to protect the club against possible inclement weather spoiling the club's flower show which was held last week for the benefit of the Convalescents' Fund of Flushing hospital. Fortunately, at least for the insurance company, it did not rain.

Jacob Schaeffer, a florist of Middle Village, L. I., died recently in the Kings County hospital, following an operation, age 42 years.

John Koster has opened the store of Christatos & Koster at West End, N. J., which will be conducted throughout the summer season.

Charles Beckman, Elmhurst, is erecting two new houses from salvage bought at the Ward range, Queens, L. I.

Reports indicate that G. E. M. Stumpp is having good business at his Southampton, L. I., establishment.

William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, is receiving fine stock in peonies.

BUSINESS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Business has been good since Mothers' Day and the florists are expecting a fine trade for Memorial Day. Stock is obtainable at a fair price. Roses are plentiful with prices firm. Gladioli are arriving in fairly large numbers and the demand for them is good. Carnations are moving well and sweet peas also are in very good demand. The local dealers are looking forward to good business in June, due to the large number of weddings and school commencements.

The Lockyear Floral Co. experimented with the raising of tomatoes in its greenhouses this spring and will have them ready for the market in a few days. The tomatoes are unusually large and well matured and will sell readily on the local market. This company recently purchased the range of the old Halbrooks Floral Co., near the Oak Hill cemetery. The Halbrooks Co. had about 12,000 square feet of glass and was one of the best equipped plants in the city. The Lockyear Floral Co. announced a few days ago through Mel Lockyear, the president, that they would plant large quanities of tomatoes, lettuce and carnations this fall and expect to supply the local market during the winter months.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel. Next annual meeting, will be held at St. Louis, June 20-21, 1921.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., reports still more rain.

THE Louisville onion set acreage is reported light.

ROY WHEELER, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., left Chicago for home, May 20.

MILWAUKEE field seed sales for April show great increases, especially in shipments of clover. Crop prospects are good to date.

BEAN planting in New York will require some good rains before starting the work, otherwise germination will not be satisfactory.

DUTCH growers are advancing the price on single white hyacinths, miniature grade, because of the higher prices of French Romans.

ROBT. D. EDWARDS, formerly with the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is now manager of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, Pa.

JOHN C. BODGER, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., is planning to attend the seedsmen's convention at St. Louis, Mo., June 22-24.

WICHITA, KAS.—Ross McCausland, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. McCausland, will be married to Miss Ruth Ruberta Robison, June 6, at Towanda, Kas.

YANKTON, S. D.—D. B. Gurney, seedsman, is at the head of the big construction company, bridging the Missouri river here. A giant undertaking.

JOHN L. HUNT, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is taking his summer vacation piecemeal this season and recently motored down to Doylestown, Pa., on a visit to Howard M. Earl and family.

MRS. BLANCHE BURPEE, Miss Peterson, David Burpee and Geo. W. Kerr, Philadelphia, Pa., left Chicago, May 21, for Los Angeles and San Francisco. Mr. Burpee says that while the mail order trade has been satisfactory, the wholesale demand has not equalled expectations. He will return via St. Louis, Mo., at the time of the seed trade convention.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The public sale of the assets of W. H. Small & Co., May 19-20, netted about $100,000, according to the Mercantile Commercial bank, trustee. The assets consisted of stock, fixtures, buildings and real estate, the property being sold to 15 different firms and individuals. The Fulton avenue buildings were sold to a local hardware company.—C.

French Bulb Importers Meeting.

A meeting of importers of French bulbs was held at New York, May 23, to discuss and give their opinions as to the prevailing conditions. After considerable discussion, it was decided to cable the French exporters requesting them to so reduce their prices as to meet present conditions.

Where High French Prices Pinch.

The anxiety on the part of some American as well as Dutch jobbers of French bulbs, to keep prices low, seems to be caused by the fact that they have sold during the winter future deliveries of Paper White narcissus as low as $15.00 and $16.00 per thousand, and now must buy in France at lower prices than last year or lose money in filling these contracts, or "welch" on them, which latter course they can adopt if necessity develops—it has been done before.

French Bulb Situation.

Cable and mail advices to May 25 indicate that at least two Dutch houses represented in France have been buying bulbs of Narcissus, Grand Soliel d'Or and Roman hyacinths at the April prices made by the syndicate. This buying has, however, ceased for the moment, and prediction is made that the high prices of these items will not decline this season. It is thought the expected drop in prices of Paper White narcissus will not come for 30 days. The officials controlling the growers' syndicate are feeling confident because of prices maintained by them in recent years and are said to be ambitious to again add to their laurels.

English trade papers are suggesting that their dealers refuse to buy or use Roman hyacinth bulbs at the present asking prices, because the appearance of profiteering might injure their relations with private buyers.

Dutch growers are prompt to take advantage of the situation and are cabling quotations on prepared miniature hyacinths as substitutes for French White Romans. Poetaz sorts may take the place of Soliel d'Or.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

COMMITTEE ON GRIEVANCES.

At the meeting of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association in Chicago on January 25, 1921, the Committee Grievances was created, consisting of seven members of the association, the association counsel being denominated as chairman. This committee has been duly organized.

The principal duties of the committee are to investigate and, so far as possible, to attempt to eliminate fraud or misrepresentation of quality in the sale of agricultural seeds, whether the offences complained of are by members of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association or by non-members.

The methods of carrying on the work of this committee have been carefully thought out, after negotiations with various government agencies, and may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. In case of mistake or unintentional misrepresentation of quality correction by private agreement with the seedsmen.
2. Report of offender to members of the association.
3. Expulsion of member from association.
4. Presentment of complaint to the federal trade commission.
5. Prosection under federal or state seed laws.
6. Prosecution under postal laws.
7. Criminal prosecution for common fraud.

Any government official, seedsman, purchaser of seeds or other interested party, whether of the United States or of foreign countries, having a bona fide complaint against a seed grower or seed merchant dealing in agricultural seeds and resident in the United States, may file complaint with the chairman of the committee, and such complaint will be fairly, fully and promptly acted upon by said committee without cost. The services of the committee are not perfunctorily offered. The value of its services largely depends on the interest of those having and reporting bona fide complaints.

CURTIS N. SMITH,
Chairman and Counsel,
Committee on Grievances.

Obconica Grandiflora Mixed	1000 seeds	1.00
Gigantea, Rosea, Kermesnia and mixed	1000 seeds	1.00

A New Pot Plant ISOLOMA (Hirsutum Multiflorum Hybridum).

The large leaves, which are of a texture similar to those of the Gloxinia, are of a rich dark green; the reverse of them, as well as the flower stalks are covered with bright red hair, which renders them very attractive. The flowers are produced in abundance and in various colors and color combinations, white, orange, yellow and scarlet. The plants grow from 12 to 18 inches high, are bushy and require no staking. Their culture is similar to that of the Gloxinia and other Gesneriaceas. Their constitution is very robust which enables them to thrive in living rooms. This is a most desirable pot plant and florists will do well to get familiar with it. Trade pkt., $1.00

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, has gone to the mountains.

FROST injury to the grape crop in California will reduce the output of the much appreciated "Dago Red."

ONTARIO, CALIF. — The Armstrong Nurseries have increased their establishment to 350 acres, growing semi-tropical plants.

CLARKSBURG, CALIF. — The Clarksburg Nursery Co. was recently authorized to sell 250 shares of its capital stock, par value $100, to open up a tract in the Holland land project and to operate a nursery in this city.

DAYTON, O.—The Western Ohio Nurseries Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 to operate a nursery and deal in trees and shrubs. Among the incorporators are J. R. Conklin and E. E. Kumler.—J. W. L.

LAKE FOREST, ILL. — The North Shore Horticultural Society and the Garden Club of Illinois will hold their annual spring flower exhibit June 4-5, at Gorton school, this city. Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, 1425 N. State parkway, Chicago, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Minneapolis Memorial Drive.

Theodore Wirth's great Victory Memorial Drive at Minneapolis, Minn., will be dedicated with much ceremony June 11. The drive is eight and one-half miles long and the memorial trees employed are closely selected American elms of the type with the gothic arch habit and budded or grafted. The work is well worth inspection and Mr. Wirth will cordially welcome all interested nurserymen and landscape gardeners on this occasion.

Labeling Plant Law Proposed.

Failure to label or mislabeling plants to be punished by imprisonment.

The Cramton bill, (house resolution No. 247), says that all nursery stock, which is defined as field and greenhouse grown plants, such as fruit trees, fruit tree stocks, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds and all other plants or parts of plants for planting or propagation, shall, when shipped in interstate commerce, or when sold in the District of Columbia, or territories, have a label attached to the tree or plant or to the package, stating the true, accepted and correct name of the variety of stock, the name of the person who grew the same, and the place where it was grown. It is further provided that no person shall ship or deliver for shipment nursery stock which is not true to name, or that is wrongly or improperly labeled in a manner that will tend to mislead or deceive, and any person doing so is under penalty of a fine not exceeding $200, or of imprisonment not exceeding six months, or of both such fine and imprisonment.

CURTIS N. SMITH.

Fruit Via Panama Canal.

As a result of the high freight rates, the California Fruit Growers' Exchange and the Northwestern Apple Growers are combining to launch a gigantic water transportation system which will lay their products down in eastern markets by way of the Panama canal. Even with American coastwise ships required to pay Panama canal tolls, this transportation will be cheaper than the present cost of rail transportation. If congress should exempt American ships from payment of canal tolls, the water route would be still more advantageous to the Pacific coast shippers, and detrimental to the competition of rail transported midwestern apples in eastern markets. The plans will be perfected at a meeting in Seattle June 1. Apple growers of the north and citrus growers of the south have pledged 8,000 carloads, which, according to steamship men, is sufficient tonnage to keep a number of boats in active service for the period of the year.

Preventing Forest Fires.

Recognizing the value of normal grazing in fire protection of timberlands, a study of its application to national forests, say forest specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, suggests:

The timely use of present ranges by the removal of rank vegetation before it becomes unpalatable.

The utilization of all suitable unused grazing lands by the development of water and trails and the elimination or control as rapidly as possible of all factors which prevent present use.

The closer consideration of the class of stock to be grazed where fire protection is involved.

The overgrazing of strategic points; minor damage at such points may result in saving large areas of forest from destruction by fire.

The study of lightning fires on the forests with a view to determining whether lightning zones exist and the possibility of utilizing grazing live stock to assist in preventing the spread of fire. The fuller enlistment of the moral and active support of some 25,000 additional persons in the forests on account of grazing uses.

The closer correlation of the live-stock industry of the forests with the fire-protection plans.

Onion Growers Adopt Standard Grades.

The 1921 commercial crop of bermuda onions in the Coachella valley, Calif., is to be marketed on the basis of United States bermuda onion grades, according to an announcement of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture. This completes the standardization of practically the entire bermuda onion industry in the United States.

United States grades for bermuda onions were recommended by the Department of Agriculture in the spring of 1918. The same year the state of Texas legislated the compulsory grading of bermuda onions according to the grades promulgated by the department and adopted by the Texas state department of agriculture.

When the onion shippers in the Coachella valley requested inspection service from the California state department of agriculture in 1921, the department indicated that it would be impracticable to render such service unless suitable grades were agreed upon as a basis for inspection. Accordingly, the shippers made a comprehensive study of onion grades and decided finally to use the grades recommended by the Department of Agriculture. Perhaps the most important consideration leeading to this decisiion was the fact that since the adoption of the department's grades in Texas there has been a considerable decrease in the number of rejected Texas onion shipments.

Market Quotations Increase Income.

A few years ago it was the practice to ship most of the strawberries from the Hammond, La., district to Chicago. That was before every shipper knew the daily distribution of shipments. Today Louisiana strawberries are marketed in upward of 60 large cities from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Several carloads are also sent to Canada every season.

This increased distribution is attributed by the growers to the service rendered by the field station of the bureau of markets, United States Department of agriculture, at Hammond, La. Here reports of general market conditions and prices at important strawberry shipping and consuming centers and of car-lot movements everywhere in the United States are published daily. Weather conditions at shipping and marketing points are also reported upon, a service of great value in shipping highly perishable products. Despite the fact that 75 to 90 per cent of the Louisiana strawberry growers are Italians or other foreigners, a considerable number of whom speak no English, they have been quick to appreciate that to "know the markets" is a prime requisite in marketing farm crops. By keeping in daily touch with national marketing conditions they know when and where competition is to be met, the quantities of berries in the markets and rolling to market, and the markets offering highest prices. Not only has wider distribution resulted but the growers are realizing very satisfactory returns for their fruit.

Golden Yellow Sweet Peas

McClenahan's Yellow Flower Dye

Will quickly and uniformly dye white, light pink and rose-pink peas to golden yellow, apricot and burnt orange respectively.

For two years I have supplied dyed peas to the Olkahoma City market, and they are now more popular than ever. The peas take the dye perfectly. It never streaks, but diffuses through the petals so the veins are not distinguishable, and the dyed flowers appear so natural that many people search seed catalogues and make diligent inquiry for seed of these new colors.

White Carnations take the dye to a medium yellow, sometimes leaving part of the central tuft uncolored, but producing a charming effect.

So far as we have experimented, roses seem to take the dye as readily as peas do. Cecile Brunners quickly change to orange.

SEE WHAT A USER SAYS:

"We have been handling Sweet Peas for you for the last two years, and have always been more than pleased with the yellow, apricot, and the burnt orange, which you have colored with McClenahan's Yellow Flower Dye. The colors have always been clear and real, never showing streaks as we have noticed in other dyes. We know the dye to be a great success."
THE FOSTER FLORAL CO., Oklahoma City, Okla., April 30, 1921.

This dye keeps indefinitely in dry form, dissolves instantly, and we use same solution for one to two weeks.

Price, sufficient to make one quart, $1.00, prepaid. Six for $5.00.

Ageratum Fraseri

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅞ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.

2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $ 6.00 per 100.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cleaning Up.

The bedding season is over, the year's work is practically finished, the young stock for another year in preparation, and now is the time to clean house. Do not leave a lot of worthless stock scattered around the houses that takes a man's time to water, but what it is desired to save block up all together where it can be watered in a short time, and, above all things, throw out anything that has passed its usefulness. How often have we seen plants that would never have been of any value left standing in the greenhouses until fall planting; neglected, yet taking more or less room, to be thrown out at last, and the houses never thoroughly made ready for the coming crop. Get the plants that need care and attention all together, and clean up the other houses. If the stock is grown in benches, these will need repairing, and if badly decayed take them down and rebuild. Those who have cement benches are fortunate, for they will only need repairs. Throw out all the old soil and clean up under the benches and in all the corners, and throw out any old, rotting boards or pieces of crocks, and thus get rid of the vermin that invariably infest greenhouses. After the benches are cleaned out, give them a good, thick coat of whitewash in which sulphur was mixed while the lime was slacking. The advantage of this is too little appreciated by many growers. It costs but little and the prevention from fungus will often amount to a great deal. After the whitewash has dried throw a few ashes or a mulch of some kind on the benches to protect them from the hot rays of the sun. Give the inside of the house a good coat of white paint; this should be done at least every other year, for the difference in the amount of light in a clean white house and in a dirty one during the dark short days is material, and the increased quality and quantity of stock will more than repay for the expense and labor. Any repairs that the heating system needs should be made at once and the boilers cleaned up ready for fall. Too often the boiler is never thoroughly cleaned out after the last firing, and ashes and clinkers are left lying around in a moist condition, rusting the boilers. The steam boilers should either be emptied or filled, for if the water is left standing, rust will form inside just above the water line and rapidly eat into the iron. These are all necessary details to be looked after at the earliest possible moment.

Canterbury Bells.

There is always a demand in the spring for something different than the flowers which the buyers have seen all through the winter, and many growers have a call for some of the forced perennials. Canterbury bells are grown for this purpose, and if well grown find a ready sale. Seeds sown now and grown on in pots, being shifted into larger sizes as may be required, will bloom next spring and help furnish the grower with a variety of stock. They should be grown cool during the early winter, a violet house or one of a similar temperature being about right, and then brought into a warmer house with a temperature of 50 degrees in late winter, where they will produce fine blooms for early spring. By bringing a few at a time into the warmer house, a succession of blooms may be had.

Ardisia Crenulata.

The seeds of ardisia may be sown at any time during spring and, as it will take until another year to grow plants that will fruit, it is not material at which particular time they are sown. The seeds are a little slow in germinating and it is better to sow them in the manner of sowing cyclamen, about half an inch apart. In early summer they should be potted in 2½-inch pots, and are better grown in a frame than in the greenhouse. In the fall, when brought into the houses, they should again be potted in 3 or 4-inch pots and grown in a temperature of 50°. The plants are of a woody nature and grow slowly, and should not be potted into too large pots, for it is far better to allow the roots to fill the pots before shifting. The following spring they will bloom and should then be potted in 6-inch pots and given a cool location in the houses. After the fruit has formed and grown to good size the plants should be given a good, sunny position, that they may take on a bright color by Christmas. If the plants are grown too warm the foliage will be thin and lack the substance and luster which make them so much admired in the cooler grown plants, and the warmer grown stock gets chilled very easily, when the berries will drop off. The only insect which infests this plant is the brown scale, which, if not destroyed, will cover the plant stem completely. These should be carefully removed and continually guarded against. If there are any old plants that have dropped their lower leaves, the tops of these can be rooted in a similar manner to rooting rubbers, that is, by cutting into the stem and mossing the cut and, after the roots have appeared in the moss, the tops cut off below the moss and potted.

Calceolarias.

A plant that always attracts attention and is as decorative as cineraria or other plants of that kind, and yet but little grown, is the calceolaria. The culture is very similar to that of the cineraria, and is fully as easy. The seeds should be sown at once and shaded until they have produced one or two leaves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as large enough they should be potted into small pots and shifted along into larger sizes as fast as required. They should, as soon as well established, be given a light, airy location, not shady enough for them to become drawn, but if in the full sunlight they will have to be watched closely that they do not get dry. They will require cool quarters during the winter, if nice, stocky plants are desired, and under this treatment fine 6-inch pot plants may be had in bloom in early spring that will surely attract attention. For the last potting a good, rich soil will be required, and when they begin to bloom, watering with liquid manure will be beneficial. Like the cineraria, they are quickly ruined by aphis, and constant fumigation will be necessary. Many growers stand the plants on tobacco stems, which are renewed as the strength is lost.

GAFFNEY, S. C.—H. D. Wheat is adding one house, 35x200 feet.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Manager Johnson of H. W. Buckbee's is calling on Ohio growers this week.

DARIEN, CONN.—Chas. Isselee, specializing in nursery stock, recently built one greenhouse here.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Lang Floral & Nursery Co., in addition to the extensive range acquired last year, is building five new houses, each 30x200 feet.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Construction will soon commence on greenhouses at the state prison in this city, to provide plants for the prison farm and other agricultural land owned by the state.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The coming week with its weddings and commencements should find all the live wires busy as bees in a clover field, the result of their preparatory work in display and general publicity that brought them the business. It is the wide awake, progressive hustler who is always on the job that can display a "busy" card almost any day in the year. There are always a number of occasional buyers who have no particular place at which they deal, and the man who by his attractive store and advertising keeps himself in the public mind and eye is the most likely to get this transient trade. Many florists work on the principle that the stock should sell itself, no effort being made to feature or display it in artistic arrangement, which if they could only be made to realize it is the greatest factor in attracting attention to their plants and flowers and creating new business.

The backward spring has greatly retarded the setting out of bedding plants, filling window boxes, vases and other outdoor plant work. The little bargain baskets of assorted plants should still be good stock to feature and display on the street front. Porch plants labeled as such will attract attention, help decorate the store and find ready sale.

It will soon be vacation time, for with the closing of the schools, the country and sea shore homes are quickly made ready for the summer. It is best to get the books well cleaned up before this exodus takes place, better have the money in the bank now, than be waiting for it in the autumn when the chances are not perhaps as good. Each dollar lost in bad debts is the profit on $10 worth of business, as very few balances can show even this margin for the year's work. If this fact was kept constantly in mind there would be a much closer scanning of accounts and very few uncollectible bills.

Now that Memorial Day is out of the way, it will be well to sit down and make a note of the business of the week in all its details. While the matter is fresh in your mind is the time to make such a record, which will be a reliable guide for 1922. It is a good plan to make a note of the stock you had on hand, that for which there was the greatest demand, and a little inventory of what was left, if any; how you featured the event, the window decorations, and a line on the quantity of wreaths and their construction.

There should also be a description of the business of Mothers' Day. This important floral holiday is rapidly coming to the front; it has already in places where the trade is alive to its possibilities, become of great importance. Make a note that you will start featuring the occasion well ahead of the event, and that the slogan, "Your Mother's Favorite Flower" shall be kept to the front so that the call shall be for all flowers and not just one kind.

Southern gladioli are now a factor in the market, the higher grades are fine and work nicely into sprays, adding to the variety at this season. The gladioli are a great summer flower, fitting to be used for the most artistic work. Always carry a few made up corsages; they are certain to be admired and frequently create a desire that leads to their purchase.

Feature a window of outside garden flowers, each vase correctly named. White lattice screens at the back will give a good boundary effect that will be quite decorative and add a realism to the picture.

Large tubs of hydrangeas that have been kept dormant and will come in about the same time as the outdoor plants are good stock to feature at this time. They make beautiful ornaments for the lawn, either for the country or seashore. A few letters to customers who are likely to be interested will be pretty sure to create trade along this line.

Sprays of the green or variegated privet are fine to use as a background for clusters of all long stemmed flowers. They also work in, particularly the variegated kinds, taking the place of flowers and adding a touch of golden color that produces a very good effect.

Members of the store trade should interest themselves in the "Every Member Get a Member" campaign of the Society of American Florists. This grand old society has done more in a practical way to advance the interests of the business in all its branches, than any other agency. Every man who belongs to the florists' fraternity should join this parent society out of which has grown so many efficient branches, every one of these being of more or less direct benefit to his business. If you are not affiliated join at once and get one other friend to help the good cause along.

What of the Future?

We have been having during the past few years a success in the floral kingdom causing us to act as though it were a natural condition, in spite of the fact, that not many years ago florists throughout this broad land of ours had to plough hard to get by. It is not so very long ago that with the rank and file in our business it was some task to meet the coal bills when even long overdue, let alone pay promptly as is now the case. It is not very long ago that with the grower it was early and late in the greenhouse, and not eight or nine hours a day as at present. Nor was it so very long ago that a majority of the growers could tell whether they were on the profit or loss side of the ledger. But at present conditions are different.

Most everyone these days comes to town in their automobiles and also have their business in such shape as to enable them to know what crops and varieties pay them the best; which to eliminate and which to develop, and in the main are enjoying much deserved success. This is some change from former years. We all appreciate that nothing succeeds like success, but we must also plan for the rainy day. Many lines of business that were very successful during and after the war period have lately felt the reverse condition to the extent that they have almost been wiped out, such as wool, leather, cotton, shoes, etc.; but the florists have not realized that they stand on the crest at this time and that we have passed the pivoted point of our unusual progress. We must now check ourselves up and find out what the future holds for us.

To the man who is planning ahead, whether he be grower or retailer, there is a desire to help continue to progress and he knows that in order to continue his prosperity he must make allowance for continued advertising to help create sales and build good will, and that the essential means to bring this about is to expend a part of his annual sales to help keep the ball a rolling. Many of the florists who were alert to the needs of advertising and felt the effects of good times were glad to put a part of their earnings into a national campaign fund, just to help it along, much like dropping a nickel into a blind man's hat; it might do some good, and if it didn't the cost was not great anyway. That is the way some entered into the spirit of our national campaign; others, however, took a more serious attitude and gave liberally, were interested in its work and undoubtedly reaped the benefits by tying up to the campaign locally or otherwise.

Now, we come to the point. The advertising that the florists have been doing, whether local or national, has helped materially in point of sales and also to arouse many to the needs of advertising. Many have overlooked the fact that it must be carried on continually to be of real benefit and that if we lie down at this time it means getting back to the old conditions of years ago. There are, however, too many men in the craft who have felt its pulse and who wish to further continue the work laid out by the national publicity committee who are seriously and intensely interested, referring, of course, to the men behind the National Growers' Association and those interested in the allied florists trade associations. These men have seen the light and are doing a big and unselfish work trying to make others see the need of a continuance of the work, and unless we all follow in line we will fall back to former conditions. We have made progress, let us continue.

HENRY PENN, Chairman,
National Publicity Committee.

The Grower-Retailer.

A very important branch of the business is that of the grower-retailer, many of whom are situated in the suburban residence districts of the large cities, in what was considered open country when the first greenhouse was erected. There was no thought of retailing their plants and flowers at that time; they were sold in the market, peddled around the stores, or sold through the commission men. As the residences began to go up in their neighborhood, there developed a local retail demand, through which their stock was disposed of to much better advantage and which they were not slow to cater to and encourage.

As the trade increased and customers desired orders sent, a small line of folding boxes was laid in. Then came the orders for funeral work, and not having the facilities to handle it, and doubting their skill to make a creditable job, this trade was turned over to a friendly retailer. By and by however as the demand increased, and at times when there must be immediate delivery, sprays were tied up that passed muster. About this time, the grower-retailers were discovered by the florists' supply concerns, and persuaded to lay in a small line of design frames, baskets, a few made up magnolia wreaths, chiffon, stemming material, etc.

From this period on the retailing of flowers became an important factor in the business. Previous to this time, all transactions had been closed in the greenhouse shed, the flowers being wrapped up on the potting bench. Finally waiting on trade began seriously to interfere with the necessary work of the greenhouses; customers, who made light purchases, would follow the salesman through all the houses and take up more time than they were worth. Then came the evolution of the street end of the shed into a small store with a show window. Some shelving and a counter, with a good display of the various supplies, together with a selection of foliage and flowering plants, transformed the former unattractive entrance into a complete little flower shop, that could not fail but make a favorable impression on the customers and visitors.

The store was about the depth of the width of the first house extending at right angles from the shed. A section of this with rearranged benches or tables was turned into a show house, which had a very attractive appearance from the store. Here were seen samples of all stock grown on the place and which in its arrangement made a much better display than when scattered in small batches in all the houses.

The retail business had now grown until it was a department in itself, and required the undivided attention of one person. If fortunately there was a son or daughter of the right age to take charge of the store, the evolution of the business was perfected, and its expansion and success assured.

THE SMALLER GROWER.

Many smaller growers who are situated in communities where the demand takes but a portion of their stock, send their main supply to be sold on commission. This splitting of their product is not advantageous, as a rule, as when flowers are scarce they seldom get as much at retail as would be returned from the wholesale house.

A grower with a considerable line of stock whose establishment was situated two miles from a large town tiring of this dual plan, decided to put in a telephone and advertise flowers from the greenhouse direct. In a short time he worked up a trade that took all he grew and frequently he had to buy from his neighbors to help fill orders.

The grower-retailer has a great advantage in that his stock being kept in the greenhouse is always at its best. He can also carry a larger line than is possible in the stores. Should the stock or certain specimens get larger or too high priced for his trade, he is certain of a market with prominent retailers, who are always glad of extra fine specimens.

Memorial Day in the Chicago Stores.

The Memorial Day business in the retail stores was disappointing and the total sales, according to most reports, were far below those of last year. The Allied Florists' Association carried considerable space in the daily papers with very appropriate copy and several of the leading retailers had good sized advertisements including A. Lange, George Wienhoeber, Alpha Floral Co., Schiller's and Henry Wittbold.

The department stores did a tremendous business in cut flowers and plants, which were sold to the public at ridiculously low prices, consequently the loop florists suffered heavily on this account. The street merchants and elevated stands had all the business they could conveniently handle and florists on the outskirts and those who sell at the cemeteries each year, reaped a harvest.

Stock was in exceptionally large supply, owing to the hot weather, but was of poor quality, although it improved considerably toward the end of the week. Peonies were to be had in quantity in the wholesale market at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1.50 per bunch or dozen flowers, according to quality. Home-grown peonies were in fair supply and brought high prices. Roses in practically all the varieties grown for this vicinity were plentiful and no trouble was experienced in securing all the stock necessary at low prices. Bedding stock sold well, especially geraniums, which were scarce. Feverfew, gladioli and lilies stood the hot weather best and were good sellers. Miscellaneous stock was in heavy supply and offered the buyer a great variety to select from. Magnolia wreaths were featured everywhere with the demand principally for low priced ones. Statice played an important part in some of the wreaths and took well. Some of the retailers had plenty of stock left unsold after the Memorial Day business was over. One of the retailers noticed that the street merchants were doing most of the business in his locality so he moved one of his tables out on the sidewalk and disposed of his stock the same way at sacrifice prices in order to move it.

DOOR-YARD HYBRID ROSE AT DR. VAN FLEET'S, BELL'S STATION, MD.

A Visit to Dr. W. Van Fleet.

To the lover of roses, there is no more interesting spot in this country than the experiment or test garden of the government at Bell's Station, Maryland, about 15 miles from Washington. This rose hybridization nursery is in charge of Dr. W. Van Fleet, than whom there is no higher authority, or one who has won greater achievement. He has delved into the secrets of hybridization of fruits and flowers from boyhood, and has had unusual success in many lines. A wonderful gooseberry, improved mulberries, well flavored strawberries that will bear all summer, superior raspberries and blackberries, disease resisting chestnuts, berberis in a number of varieties that are much more ornamental than the Japanese, and a number of new irises are but just a part of his successes in addition to his many creations in roses.

In these government gardens, there are several acres devoted entirely to hybridizing and trying out new varieties of roses. There are found growing here all the native species from Japan, China, and, in fact, all parts of the world. These are crossed and recrossed with one another and with all the cultivated varieties of the garden and greenhouse.

Dr. Van Fleet is an indefatigable worker. All through the spring and early summer, he is up and in the field at 4:30 a. m., preparing the blooms for fertilizing by removing the pollen. This is necessary, for as soon as the pollen bursts, fertilization takes place. Nearly all of the florets or flower petals are also taken so that the bloom will no longer attract bees or other insects. Pollen for crossing is ready as soon as the stamens burst or open. It must be kept absolutely dry. All the forcing and hardy garden varieties are used as pollen parents. Nearly, if not quite all the work, is done out-of-doors. Growing a number of the varieties, (species) in pots under glass, would facilitate matters for quicker results, particularly in the forcing sorts, but the spring is the best time, when the growth is not so gross as in early winter under glass. Dr. Van Fleet does not think strangulation of the rose stem is of much, if any, assistance in perfecting the flower for fertilization, nor filing, cutting or soaking the hard seed covering, will assist it in generating. The hips are gathered out-of-doors from August until frost. The seeds should be planted at once as soon as the hip colors up. The ripening of the seed goes on in the soil after planting. The seed are sown about 50 to a 6-inch pot. Use clean pots, clean crocks, in bottom for drainage, good loam half way up, then clean, but not rich soil, to within an inch of the top. Then sow the seed and cover with half an inch of clean sand. Hardy varieties are best placed in a cold frame to start evenly, as in the greenhouse, strong growers will start first.

It takes anywhere from six months to five years for seed to germinate at the gardens. The frame in which the pots are plunged, has a concrete border 10 inches deep with a wire mesh bottom which protects from mice. A wire guard encloses the beds to keep out the rabbits in winter. Last season, the 17-year locusts destroyed many of his early crosses which had been made with great care. Branch after branch, covered with seed hips which had taken nicely, were punctured by the locusts and destroyed beyond this point. This was a great disappointment and loss to Dr. Van Fleet as they could not be renewed or made again.

The number of varieties and the crosses and recrosses are bewildering. There is a magnificent collection of the rugosas which he has greatly improved. Many of the species from China and Japan are new. First and second crosses from these look very promising. There are a number of new varieties, the results of careful hybridization of the past 10 years that are ready to go out. These are exceptionally fine in many respects, being very hardy, a quality Dr. Van Fleet is continually working for. A variety, pure white with yellow stamens, is very hardy and wonderfully floriferous, the foliage being almost concealed by the blossoms. It is a great door-yard variety. W. S. 18, a salmon blush turning to white, single, with two-inch flowers in wonderful clusters, carrying them in great masses, is another rose for everybody. Another superb variety is a cross between the Beaute de Lyon, a Bagatelle garden first prize winner, and Wichuraiana. This is a superbly beautiful rose, blush fading to pure white as it remains open, flowers four inches in diameter and very profuse. It is a most vigorous grower and very hardy. It should have an open position with good soil, and will make a wonderful record. W. C. No. 237 is another winner, a luminous pink, semi-double with three-inch flowers. This is a wonderfully bright flower that will stand out anywhere. It is one of his best. W. M. 5 is a brilliant carmine, golden stamens, very distinct two-inch flowers, much more brilliant and striking than Hiawatha. W. C. 124 is a tall-growing double-pink with flowers five inches in diameter. (Testout x Wichuraiana). It is the largest flowered of the Wichuraiana seedlings. A cross between Canina and Moyesii is an intense crimson scarlet, stamens bright yellow, which blooms May 20, before rose chafers appear. It is a tremendous grower. A prolific creamy white Cherokee x Wichuraiana, is remarkably free and very hardy.

A new type is a hardy everblooming tea rose, a cross between Jersey Beauty and Isabella Sprunt. This is creamy yellow, with a small flower borne in great clusters, which form on all new growths. The bush was round, as if sheared, and six feet in diameter. Its first flowers make it a mass of color all over. Rosa Helenea is the best of the new Chinese species. It has small flowers but large clusters, and is very promising for crossing. The Chinese species, sertata, is a new type as its flowers hang down underneath the branches like fuchsias. The foliage is fine cut, lace like, as are many others of the Chinese varieties. Rosa multibracteata has very beautiful foliage. There is also a cross between Hugonis and altaica which has handsome foliage, and flowers, a fine yellow, three times larger than Hugonis. Another of the same parentage is almost double, also a fine variety. Rosa Willmottiæ is the earliest of all in flower, is very profuse, with beautiful foliage. Engelmanii has a long season of bloom. Crossed with Moyesii, it has shown fine results. One selection is an intense, fiery crimson with flowers three inches in diameter. Other crosses are also most promising. Rosa Gentiliana, a new species, is a climber, single white, from north central China. The flowers are said to resemble the mock orange, but are purest white, and nothing in nature that the doctor has ever seen, exceeds it in profusion of bloom. Great results are expected from crosses with this variety. An imported rose, Emily Grey, a British gold medal winner, is being grown for crossing purposes. It is described as a superb yellow.

There are many other very beautiful varieties, and hundreds that will flower this year or next spring for the first time. The work that Dr. Van Fleet is doing here is of the greatest benefit to the entire nation. His aim is to produce hardy, disease-proof, everblooming roses that will grow out-of-doors in all sections of the country.

The equipment at the garden appears very inadequate for such a great work, there being but one small greenhouse 12 feet in length. It would seem as if the doctor should have the assistance of young men to relieve him of detail clerical work in recording his thousands of crosses made every year and many other matters that would make his task lighter. Such associates would gradually become familiar and be of the greatest assistance in the work that the rapid increase of varieties entails.

Arrangements are now being made through the American Rose Society, looking to the dissemination of Dr. Van Fleet's finished varieties.

MEDFORD, WIS.—V. A. Thomas will make an addition to his greenhouses in the near future.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The First National Bank will hold its second annual peony show during th early part of June in the bank building.

SAWTELLE, CALIF.—Walter Armacost & Co. recently doubled their greenhouse area, growing cyclamens, roses and other stock.

PIERSON, FLA.—The acreage of Asparagus plumosus grown here for shipment to northern points, totals approximately 10 acres.

Society of American Florists.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEMBERSHIP.

Formal notification has been received that the Society of American Florists has been elected to membership in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Affiliation with the national chamber gives the society a voice in the activities and affairs of that constantly growing business organization, which now numbers about 1,400 commercial and trade organizations.

Closely following its election to the national chamber, President Thomas Roland appointed John K. L. M. Farquhar, of Boston, Mass., national councillor, who will serve as a connecting link between the society and the national chamber in Washington, D. C. Hereafter when policies affecting business are under discussion by the federal authorities, the society will have a chance to express itself, in as much as one of the chief functions of the Chamber of Commerce, is to voice the business sentiment of the country. From time to time referenda are sent out by the national chamber for purpose of ascertaining for the benefit of congress and the government departments, opinions prevailing throughout the country on questions of importance.

The views and opinions of the nation's business men, expressed through the national chamber, are listened to with respect. In fact, the views of the chamber, on important legislative matters affecting trade are sought. Never before in the history of the United States have business interests been so efficiently represented at the national capital, toward which there seems to be an increasing business centralization all the time.

The national chamber will soon have a home of its own, just across Lafayette square from the White House. A $2,500,000 fund for this building has practically been all subscribed. It will be an elaborate workshop for American business, in the study and solution of its national problems. In order to be of greater service to its members, and the business men of the nation generally, the business organization of the national chamber, was recently divided into departments, the various sections being: Foreign trade, insurance, transportation and communication, domestic distribution, fabricated production, natural resources and civic development. The aim of these sections, is to help the business man solve his problems, and gain new markets for American trade. Members have the privilege of utilizing them, which virtually amounts to the Society having a special Washington representative. Membership in the national chamber entitles the society to receive a weekly general bulletin containing news of commercial interests, a weekly legislative bulletin while congress is in session, which follows the progress and gives a digest of legislation having relation to the conduct of business. They also receive a special bulletin which is issued whenever any matter of commercial importance arises which is not regularly covered, as well as "The Nation's Business," the official magazine of the organization.

Forcing Dutch Bulbs.

The first thing the forcer has to do after receiving the bulbs is to unpack immediately. Frequently one is inclined to leave the bulbs in the boxes till one has time for potting. But it is not only necessary to take the bulbs out of the boxes, but they must also be taken out of the paper bags, and other materials in which they were packed. When this has been done, the bulbs must be spread out thinly in an airy, not too dry place where the temperature varies between 60 degrees to 70 degrees, Fahr. In about two or three days the bulbs will be sufficiently dry for potting, but if one has no time to do this so quickly, the bulbs must be put in a cooler place, where the temperature does not rise higher than 60 degrees Fahr. A high temperature will delay the development of the new flower and, of course, that is of great harm to the forcer. The first days after unpacking also attention must be given that the temperature does not rise higher than 70 degrees Fahr., and afterwards till potting not higher than 60 degrees Fahr. A common practice is to spread the bulbs in an empty greenhouse, but as may be learned from above this is a bad system.

Bulbs for early forcing must be potted in the first week of September. For forcing in the second part of January and after that date, potting in October will give good results. It is a wise man who orders his bulbs for early forcing as soon as he can. Then the bulb exporter has opportunity to prepare the bulbs in the best way and pay attention to all things necessary for good bulbs for early forcing.

The soil for potting is an important thing. This should never have been previously used for the same purpose. Many failures of tulips are caused by using soil in which bulbs have already been grown. The best soil for our purpose is not manured, pure mould or old leaf mould. Manure in the soil is not necessary, as the bulbs have sufficient food to develop flowers and leaves. Fresh manure is always hurtful.

THE CROPPS IN THE WOODS.
Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and Mrs. Cropp Enjoying the Maytime in the Woods Near Their Western Springs Home.

For pots we only use those in which other plants have been grown one or two seasons, specially for hyacinths. We have seen very bad results with hyacinths which were planted in new pots, though these had been laid two months in water before using. By inspection the roots of the hyacinths were brown and burnt. In some cases no flowers at all was developed and in others one of third quality.

Tulips are often grown in boxes, but we cannot sufficiently emphasize the need to clean these thoroughly. The best way to do this is just after forcing. We have seen failures in large batches of tulips only as a result of uncleaned boxes. Therefore take particular care in this matter.

After potting the bulbs, the boxes, pans or pots must be laid in a pit. This pit may be four to six inches, but not deeper. A wet place is not suitable for making a pit because wetness causes delay in development. If the place is too dry, the regular rooting of the bulbs is hindered. A shaded position is better than a sunny for early forcing.

For covering the boxes and pots, one must use pure soil, if possible pure sand. If all these things have been done the whole pit is readily kept properly moist. To make it possible to get out the boxes or pots in winter, one may cover the pit with leaves, reeds or heat dust.—Hollandia in British Horticultural Advertiser.

QUIET TONE IN MARKET.

Trade was decidedly quiet last week in all branches. The slump in the demand for stock left large supplies in the hands of the wholesalers and very low prices prevailed for most offerings. There is again a great oversupply of roses and in many cases it has been at buyers' prices. We have seen first-grade Mrs. Chas. Russell sell as low as $1 per bunch. Premier and Columbia were a trifle higher. American Beauties are scarce and will hardly figure in the market again this season. Ophelia and Hadley are in good supply with very little demand. Ulrich Brunner is quite plentiful; Cecil Brunner is also in large supply. Carnations are holding up well considering the low figures being received for other stock. All varieties of first-class grade are bringing $2 per hundred; Laddie is much higher. Sweet peas are selling for $1 per dozen bunches. There has been some improvement in the quality of the stock offered. Gladioli of the finest quality are coming in and wholesale readily at $1.50 per dozen. Peach Blossom and Bride gladioli are also plentiful and are offered at $1 per 100. Orders for Memorial Day for this stock are being booked at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2 per 100. Lily of the valley holds firm at $8 per 100. Gardenias have shown great improvement during the past few weeks, and cleans up well. Orchids just about supply the demand with no change in prices. Snapdragons of fair quality are coming in freely. Giganteum lilies are still to be had but in limited quantities only. There are plenty of irises. For basket work there is a great variety of outdoor perennials to choose from and all find a market in limited quantities. It is expected that next week will usher in the June bride and create a better movement of all cut stock. There is a good supply of all foliage and ornamental plants. Flowering plants with the exception of rhododendrons are scarce. Flowering eucalpytus in variety is being carried by all the stores. Greens and ferns of every description arrive on a well filled market.

NOTES.

Ernst Jacobsen, a well-known florist of this city, died at Bayes Springs on May 15. For many years Mr. Jacobsen conducted a flower store at 509 Haight street. He was a native of Hamburg, Germany, and is survived by a widow and daughter. He was a prominent member of the Germania Club and a charter member of the Retail Florists' Association. Mr. Jacobsen was held in the highest respect and esteem by all in the trade. Many members of the trade were in attendance at his funeral. His business will be conducted as heretofore by David Rosenberg, who has been a partner in the firm for a number of years.

M. H. Ebel, Sacramento, was in the city during last week, arranging for his Memorial Day supply of cut flowers.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee was in a fine position to handle her Memorial Day shipping business, as her growing establishment at San Leandro produced heavily of gladioli.

The preliminary prize list for the fall flower show to be given under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the Retail Florists' Association at the Exposition Auditorium on October 26-28, has been issued.

Secretary F. C. Burns of the Dahlia Society of California said that many growers are taking advantage of the new trial grounds at the University of California to test their new productions.

The Retail Florists' Association sent out notices to all stores to remain open on Sunday, May 29, if they desired to do so, in order to handle the large volume of business.

Arrangements for the mass meeting to be held in this city by all connected with the floral industry on Tuesday evening, June 7, are progressing favorably.

Nels Peterson, of the Peninsula Nursery, San Mateo, is sending in the finest gladioli of the season.

A public rose show was held by the California Seed Company at its Market street store on May 19-21.

At the June meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society a sweet pea show will be held.

The Art Floral Co. used large space in the daily papers last week for Memorial day.

Chilean Nitrate Sale.

Announcement is made of the sale of 2,000,000 tons of nitrate, by the Chilean Nitrate Producers Association to a nitrate pool in London, at 14 pounds per ton, $56 at present exchange rates. Should the pool be forced to sell below this price, the loss will be borne equally by the pool and the producers. Payment of export duties to the Chilean government is guaranteed, even if there are no sales by the pool. The shipment will begin in September. This arrangement was made in view of the decision of President Alessandri to urge a law for the nationalization of nitrate sales. Discussion of this step will be held in abeyance until every effort has been made to relieve the stagnation in the nitrate business. Producers are urging that the export duty be slightly reduced, and that the government guarantee to help toward the maintenance of the industry.

NORWICH, CONN.—N. Silverman, of Boston, Mass., opened a flower shop in this city recently.

ONEONTA, N. Y.—Louis Angelillo recently opened a new flower shop at 220 Main street.

OBITUARY.

James F. M. Farquhar.

James F. M. Farquhar, vice-president of the R. & J. Farquhar Co., of Boston, Mass., died at the Boston City hospital, May 23, age 68 years. His death was the outcome of an apoplectic shock received eight years ago. Mr. Farquhar was born in Fyvie, Scotland, in 1853, and came to the United States when 17 years of age, making Providence, R. I., his home. A few years afterward he located in Boston and had charge of Forest Hills cemetery. With increasing experience he decided to embark in the seed business with his brother Robert, and in 1882 formed the R. & J. Farquhar Co. Robert Farquhar left the business shortly afterward, and another brother, John, who became associated with him in the enterprise, eventually became president of the company, and continued the business after Mr. Farquhar's retirement eight years ago, because of ill health. He was a member of various horticultural societies, and the New England Seed Trade Association. He had made his home at the Hotel Oxford, in Boston, for many years. The funeral services were held in the chapel at Forest Hills cemetery, May 25. For one hour on that day the nurseries at Dedham and the store in Boston were closed in respect to the founder of the company.

Mr. Farquhar is survived by his wife, Jennie Hunt Farquhar, and three brothers: John, of Boston; Robert, of Cambridge, and Dr. William Farquhar, of Aberdeen, Scotland. Mrs. Geo. Nurison, of New York, and Mrs. James Henderson, of Scotland, are two sisters who survive him.

Mrs. Joseph A. Budlong.

Mrs. Budlong, wife of the late J. A. Budlong, and mother of Albert H. Budlong and Mrs. Florence B. Schupp, died at her residence, 2418 Foster avenue, Chicago, May 25. She was owner of the J. A. Budlong business up to about two years ago, when Albert H. Budlong took over the greenhouses and her son-in-law, Philip Schupp, the wholesale store known as the J. A. Budlong Co. Mrs. Budlong was well-known to the trade, although she was not active in business.

There were many floral offerings from the trade at the funeral, which was held from Rosehill chapel, May 28, at 2 p. m. It was largely attended and the family have the sympathy of the entire trade in their great loss.

William H. Fierabend.

William H. Fierabend, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., died at his home in that city on May 28, in his thirty-ninth year. He had been in poor health for about six months and confined to his bed for three weeks before his death. It has been stated that the beginning of his illness was from an ulcerated tooth which developed fatal complications. Although a comparatively young man, Mr. Fierabend had established a fine business and his carnation range was one of the largest and most productive in the state of New York.

He is survived by his wife and three sons and a brother, Louis Fierabend, Jr.—A. F. F.

TOPEKA, KANS.—Mrs. M. E. Hollcraft, who has been engaged in the retail florist business here for many years, died May 30.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Mrs. Bonnot, wife of E. Bonnot, florist, 115 Monticello avenue, died May 15.

REPLIES by return mail means a clean desk and a reputation for attention to business that is well worth while.

BEDDING plant growers should specialize with the best and discard the rest. Too much variety creates a stock that soon eats its head off.

Glass Combine.

A nation-wide scheme of manufacturers of "flat" glass to close the plants for fixed periods each year, limiting the production and maintaining prices at a level four or five times above that of pre-war days, was disclosed by Samuel Untermeyer before the Lockwood committee on housing, in New York.

Each Member Get a Member.

The great drive to double the membership of the Society of American Florists this year should receive the hearty co-operation of the entire trade. Every florist should join the organization and take pride in his membership in it. The society has such a record of acheivement, and in its personnel of the best men of the trade, is sure to confer mutual benefit to all members.

National Flower Growers' Association.

Every grower in the land should join this live organization of practical greenhouse men who are banding together for the betterment and expansion of the business. Join your local body, or if none has yet been formed, interest your fellow workers in getting together and organizing at once. It is by far the greatest movement ever fathered by the trade and has wonderful possibilities.

Public Rose Gardens.

This month the rose gardens everywhere will be at their best, presenting a gorgeous display that does much to encourage and create a desire for similar garden adornment at home. As a publicity movement the florists of every community should get together and present to the powers that be a plan for a public rose garden. Prominent citizens, most of them customers of the trade and lovers of flowers, would be sure to join in such a movement and insure its success. Once planted and established it will be found to be a great factor in creating a love for plants and flowers and the planting of home lawns with ever-blooming and rambler roses.

Cornell University

DEPARTMENT OF FLORICULTURE.

Prof. E. I. Wilde, of Pennsylvania State College is doing some special work in the department of floriculture, under the direction of Prof. E. A. White and Dr. A. C. Beal.

A. W. W. Sand, who is working on the Gorus iris, spent a week in New York and Philadelphia, Pa., where he made a special study of the varieties in flower at the present time. He was given valuable assistance by John C. Wister, president of the American Iris Society.

Prof. E. A. White, head of the department of floriculture, will leave for Europe in the very near future. He expects to spend some time at the Kew Gardens and from there he will go on to Holland, Belgium and France.

The rose test garden is in excellent condition and the matrial came through with a much smaller percent of injury than usual. The peonies, irises and phlox are also in fine shape for this season of the year. S. C. Hubbard, who is in charge of the test gardens says that the peonies will be better than they have been for a good many years.

Harold A. Pratt, who is temporarily in charge of the greenhouses at Massachusetts Agricultural college will return to the university some time next month to resume his duties in the Department.

Arthur Bool, who is in charge of the growing for the Bool Floral Co., Ithaca, N. Y., has a wonderful collection of bedding stock for the spring trade. He also has a fine lot of Cincinnati begonias ready for shipment. Ralph Roskelly, who is in charge of the store, reports a considerable increase in his Mothers' Day trade over previous years. The average run of business also shows an improvement.

Washington Convention Railroad Rates.

The Southwestern Passenger Association, comprising the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Louisiaia, has granted a rate of a fare and one-half on identification certificates to the convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in Washington, D. C., August 16-18. This is in addition to the reduced rates authorized by other trunk lines and passenger associations as announced in our issue of May 28, page 906.

The dates of sale for tickets from points in Texas are August 11-13, with a return limit to August 24, inclusive. For Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, the purchasing dates are August 13-15, tickets being good until August 22, inclusive. Tickets can be purchased in the states of Arkansas and Louisiana from August 14-16, inclusive, with August 21 as the return limit. Validation dates for the entire territory are from August 16-19, inclusive.

Memorial Day Trade.

The reports received from many centers indicate the Memorial Day business was fully equal to that of a year ago. Cool weather which prevailed in the east had the tendency to shorten the supply to a great extent, and many dealers were unable to supply the public with sufficient stock. Unusually warm weather in the west brought flowers forward with a rush, and in some cases affected their quality. All plants and cut flowers sold well, with peonies the favorites in many sections. Prices were somewhat lower than last year.

A very considerable demand developed for artificial Flanders poppies, other wax and crepe flowers not making their competition felt.

Poppies for Memorial Day.

The American Legion having adopted the poppy as the flower to be worn in the buttonhole on Memorial Day, created a demand that for the present can only be supplied by artificial material. Poppy flowers made of silk have been imported for this purpose, and sold for the benefit of soldiers' orphans in France. Flanders field poppies in flower would find ready sale at this time and should not be difficult to the average grower. The custom of wearing a flower as suggested by the Legion should be taken up and featured by the trade, red carnations or red roses being offered where the poppy is not available.

A view of the beautiful George Fitzmaurice estate at Great Neck, Long Island, showing several of the magnificent trees which it was the privilege of Davey Tree Surgeons to assist in saving

Work on a tree of the George Fitzmaurice estate, illustrating the Davey method of sectional filling. Notice how well the bark has healed in 3 months over the edges of the filling, which, in time, will be completely covered

Father of Tree Surgery

"I gladly recommend your company"

The tribute of Robert Hughes to Davey Tree Surgery

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., Great Neck, L. I.
Kent, Ohio

Gentlemen: I am taking this opportunity to write and express my entire satisfaction with the work done by your men under my direction on the Fitzmaurice estate at Great Neck, L. I.

It has been my privilege to see a great deal of tree surgery performed in different sections of the country, but I never saw trees respond to treatment so readily. The bark has healed nearly one-half inch over the cement filling, which seals the cavity completely in a few months' time.

To anyone desiring real service in connection with the saving of old trees, I would gladly recommend your company.

Sincerely yours,
Robert Hughes, Superintendent.

Every gardener and estate superintendent has a most important work in the saving of the trees under his care.

Davey Tree Surgery brings to his aid the highest development of science plus a generation of experience. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

Montgomery's Priscilla

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following growers:

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Dailledouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.
Duckham-Pierson Co., Madison, N. J.
Rowayton Greenhouses, Rowayton, Conn.

HEAVY MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND.

Memorial Day trade was excellent the past week. Plants of all kinds sold well, but because of the high prices asked for cut flowers, stock moved slowly. Peonies were just in bud, due to the cold weather during the week, and very few found their way to the market. Carnations sold at $2 per dozen. Roses were not much in demand. Liberal offerings of irises, snapdragons, arabis, larkspurs, Darwin tulips and stocks were received. A good call for lily of the valley and orchids was had. Bedding plants for the garden and porch boxes were much in demand.

NOTES.

Geo. T. Boucher, decorated a Memorial Day window consisting of magnolia wreaths and orchids. The background was draped with purple and lavender plush.

The Memorial Day display at H. E. Wilson's store consisted of large magnolia wreaths on easels, draped with American flags.

Some fine campanula was seen at John B. Keller & Sons establishment.

All of the stores reported excellent sales of magnolia and galax wreaths.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE EXCELLENT.

May was the most profitable month that the florists have enjoyed this year. The weather all last week was unseasonably hot, which increased the daily cut for Memorial Day, but it affected the quality of the stock to such an extent that it was poor policy to hold over supplies from one day to the next. The demand was excellent and the offerings were adequate. More colored stock could have been readily disposed of as the white varieties were used as a substitute. The call for spring plants was very great and everything with a flower was sold before Saturday. When these were gone good plants with buds, whether showing color or not sold readily. Memorial Day business this year is considered the best ever experienced by the trade.

Richard Lietz was overcome by the intense heat on May 30 and is confined to his bed.

A. Reinhardt sailed from New York, May 28, on the S. S. Ryndam for Europe. E. O.

FORCING BULBS FOR IMPORT

When you buy imported bulbs from us, you buy them by measure, in centimeters or inches and so accepted by us. This means much, as against those people who sell "firsts," "seconds" or "thirds" and give you no assurance as to what such grades measure.

For 40 years VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE at New York and Chicago has supplied the most critical FLORISTS with forcing bulbs. If you have not placed your ORDER or you have not confirmed your order at stated prices why not send us your list for pricing. Where prices are not fixed we can give you valuable information.

1st. Long and satisfactory connections with the best foreign houses.

2nd. Credit arrangements and closest buying at favorable exchange rates.

3rd. First early shipments, followed by one or more later ones covering entire shipping season.

4th. Earliest deliveries of early forcing items which cannot rightly be delayed for main supply.

5th. Covering by us of all "Special Expenses" excess brokers' fees and port charges at New York, in which nearly every U. S. Florist grower has been persistently robbed for the past five years. We eliminate this.

6th. Because of the above, we ask that you submit to us a list as nearly as possible of what you expect to use between now and next November in these imports, part of which we specify below, and let us submit to you approximate prices and certain further details regarding delivery dates which we know will interest you.

We take this opportune time to list here a few vital reasons why Vaughan's Seed Store at New York and Chicago is especially well prepared to take the responsibility of supplying in season at right prices your whole list of Forcing Bulbs both American grown and imported French, Dutch and Japanese.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

The demand for stock for Memorial Day was exceptionally heavy and large quantities were shipped out and used locally for this occasion. Stock was in exceptionally large supply, owing to the warm weather and some of it arrived in very poor condition and had to be dumped or sacrificed in order to move it. First-class stock was scarce and brought high prices, but the market cleaned up better than anyone expected, considering that there was probably more stock offered in this market for this occasion than at any other time. Roses were in large supply and sold at different prices, according to quality. Mrs. Chas. Russell was in strong demand and there was a good call for Premier, Columbia, Dunlop, Butterfly, Crusader, Milday, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Ward, Ophelia, Sunburst and all the other varieties grown for this market. Carnations had a good call considering the hot weather and first-class shipping stock, such as it was, commanded fair prices. Peonies were quite plentiful and good stock sold for $8 per 100 up to $15 per 100. Sweet peas were poor and practically unfit for sale. Lilies and callas found ready buyers. Candytuft was in good demand and some fancy feverfew brought 75c and $1 per bunch. Calendulas, irises, larkspurs, daisies, corn flowers, forget-me-nots, stocks, snapdragons, poppies, statice, Cape Jasmines, gladioli, dephiniums, and all other miscellaneous stock was in large supply and in some instances cleaned out completely. Greens were in strong demand and commanded high prices, especally smilax, which brought 50 cents a string in some instances. Prices as a whole were not as high as last year and it is a question whether the total sales will be as large, but considering the extremely hot weather everyone appears to be pretty well satisfied with the results, which were better than expected earlier in the week.

NOTES.

The Central Floral Co. had an order for a large horseshoe of roses and carnations, which were delivered to the Apollo theatre on the opening day, May 30. This firm's Memorial Day window was up to its usual high standard and in keeping with the beautiful displays across the street.

A. E. Shaw, dealer in fancy cut ferns, with headquarters at George Reinberg's store, will leave for Michigan this week to secure stock, if possible, for his early summer trade. He will have his usual supply of eastern stock to offer next season.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had the order for the two baskets that adorned the entrance of the Apollo theatre on the opening date, May 30. They were artistically arranged in the usual Fleischman style.

Wietor Bros. report an exceptionally heavy call for chrysanthemum and pompon stock and if the orders keep coming in the way they have been the past few days they will be sold out in short order.

Mrs. Florence B. Schupp and Albert H. Budlong have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their mother, whose death occurred last week, an account of which appears in the obituary column.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving regular shipments of iris from the proprietor's farm at Highland Park. This firm will have a steady supply of outdoor stock from the same place all season.

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her mother, whose death occurred at St. Anthony's hospital, where she was receiving treatment for pneumonia. She was 57 years of age and well-known to members of the trade, who had occasion to partake of her hospitality on several occasions. The funeral was held from the residence, 2335 South Millard avenue, June 1, at 9 a. m., with services at St. Paul's church and interment at St. Boniface cemetery. The funeral was largely attended and the floral offerings from the trade were many and beautiful.

GOOD DEMAND FOR STOCK.

From all expectations and advance demand, Decoration Day business will exceed last year's trade. Magnolia wreaths are very popular, ranging in price from $4 to $25. Peonies are to be had but are not of excellent quality. Gladioli are in heavy demand and command $4 to $6 a dozen. Carnations and Cape Jasmines are having a brisk call, and roses are holding their own from $3 to $10 a hundred. Sweet peas are in large supply and move freely at 75 cents to $1 a bunch. Darwin tulips are selling at $3 a dozen. Bedding plants as usual are having a heavy call and all good stock is gone. Geraniums bring $3 to $6 a dozen and lantanas $3 a dozen retail. The wholesale prices on geraniums in pots range from 12 to 50 cents each, lantanas 12 cents in 3-inch pots, vincas 15 cents, thunbergia 10 cents, double petunias 20 cents and coleus eight cents each.

The retailers here are suffering from the competition of the department stores. Growers in other cities who have an agreement not to sell stock to these establishments in their home towns sell their surplus to department stores in other centers.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR STOCK.

The weather has been unusually hot during the past week and all plants have come on with a rush. Due to this excessive heat, many cut flowers have not held up well. Southern greens show the effect of the weather very noticeably. Business was very slack during the fore part of the week but has stiffened up perceptibly the last few days and a very large trade is now being handled. All florists were pushed to the limit to fill their Memorial Day orders on time. Pot plants of all kinds are in great demand. The nurseries are doing a good business and report that all flowering shrubs are selling well. Their best sellers are pot plants, hardy hydrangeas, spiraeas, diervillas, magnolias and Philadelphus. Combination flower baskets are selling readily. Roses of excellent quality are plentiful and the prices are moderate. The demand for such varieties as Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier, Columbia, Butterfly, Milady, Ward, Ophelia and Killarney is exceptional. Carnations are plentiful and their quality is good. They sell well, all dark varieties getting the preference. Many white flowers were disposed of for Memorial Day. The supply of peonies is gradually increasing. Some fancy Japanese varieties are among the floral offerings and they bring a good price. Delphiniums are limited and clean up rapidly. Only shades of blue have appeared on the market as yet. Cattleya's are scarce this week and the demand for them is brisk. Many are being used in corsage work. A limited number of cypripediums have made their appearance and clean up rapidly. Large numbers of gladioli are arriving and find a ready market. Loveliness and Hadley are the two most prominent kinds. Their quality is superb and the prices as yet are high. A limited supply of fine cut stocks are among the offerings and enjoy a good call. Pot plants of stock are offered by a very few tradesmen. Daisies, both yellow and white, are plentiful and are seen in practically all windows, both as a cut flower and pot plant. Some exceptionally fine Shasta daisies are beginning to make their appearance and they are much preferred to the common yellow and white daisies. As yet the supply is limited and the price high. Corn flowers are coming in in large quantities in colors of pink, blue and white. Snapdragons are few and far between. Sweet peas of first quality are not numerous but there is an abundance of large flowered, very short-stemmed stock. Calceolarias are becoming scarce. Lilium Harrissii is not plentiful, but may be had at most establishments. The blooms are of good quality and the demand is fair. Lily of the valley is hard to obtain. Irises of the German variety are more than plentiful, having replaced the Spanish iris. It sells well, however, and is being used as a combination flower in baskets. Calendulas are numerous. Callas are limited and are valuable property this week. Thousands were sold for Memorial Day and funeral work. Begonia plants are good sellers this week and the prices are moderate. Novelties such as pandanus, dracaenas, cibotium and bird's nest ferns, artemisia and crotons show no change in price. Bedding plants are selling at a good rate. They are not very plentiful this season. Plants of ageratum, geraniums, marguerites, stocks, yellow callas, etc., are for sale in practically all establishments and their demand is excellent. Greens are plentiful this week but good ferns are scarce. All southern stock being shipped in turns brown very shortly. Good ferns are in big demand and bring $5 per 1,000.

STOCK SELLS READILY.

With the offering of stock about equalling the demand and prices about the same as they were last year with the exception of peonies, which were lower, and roses, which were a trifle higher, the trade is well pleased with the returns from their Memorial Day business. The rather unseasonable weather that has been prevailing here for some weeks was responsible for rather a poor cut of peonies and outdoor stock generally. The top price last year on peonies was $20 per hundred; this year the limit was $5 per hundred or under that figure, the retail price both years being $3 to $4 per dozen. A large part of the supply came from northern points. Roses are not used for Memorial Day here, but there are many school commencements, and following the holiday come the June weddings. Fine grade Mrs. Chas. Russell has been quoted as high as $35 per hundred for the best. The retailers are placing orders for these, and for lily of the valley, orchids and all high grade stock, and it is expected that the coming week will develop a demand in excess of the supply. Carnations and sweet peas are not good, but the best bring fair prices. The week's offerings were limited by the lack of outdoor flowers and in many instances orders for Memorial Day had to go unfilled because of their late arrival.

GOOD DEMAND FOR STOCK.

There was a rather active demand for all kinds of flowers during the week preceding Memorial Day. Flowers are now coming in rapidly and the quality is generally good. Peonies are not up to the standard of previous years because of the excessive rainfall during the week, but other varieties have been good. The demand has just about absorbed the supply and as a result there was none held over to any extent. Peonies are the new flowers on the market. Roses are selling quite well and the same is true of carnations. Snapdragons are also moving fairly well at previous prices. In fact, there was no advance in prices for Memorial Day, as the florists are figuring on a fair business at former price levels. Plants are coming in better now and there is a good demand for the entire list. Funeral work was very active during the past week. There is also some party work and arrangements are being made for graduation exercises, which always stimulate the demand for flowers. Weddings are also rather numerous.

EXCELLENT MEMORIAL DAY TRADE.

The market was very poor at the opening of the week, but gained strength very quickly later on. Carnations, roses, and peonies were mostly in demand, the colored varieties bringing a premium over the white. Good colored carnations sold at $12 a hundred, and white kinds brought as low as $3 to $4. The same conditions prevailed as to roses. The flowers for bouquet work sold very well. Feverfew brought 75 cents a bunch at the start, then went to $1, finally slumping to 50 cents. Candy tuft was quite scarce and very poor in quality. The hot weather of a week ago spoiled considerable of it. Colored stock had a good call with white selling only by forcing. No native peonies were received, but southern stock was of fine quality. Callas were very scarce, while Easter lilies were plentiful. Roses were fairly reasonable in price, except red varieties, due to the stock shipped in from other markets. Red roses sold from 12 to 50 cents each. The anticipated slump in cut flower sales did not materialize. The stores expected a very poor business for Memorial Day, owing to the expected demand for artificial stock. The wax and crepe flowers received a body blow. Most of the department stores had from $50 to several hundred dollars' worth left over. The opinion of the trade in general is that artificial stuff will not be seen in such large quantities again for many years. The retail shops in town report one of the best Memorial Days in the history of the business, and the wholesalers did at least 50 per cent more trade out of town than last year, which is showing a healthy condition for the business in general.

EXCELLENT MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS.

Memorial Day business the past week was the best in many years. Plenty of stock was on hand, and prices were reasonable. Many of the growers who attempted to dispose of inferior grades at a higth price met with little success. Roses arrived in poor condition due to the hot weather. Peonies of excellent quality sold from $6 to $10 per hundred. The offerings of gladioli were limited. Carnations went quickly at $6 to $8 per hundred. Lilies, gaillardias, coreopsis, Cape Jasmines, feverfew, cornflowers and other miscellaneous seasonable stock sold at a reasonable price and cleaned up well.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell had a banner week in the sale of Cape Jasmines, and is also very busy supplying greenhouse men with hanging baskets, moss and other accessories. He reports the best Memorial Day trade in several years.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is receiving some fair snapdragons from Aug. Juniet, North Fairmount, and some excellent Schwaban gladioli from Chas. Windram, Cold Springs, Ky.

WEATHER CONDITIONS SHORTEN SUPPLY.

The past week started in with an overstock of flowers, particularly roses, of which all the shipments were large. The cold snap which began on Monday and continued through Tuesday, immediately cut the supply down to one-third, which condition continued the balance of the week with the result that when the great demand came there was not nearly enough to go around. It was as one of the large dealers said, much like the situation at Mothers' Day—lots of flowers and no call, followed immediately by a great demand and no flowers. The weather was to blame in both instances, a condition from which there is no comeback, although it means a loss of thousands of dollars in the returns. The situation regarding the peony was unusual. Owing to the buds having been destroyed by the early frosts, there was only about one-third the usual crop, yet as it hit the market at the right time it was sufficient for all demands and there was a complete clean-up at top prices. All good stock sold readily at from $10 to $12 per 100 with a few lots of fancies bringing $15. Carnations were a disappointment, most of the stock being poor in form and quality, they were for the most part too soft to ship and had to be jobbed out to the street men at low prices. Some growers, however, sent in a higher grade, possibly one-fourth of the supply, which was sold at from $8 to $12. Outside shrubbery, which is usually a factor, was all past, the only garden flowers being cornflower, feverfew, and the dwarf and long stem larkspur. There was a considerable quantity of sweet peas, short snapdragons and calendulas. Easter lilies, which were plentiful, did not appear to be in as great demand as other flowers, bringing $15 to $20. Cattleyas and lily of the valley, while scarce, were equal to the demand. The volume of trade was if anything better than expected, orders were continuous throughout the week from out of town and later the local trade woke up and there was better buying for home consumption than for several years. It is safe to say that the increase was at least 10 per cent over that of last year.

HOLIDAY BUYING.

One of the large wholesalers, in speaking of the market and its various demands, stated that conditions were changing. The time was when it was difficult to handle their large stocks at holidays, but now the trouble is to get enough stock or a much larger and constantly increasing demand. The public, it seemed, were paying more attention to these various floral events, and the retailers were obliged to handle this business which was almost forced upon them. The difficulty now is to get dealers to carry stock between these events, and try to sell flowers to people when they will buy, just for the love and the joy they would give to the folks at home. If business men in other lines were to sit down and wait for the trade to come to them, many would be forced out of business. They make the people come by their continued advertising and featuring, and then by good salesmanship, work off their stock. If the majority of flower shops would carry a better and fuller supply and study ways of featuring to make it more attractive, they could soon double their business and benefit the entire trade.

FLANDERS FIELD POPPIES.

The feature of the decorations for Memorial Day was the poppy, the flower which was selected by the American Legion as their emblem to be worn on the lapel of the coat on that day. It was adopted at once all over the country, wholesale supply houses being called on for great quantities. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. sold thousands of gross of artificial poppies, which in form and color had a very natural look. They were quickly taken up by the local trade who worked them into sprays on magnolia wreaths and other designs for cemetery decoration. All the stores paid more or less attention to featuring the event in their windows with flags, made up wreaths, American Legion emblems, poppies, etc.

NOTES.

The street men who were selling poppies on Market street on Saturday last were ordered off the thoroughfare on complaint of the American Legion authorities, who declared they had the sole right to handle this emblem, the proceeds for which are to be turned over to help support orphan children of French soldiers. These are to be given in return for any amount the purchaser desires to present to the cause.

The Rose Flower Shop on 60th street had their car stolen from the front of the store on Friday night last. It had a patent steering gear lock, which however was no bar to the thieves. Complaint was at once made to the police and the car was discovered in a down town section of the city the next morning, and returned but little the worse for its escapade.

The London Flower Shop has purchased the store property they have occupied for a number of years on the southwest corner of 18th and Chestnut streets. Alterations are contemplated that will make it conform to the needs of their business.

Benj. Gibbs, Eugene Bernheimer's right hand man, visited the store for the first time since his serious illness on Saturday last. He is much improved and after a summer spent in the country expects to resume his former position.

"We found a good demand for everything in the list," said Edward Reid. "It was the best Memorial Day business for some time." Peonies, roses and carnations were his strong stocks.

The Leo Niessen Co. report a very satisfactory Memorial Day business. The outlook is good for the next two weeks, there being a big booking of flowers to supply June weddings.

TRADE FAIRLY ACTIVE.

A sudden change to cooler weather on May 24, was an advantage to the trade, as it decreased to some extent the arrivals of stock and steadied the market, which was becoming chaotic. But business was light up to May 27 when, largely on account of orders from other cities, a more active movement set in. The Memorial Day business of the local retail florists is always negligible. While they receive a few orders from nominal residents, who for the time being are residing elsewhere, the sum total is not great. Near all the large cemeteries there are numbers of florists who get the trade from the city and it is largely cheap trade. The cemetery florists are always well stocked with plants that comprise a considerable portion of their business. The seed and plant stores of the down town district have also been doing a good business in rose, bedding and other flowering plants. As above noted, the wholesale cut flower markets were fairly active on May 27 with considerable advance in prices on the shorter grades of roses, carnations and the best peonies, some of the better bringing $2 per dozen, and ordinary stock 75 cents to $1 per dozen. No. 2 and No. 1 roses, such as Columbia and Ophelia, that the previous week had been going from $1 to $6 per 100, went up to $4 to $10 per 100. Yet it was evident that a considerable quantity of stock was being held back and as the temperature is again rising there are prospects for a much heavier supply for May 30. The supply of sweet peas, which was enormous during the week ending May 21, was considerably reduced by the cool wave. There is little change in prices on orchids and lily of the valley, both being slow. As there was considerable funeral work the past week, Easter lilies and callas have been holding their own, the cool weather extending the time of the callas. In miscellaneous flowers, a noteworthy feature is a large stock of the wild spirea which seems to sell readily. It was stated in the wholesale district that business was not as good on Saturday, May 28, as it had been on the previous day. Visits to the cemetery florists showed that they were largely engaged in pushing bedding and larger plants. The representative of one of the leading florists doing business at Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, stated that their business was about equal to previous years. The wholesale stores were open on Sunday, May 29, but there was little business to reduce the heavy stocks of roses, carnations and sweet peas that were on hand. Carnations, the asking prices of which were $6 to $10 per 100 on May 27, dropped to $4 to $6, with few buyers.

May 30.—With an abundant supply of stock on the market there is little business. Memorial Day trade has been unsatisfactory. The demand for good stock in roses, carnations and sweet peas was disappointing. There was a considerable stock of poppies on the market at $2 to $4 per dozen, and while there was some demand for them, they did not clean up.

NOTES.

Among the incidents preceding Memorial Day were the sales of paper poppies. Two organizations with French connections got into a squabble over the rights for selling them on the streets, and both were finally allowed to sell. The local dealers in artificial flowers also took up the business. This came about through the adoption of the poppy by the American Legion.

Theodore Malandre of Malandre Bros., Broadway at 72nd street, recently purchased a fine four story residence of stone construction, located at the southwest corner of West End avenue and 72nd street, and now occupies it with his family.

A beautiful wreath in memory of the late Quentin Roosevelt, who was killed while in the air service in France, was made by Young & Nugent. It was placed on the grave of his father, the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, on Memorial Day.

The store of James Weir, Inc., 324 Fulton street, Brooklyn, had a very handsome Memorial Day window; a bust of Lincoln and many fine wreaths made by Manager McCarthy, being featured.

David Clarke's Sons, Boardway at 75th street, were busy during the past week with orders for the school commencements.

ALL STOCK CLEANS UP NICELY.

Memorial Day trade was extended over a period of five days. The rush started May 26 and continued until Monday, and while there were no record breaking sales for any one day, still it is expected that business will compare favorably with last year. The wholesale houses were open on Sunday and Monday mornings to accommodate those who ran short of stock at the last minute. Peonies were uncertain, the local crop came in early and it was a question if they would last until Memorial Day or not, but at the end there was plenty for everyone. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and prices were more reasonable than last year, with the result that practically everything cleaned up. Next to peonies, carnations had the biggest call, with roses close behind, and considering the extremely warm weather stock of all kinds was in excellent condition. Delphiniums and Sweet Williams were in heavy supply and cleaned up nicely. Snapdragons sold on sight. In fact, the only item that did not sell was sweet peas and they were of inferior quality. Taking it all in all it was a very satisfactory holiday for all concerned, as the plant men all report a big business.

Dutch advices of May 3 report warm weather, with lack of rain, may affect bulbs on sandy ground unfavorably.

JOHN T. BUCKBEE of Rockford, Ill., is back at his desk again. H. W. Buckbee and wife are at Lake Geneva, Wis.

JAMES FARQUHAR, founder of the R. & J. Farquhar Co., Boston, Mass., died May 23. See obituary for further particulars.

MRS. JOSEPHINE RICE WALLACE and her sister, Mrs. Dr. Schaible, daughters of the late Jerome B. Rice, are visiting in Paris.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The Statler hotel will be headquarters for the meeting of the American Seed Trade Association beginning June 22.

PRICE of bags at Chicago, June 1, American, 16 oz., $30.00 per bale, in bale lots or over; Railroads, 16-oz., $30.00; Crown, 12-oz., $23.00.

SEED trade about Cincinnati, O., and Lexington, Ky., has been held back by the heavy and almost constant rainy weather during the usual planting season.

PEA planting in the northwest and west is reported practically completed and with an abundance of moisture in all districts, the outlook seems satisfactory.

DR. W. W. TRACY, who recently retired from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., is planning to attend the seedmen's convention at St. Louis, June 22-24.

ALL vegetable seeds, excepting peas and beans, can now be exported from Germany without export license. On peas and beans, there is still an export duty of 10 per cent.

L. D. WALLER, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadaloupe, Calif., is planning to attend the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at St. Louis, Mo., June 22-24.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—A meeting of the creditors of the E. A. Martin Seed Co., bankrupt, will be held at the offices of Morgan F. Jones, referee, 104 Law Exchange building, this city, June 6, at 10 a. m., to consider offers.

A LEADING figure in the canning industry declares the "pack" of the four staples, corn, peas, tomatoes and fruit, will this year amount to but 50 per cent to 60 per cent of the 1920 pack.

MOUNT VERNON, WASH.—The Mount Vernon Commercial Club has petitioned congress to place a duty on all garden seeds that may come in competition with seeds grown in Washington, and especially the Puget Sound district.

MISS EILEEN LOW, of Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, Eng., has not only exploited new orchids and fine cyclamen seed from Boston to San Francisco, but has also sponsored the introduction of a Ford sedan into her shire town.

NEW YORK.—It is reported that J. M. Bridgeford, managing director of Watkins & Simpson, London, Eng., who arrived on the S. S. Aquitania last week, proceeded direct to the California seed growing districts, making no eastern calls.

TIPTOP muskmelon seed is one of the very scarce items this season and this also applies to Tom Watson and Kleckley's Sweet watermelons. The fact of a real shortage in this year of plenty is the one thing that seems normal in the seed trade.

THE United States Department of Agriculture conducts a breeding station at North Ridgeville, O., in Lorain county, west of Cleveland, for making selections of timothy, breeding, testing and distributing the best of these to timothy seed growers, one selection to be distributed this year.

French Bulbs.

French exporters report by cable, May 28, that they have received offers from several American importers as follows:

Paper Whites,	13 ctm.	100 francs.
Paper Whites,	14 ctm.	125 francs.
Soliel d'Or,		400 francs.
Rom. hyacinths,	12-13 ctm.	400 francs.
Rom. hyacinths,	13-15 ctm.	500 francs.

So far, growers have not shown willingness to accept.

The crop is an average one.

Corn and Vine Seeds.

The J. C. Robinson Seed Co. of Waterloo, Neb., report as follows: "We believe the acreage of corn and vine crops for seed to be the smallest for some time. Middle-west growers at least seem to be confining their acreage to actual orders and with a normal yield many shortages may develop. There is no tendency at all to speculate with a large, unsold acreage. Crop conditions are fully up to average."

Burpee's Survey of the Season.

President David Burpee, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., just previous to starting for California, dictated the following: "We have had an unusually good season for our regular retail mail order business. We made a special appeal for early orders this year. It might be of interest to the trade to know that we have tried to encourage our customers to order early over a period of five years or more and that we have found this propaganda work very successful.

"This year we had an unusually large January and the biggest February in the history of our business. The fact is, the best day we had this year was the last Monday in February. March, of course, is our largest month, but the best individual day this year came in February. Towards the end of April the number of orders received per day fell off, but the total for the year is very considerably ahead of 1920, and the average volume of our retail business is considerably more than it was last year. Wholesale business, however, has not been quite so good.

"Expenses of operating have been unusually high this year; in fact, just as great as they were during the war, but we expect a very substantial reduction in operating costs for 1922, and we look forward with the firm belief that 1922 will be a real prosperous year for the seed trade at large."

California Seed Crops.

The John Bodger & Sons Co., of Los Angeles, report as follows: "Since May 19, there has been almost continual rainfall in this city and vicinity, estimated at from two to four inches, which is unusual for this time of the year. Consequently all stock which has been retarded because of previous dry weather, has been given an excellent start in growth. In flower seeds, asters and zinnias show a good stand, and a normal yield is expected. Some varieties, however, will have to be replanted. Sweet peas are badly affected with aphis, and the recent cloudy and rainy weather will have the tendency to increase this pest. A fair yield is expected in mixed varieties, with a possible shortage in the named kinds."

The large leaves, which are of a texture similar to those of the Gloxinia, are of a rich dark green; the reverse of them, as well as the flower stalks are covered with bright red hair, which renders them very attractive. The flowers are produced in abundance and in various colors and color combinations, white, orange, yellow and scarlet. The plants grow from 12 to 18 inches high, are bushy and require no staking. Their culture is similar to that of the Gloxinia and other Gesneriaceas. Their constitution is very robust which enables them to thrive in living rooms. This is a most desirable pot plant and florists will do well to get familiar with it. Trade pkt., $1.00

CHICAGO CONVENTION—JUNE 22-24.

The forty-sixth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at the Congress hotel, Chicago, June 22-24. Morning sessions will begin at 10 and the afternoon meetings will start at 2 o'clock. Executive sessions have been arranged for by the programme committee for a full discussion of the many questions developed by the trade during the past year.

The opening session of the association will begin on Tuesday morning, June 22, President Lloyd C. Stark in the chair. After routine business is disposed of, the Hon. Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, will deliver the opening address, followed by Edw. N. Hurley, formerly chairman of the federal trade commission. Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, will speak on "The Situation as to Future Imports of Fruit Tree Seedlings." L. B. Scott, of the Department of Agriculture, will take as his subject, "The Growing of Fruit Tree Seedlings in America." President Stark's address will conclude the morning programme.

Wednesday afternoon will be taken up with the reports of the executive and market development committees. Appointments to the auditing and resolutions committees will be made and the reports of the various officers will be heard. At the executive session immediately following, important topics will be discussed by the members, as follows: "Market Development Publicity," "How Market Development Funds Should Be Used to Produce Greatest Results," "For the Retail Agency House," "For the Retail Mail Order House," and "For the Whole Nursery Fraternity." The principal object of this discussion is to plan for publicity for the coming year.

The programme for Thursday morning, June 23, will consist of a thorough discussion of the trade mark which has been adopted by the association, "Trustworthy Trees and Plants." Its practicability as an association emblem, a member's legal and moral liability under it, and the advisability of continuing or abolishing this emblem will engage the time of the members. At the afternoon meeting the reports of committees will be read. A meeting of state vice-presidents has been called for 8 p. m. on the same day. On Friday morning at the open session the reports of these officers will be heard, and the election of officers will conclude the programme of the association.

Horse Chestnuts.

Many horse chestnuts and buckeyes are now in bloom in the collection of these trees and shrubs on the right hand side of the Meadow road. Of the European horse chestnuts (Aesculus hippocastanum) it is not necessary to speak, for one of the most splendid trees in the world it is known to all American tree lovers, at least in the northern and eastern states, where it has been growing for more than a hundred years, and noble specimens can be seen in Salem, Massachusetts, and other seaboard towns. The red-flowered horse chestnut tree (Aesculus carnea), with flowers which vary on different trees from flesh color to red, is supposed to be a hybrid between A. hippocastanum and one of the American red flowered species, probably A. Pavia, which originated in Belgium many years ago. The handsomest of these hybrids, that is the one with the darkest red flowers, was raised in France and is known in nurseries as A. Briottii (A. carnea var. Briottii). There are small, but well flowered specimens of this variety in the collection. Of the American species the first to bloom is the form of the Ohio buckeye on which the leaves are composed of seven instead of five leaflets. (A. glabra var. Buckeye), a rare tree most abundant in Jackson county, Missouri. The flowers on the typical A. glabra open a little later and are followed by those of the variety from southern Missouri and Arkansas (var. leucodermis) distinguished by its smooth pale bark. The largest trees in the arboretum of the Ohio buckeye are on the left hand side of the South street gate and are still covered with flowers. The yellow-flowered A. octandra of the southern Appalachian forests is now in bloom. This is the largest of the American species. Hybrids of this tree and A. Pavia first raised in Europe more than a hundred years ago, to which the general name of A. hybrida should be given, are conspicuous from their red and yellow flowers. A number of these hybrids are now flowering in the collection and show much variation in the size and habit of the plants, and in the size and color of their leaves and flowers. Many of these hybrids are good garden plants. A. georgiana, the common buckeye of the southern Piedmont region, which is sometimes a shrub and sometimes a slender tree up to 30 feet high, with flowers in crowded clusters, red and yellow on some plants, bright red on others and yellow on others, shows again its value as a garden plant here at the north. Even more beautiful are the scarlet flowers of another plant, A. discolor var. mollis, one of the handsomest of the American plants introduced into gardens by the arboretum. A. arguta, a little Texas shrub of the Ohio buckeye group is covered this year with long narrow clusters of bright yellow flowers marked with rose color at the base of the petals.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 27, 1921.

Golden Yellow Sweet Peas

"For two seasons, at our retail Flower Store, we have handled Sweet Peas dyed with 'McCLENAHAN'S YELLOW FLOWER DYE.' They are never streaked, but evenly dyed as though natural; are good sellers, and last as well as undyed Sweet Peas."
THE BARTELDES SEED CO., Oklahoma City, Okla.

McCLENAHAN'S YELLOW FLOWER DYE will quickly and uniformly dye white, light pink and rose pink Sweet Peas to golden yellow, apricot and burnt orange respectively. For two years I have supplied dyed Sweet Peas to the Oklahoma City Market and they are now more popular than ever. Sweet Peas take the dye perfectly. It never streaks but evenly diffuses through the petals so the veins are not distinguishable. The natural appearance of the dyed flower is so true that the treatment is hardly perceptible.

White Carnations take the dye to a medium yellow, sometimes leaving the central tuft partly uncolored but always producing a most charming effect. (Not good on rose-pink Carnations.) Roses, too, seem to take the dye as readily as Sweet Peas. Cecil Brunners quickly take on a beautiful orange.

The dye keeps indefinitely in dry form, dissolves instantly and one solution will last from one to two weeks.

Price, sufficient to make one quart, $1.00, prepaid. Six for $5.00.

Vegetable Plants in Pots.

Grower-retailers will find a ready and profitable sale for vegetable plants in pots, particularly egg plants, tomatoes, and peppers. They are grown in 2½ and three-inch pots. These take a much shorter time to mature than bedding stock, and readily command twice the price.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 31.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3 to $3.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 25 to 35 cents.

New York, May 27.—Cauliflower per dozen, $1.50 to $4; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, per basket, 75 cents to $2.25; radishes, 100 bunches, $1 to $3; tomatoes per pound, 10 to 20 cents.

Potato Prices.

Potatoes will continue to sell at a low price this fall, according to A. W. Aamodt, general manager of the Minnesota Potato exchange, who spoke at a meeting of exchange representatives from Michigan, Minnesota, and North Dakato, May 26, at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. Mr. Aamodt said that potatoes are now selling at a little more than 10 per cent of the prices realized last year.

Canned Corn in France.

It has been rumored that there were very large stocks of canned corn available for export in France, and these reports have had a disquieting effect on the trade. The department of commerce has now ascertained from its commercial attache in Paris that of the total stock of 1,600 metric tons (80,000 cases) recently liquidated by the French government, 300 tons (15,000 cases) were sold to the French retail trade and 1,300 tons (65,000 cases) were otherwise disposed of and presumably are available for export to the United States.

Container Standards.

To eliminate fraud in the marketing of fruits and vegetables by the substition of short-measure packages at full-measure prices is one of the principal objects of specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture now making a study of the hundreds of different types of containers in use. For example baskets which contain seven-eighths of a bushel are frequently used as bushel baskets, it being difficult to detect the short measure. In farmers' bulletin No. 1196, from the bureau of markets, just published by the department, the specialists discuss the need for standard containers for fruits and vegetables and describe how the public is sometimes defrauded because of the many types and sizes of containers now in use.

The serious lack of uniformity of containers increases the cost of marketing, say the specialists, because of the greater expense of manufacturing a large number of unnecessary styles and sizes and by breakage in transit, which is sometimes directly attributable to the difficulty of loading odd-sized containers. There are in common use at present about 40 sizes of cabbage crates, 20 styles of celery crates, 30 lettuce crates or boxes, 50 styles and sizes of round-stave baskets and marketing baskets varying in size from one to 24 quarts, whereas relatively a few standard sizes would satisfy all demands of the trade. In many cases the 6-quart market basket, the 14-quart peach basket, the ⅞-bushel bean hamper, and the five peck lettuce hamper are confused with peck, half-bushel, bushel, and 1½ bushel baskets.

The federal standard barrel law and the United States container act, which establish standard containers, have done away with a large number of unnecessary sizes of barrels, berry boxes, and grape baskets and have awakened a widespread demand for the application of the same principle to other containers, says the bulletin. At present there is no standard hamper, which is one of the most widely used types of containers, especially popular in the eastern and central States. Almost 30,000,000 of these baskets are used annually. The sizes of hampers which are recommended by the bureau of markets of the Departmen of Agriculture as being sufficient in number to satisfy all legitimate requirements of the trade are as follows: Eight quart, or one peck; 16-quart, or one-half bushel; 32-quart, or one bushel; 48-quart, or 1½ bushels. It is suggested that the latter be made in two styles to meet the preference in various parts of the country.

The round-stave basket, for which there is no standard, is popular in all regions except the southern and middle Atlantic states and on the Pacific coast. About 20,000,000 such baskets are manufactured annually. The sizes which are recommended as standards by the bureau of markets are the same as those recommended for the hamper, except for the elimination of the 8-quart size. The splint, or veneer, baskets, for which there are also no standards, are well known to the public as market baskets. The sizes which are proposed by the bureau of markets are five in number—four, eight, 12, 16, and 24 quart.

Potatoes in Crates.

A carload of Florida potatoes arrived at New York, May 8, packed in containers marked 1⅝ bushels. These containers, two of which fill a barrel, moved out very slowly, the trade hesitating to handle them on account of being accustomed to handling barrels only, according to the government Market Reporter. About half of the carload was sold Saturday and the remainder by the following Tuesday, but the price had to be reduced considerably in order to clean them up. While barrels were bringing $17 to $18 for No. 1's, these crates were selling at $7.00, although as stated, it takes only two of them to fill a barrel.

The crate is a substantial one, easily handled, and the carload arrived in excellent condition. One end of the crate is easily opened and in practically half the time it takes to open a barrel. However, the buyers were not anxious to take them at comparatively low prices. The incident shows with what reluctance the trade becomes accustomed to new containers.

Onion Surplus.

According to reliable estimates, onion holdings on March 25 totaled 2,500 cars. Shipments after April 1 in recent seasons have averaged 200 to 300 cars, say marketing experts of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture. The southern crop of new onions is two to four weeks earlier than usual, and shipments of new onions are beginning to move. A production of early onions of about 7,000 cars is forecast for Louisiana, California, and Texas. It is evident that unless the usual light movement of onions in April and May is increased there will be great waste of unsold stocks of old onions, say bureau of markets officials. Dealers are therefore urged to make onions a leader. If the price to the grower is high enough to warrant shipments under present conditions, probably 5,000 cars of the new stocks will move. Otherwise not only will there be a large surplus of old onions but a surplus of new stock as well.

Ageratum Fraseri

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅔ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.

2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $ 6.00 per 100.

When "You Say It With Flowers"

Always Remember that to grow good flowers it requires good boilers in the greenhouses, so when installing a boiler be sure and consider —THE—

"Superior Standard" Boiler

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Washington, D. C., June 1-2.

The Annual Pilgrimage.

On the afternoon of June 1, the executive committee of the American Rose Society, with some especially invited guests, visited the rose garden of Dr. Walter Van Fleet, at Bell's station, Md., to inspect the many new and beautiful hybrids, which are to be disseminated through the offices of the American Rose Society and its nurserymen members. The chief interest centered in the rose W. C. No. 124, which is to be officially christened Mary Wallace at the Portland, Ore., rose festival in June, 1922, and which is to be disseminated in the fall of 1922 and spring of 1923. Of great interest also were W. H. T. No. 237, W. S. No. 18 and a large number of others, which were covered with blossoms despite the unfavorable season and which it is hoped may be disseminated in the future under similar arrangements.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held at 1214 F street, on the evening of June 1. Plans for the propagation and dissemination of the rose Mary Wallace (Van Fleet W. C. No. 124), were perfected and announcements have been sent to all nurserymen who are believed to be interested in participating in the propagation of this rose under the conditions drawn up by the Department of Agriculture and the American Rose Society. Chief among such conditions are propagation in time to allow dissemination in the fall of 1922 and spring of 1923, and the selling of the resulting plants at $2 each, paying to the society a royalty on each plant sold during the first selling year. Any rose growing member who issues a retail catalogue and who has not received the official announcement and blank contract may secure these by writing the secretary's office at once. A deposit of $50 is required with each contract as an evidence of good faith. Applications should be sent at once and will not be accepted after July 1.

There was a long discussion on the policy of the society in regard to the registration roses having names either identical or similar to roses previously introduced; and it was voted that the executive committee should have authority to refuse registration in such cases. The editor reported that the hand book was ready for publication, but has been delayed by the printers' strike.

Over 100 members of the society assembled at Gude's flower store at 9 a. m., June 2 for the all day rose pilgrimage. The party went by automobiles to the Arlington test garden, where many beautiful roses were seen in bloom. Here Dr. Ball, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, made an address, telling of the many sided work of the department, speaking in detail about the rose test garden and Dr. Van Fleet's work at Belle's station, Md. The party then proceeded to Twin Oaks to see Mrs. Bell's charming rose garden and thence via Rock Creek park to the Walter Reid hospital, where, through the courtesy of Col. Glennin, a luncheon was served, which preceded the annual meeting.

Annual Meeting.

President Pyle, at the beginning of the session, expressed the thanks of the society to Col. Glennin and Prof. Lumsden, for their kindness in inviting the members of the society to visit the Walter Reed hospital. Mr. Pyle then spoke for a few moments about the proposed Washington rose show garden and the Portland rose trip, which is scheduled for June, 1922. He then called upon Prof. Corbett, who spoke about Dr. Van Fleet's work at Bell's station, Md. Secretary John C. Wister, told of what is being accomplished in his office, and about the dissemination of the Mary Wallace rose.

Dr. Shoemaker then told of the work of the Takoma Horticultural Club, and Miss Harrison expressed the wish that the American Rose Society should come to Washington again next year. J. Horace McFarland remarked very briefly about the American Rose Annual. W. F. Gude closed the meeting with a tribute to the work of the Walter Reed hospital.

It was by this time after three o'clock and the rest of the afternoon was taken up in inspecting the buildings and grounds of the hospital under the guidance of Col. Glennin and Prof. Lumsden.

The thanks of the society are due to Mr. Gude and his local committee who planned the itinerary of the day's trip, and who made the event such a successful one.

The following officers were re-elected for one year: Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., president; F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., vice-president; John C. Wister, Philadelphia, Pa., secretary, and Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., treasurer. Directors: John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.

JOHN C. WISTER, Sec'y.

Arlington Rose Test Gardens.

That the American Rose Society is rapidly gaining in membership and influence was evidenced in the large attendance of about 150 members who gathered at Gude Bros.' store on the morning of June 2, to take the trip to the Arlington rose test gardens. After a delightful auto ride the garden came into view, its greensward paths outlining and setting off the various beds to the best advantage.

The damage from the late spring frosts was most apparent in the rambler roses, many varieties of which had very sparse blooms. Notable exceptions were Excelsa and Dr. Van Fleet, both being exceptionally well flowered. The hybrids and hybrid teas of strong growth were also full of bloom as were all the baby ramblers. Both pink and red Radiance again demonstrated their great worth, having wintered well and each carrying a wealth of flowers. Paul's Scarlet Climber, trained to posts and also in bush form, was very conspicuous with its wealth of brilliant scarlet blossoms. Another fine red pillar variety is Ards Rover, almost as brilliant as Paul's Scarlet, with a larger flower and more double. One of the best pink ramblers is Zepherine Drouhin, a large pink semi-double flower which blooms in great profusion. This will be most conspicuous in any collection.

After the inspection the members assembled at the rose covered pavilion, where they were welcomed by President Robert Pyle, who then introduced Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Dr. Ball. He gave a graphic account of the work of the Department of Agriculture which he said was the greatest research organization in the world. As a boy he had been raised on the prairies and the only roses he knew then were the wild ones that grew so profusely. What the department was doing in the improvement of the rose was only emblematic of one of its many activities. Over $32,000,000 a year was spent in research and other work, in delving into the unknown trying to discover the secrets of nature, and in this way add to the sum of human knowledge. The fact that insects carried yellow fever which was so destructive to human life was due to one little discovery in the department. This had resulted in the control of the disease in all parts of the world. Such research work and the wonderful results obtained from delving into the unknown, was due to the self-sacrificing work of individuals, practical scientific men of the department, who devoted themselves entirely to this service. He was glad that the department was able to help the society in its development of the rose and he asked for its co-operation in interesting its congressmen and expressing to them their approval of the work of the department.

Cars were then taken again and in a short time the members were enjoying the hospitalities and viewing the fine rose garden at Twin Oaks, the beautiful estate of Mrs. Chas. J. Bell, who graciously received all the visitors. The arches of climbing roses had not flowered so well this season, the buds being killed by the late frosts, but the teas and hybrids in the beds bordering the lawn were full of bloom and lovely in their variations of color. After expressing their appreciation to the hostess the party were soon en route for the Walter Reid hospital, which institution is aiming to be the largest and most important of its kind in the world. After an inspection of many of the wards and industrial shops, where disabled soldiers are taught trades, the members enjoyed a bountiful lunch in the large dining hall, which was served in true army style. This novel experience was greatly appreciated.

President Pyle's Address.

President Pyle then called the members to order and expressed the great appreciation of the society for the very generous reception extended them by the hospital authorities. He then stated as this was the annual meeting of the society, the first business would be the election of officers to serve for the ensuing year. Wm. F. Gude moved that the present officers be made the nominees, which was adopted, and their election followed. Mr. Pyle then spoke of the progress of the society and how the government, through the Department of Agriculture, was co-operating. Plans were under way for the establishment of a rose show garden in Washington which will be a credit to the nation, beautiful in landscape effects and from an artistic standpoint so perfect and finished, that large cities all over the country would see the advantage of such a beauty spot in their own parks. He also touched on the Portland pilgrimage of June next, stating that it would be greatly inspiring to see what is being done in the Pacific northwest. The route going and returning would embrace national parks and many other places of public interest. He urged all who could do so to arrange to take this trip.

Prof. David Lumsden, landscape architect and professor of horticulture in charge of the hospital grounds, was called on and welcomed the visitors to the finest hospital in the world. It is surrounded by 116 acres, and is being improved and planted with trees and flowers. The best place for rose gardens and other flowers is on hospital grounds, Prof. Lumsden stated, where they would brighten and cheer the sick and bring them back to health. President Pyle then remarked that the American Rose Society would be glad to present to the hospital roses for at least one of its beds. Prof. Corbett was always glad of these annual visits of the national rosarians who were most welcome. He spoke of the work of Dr. Van Fleet in creating so many new and valuable varieties which would now be disseminated through the help of the society. These roses would be a great boon to the people as there were varities suitable to all portions of the country.

Secretary Wister invited members to call at any time at the new home of the society in the rooms of the Pennsylvania Society, Finance building, Philadelphia, where he would be glad to welcome them and help in any way with the work of the organization.

Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.
President American Rose Society.

Dr. Shoemaker of the Takoma Horticultural Club, Washington, spoke of the importance of local exhibitions in helping to spread the love for flowers. Co-operative orders and expert advice to members in planting had held together and increased interest in the club. J. Horace McFarland in his characteristic way gave all the credit for the Rose Annual to the members, saying he only compiled and put together what they sent in. The bouquets that they threw at him were made of rubber and bounced back.

W. F. Gude, in remarking about the trip to Portland, advised all to go. The society was growing rapidly and doing a great work, but the surface had only been scratched. There were great opportunities and a wonderful future before them, he said.

An inspection of the grounds were then made under the guidance of Prof. Lumsden. A ravine had been turned into a beautiful depressed garden in which were a number of beds of roses. As outlined by Prof. Lumsden the entire acreage will be improved with trees, shrubs and flowering plants to make it one of the finest hospital grounds in the world.

PLANT NOTES.

Dracaena Indivisa.

The seedlings of Dracæna indivisa should now be taken from the flats and potted in small pots and placed in a good moist location that they may make a good growth before the fall. A palm or fern house or one with a similar temperature is the best for the small stock. The four-inch stock that was not disposed of during the spring sales can be either plunged outside or planted in a frame, where they will not demand the close attention necessary in the greenhouse. If planted out they should be potted up early, at least by September 1, when the roots are active and will quickly obtain a foothold in the new soil. They should be heavily shaded for a few days after potting or some loss of the plants may result. Any old plants that have outgrown their usefulness may be propagated, the stems cut up into small pieces and laid in a propagating bed with bottom heat, where the eyes will open and young plants quickly form.

Oleanders.

A plant that does not receive the attention that it should is the oleander. While there probably would not be a large demand for this plant, yet it is an old time favorite, and well-grown specimens in bloom are a valuable addition to a porch or lawn. They are too often so sadly neglected that they get unshapely and far from being an ornament, but a little attention to trimming them into shape after they get through blooming will keep them in good condition. They can be wintered in any cool quarters, and if brought into the heat and light in early spring will be full of bloom in June and July and a valuable decorative plant. The cuttings root easily and at any time when the plant is in growth, and grow very rapidly for a hard-wooded plant. Any florist carrying a line of assorted stock should include a few of these in the variety which he cultivates. The only insect which troubles them is the mealy bug, but a good frequent hard syringing will soon dislodge them.

Freesias.

A crop of freesias, or a few plants in pots in bloom at Christmas, is a valuable asset on that holiday. In order to have them in bloom at that time the bulbs should be planted by July 1. Select the large, strong bulbs and by careful inspection many will be found on which the root eyes are beginning to swell. These will make the earliest blooming plants and this selecting will produce plants that will all bloom at the same time. The bulbs should be planted in a good soil enriched with well rotted manure, but no fresh manure; it is a well understood principle that bulbs of all kinds do not grow well in soil full of fresh manure. Eight to 10 large bulbs in a 6-inch pot will give the best results. The pots should be well watered, and set in a dark, cool place until the shoots appear above the ground, when they should be given a light location. As soon as the growths get tall enough they should be staked and tied. By continual early selection of the bulbs and keeping the earliest separate, an early strain can be assured.

Nephrolepis.

Probably no plant that the florist grows gives more returns for the labor spent in its culture or the space that it occupies than the Boston fern and its various sports. The old Boston is still, however, the easiest to handle and grow. The plants should be repotted every year, and with good treatment are sure of making nice plants. Any plants that are in poor condition can be divided and with the young stock planted in a bench of good rich soil. The house should be shaded enough to assure of good color on the foliage, but not heavy enough to prevent the house being maintained at a good high temperature. During the day the house should stand at about 80 degrees with a little ventilation, which should be closed down before the sun leaves the houses. The plants can be set six inches apart and the soil should be two parts loam, one part leaf mould, and one part rotted manure. The house should be frequently syringed to keep a moist atmosphere. Under these conditions fine plants can be produced from young stock in three months. In September they should be lifted and placed in 6-inch pots, if single specimens are desired, or three or four plants can be place in a 9-inch or 10-inch pot if larger plants are wanted. In lifting the plants they can be cut around about two inches from the crown, and lifted with a trowel, leaving the runners in the bench if the place they occupy is not wanted at once. The runners will immediately break into small plants which can be placed in flats for young stock for the next season. The finer varieties of this fern, such as Whitmani, do not submit to the lifting and potting as well as the old Boston, and better plants can be obtained by potting along into larger pots as may be required. The only insects that trouble these ferns are the brown scale, and the plants should be kept clean from these by washing or spraying with aphine or a weak nicotine solution.

Poinsettias.

The propagation of poinsettias should be pushed to the utmost at this time, for it is the plants that are rooted early in July that make the best single specimens at Christmas. Those that are rooted later in July and during August will make fine plants for pans, placing four to eight plants in a 6-inch or 8-inch pan, for they will be much shorter than those rooted early in July. The plants that were rooted earlier should now be growing nicely and should be shifted into larger pots as soon as they require it; under no circumstances allow them to become pot-bound until the bracts begin to set in November. They should be placed in the bright sun as soon as strong enough to endure it, that the growth may be short and sturdy and the leaves as close together as is possible. A long drawn plant grown in the shade, with the leaves far apart, is not the typical plant for the holidays and does not meet with approval.

Gloxinias.

The gloxinias that were started in late winter should now be beginning to flower. After the flower beds have set they can be placed in a little shadier location and the danger of burning the foliage be obviated to a great degree. The plants should be spaced far enough apart that they do not touch and a proper circulation of air produced around the plant. If the flowers are to be used in floral work they should be cut as soon as fully open and placed in water away from draughts, and they will keep very well. These flowers are very fragile and should be handled carefully. If there are any particularly beautiful flowers that it is desired to propagate, the leaves can be rooted in the propagating bench by placing the base of the leaf in the sand to the depth of about an inch. The seedlings should be potted along for later blooming.

The Convention Mania.

Go into any hotel in the country. You will find it jammed to the doors with men wearing badges or buttons. The clerk behind the desk will tell you that he has no space on account of the convention of, say, the Stuffed Bird Trade Association. No matter where you go, from one end of this land to the other, no city above 100,000 people is ever without a convention of something or other. There is certain to be some kind of meeting for which people came from a distance to attend.

Nobody knows and nobody ever will know how much time is today being spent by the average business man attending conventions. I have made a rough calculation that the attendance upon purely trade or commercial conventions and conferences last year ran to a total of at least a million. Some men went to perhaps only one or two conventions; other went to a dozen. If we put the average expense of attendance at $100 per delegate, which is a very low average, we will find that $100,000,000 in cash has gone out solely for personal convention expenses. The round trip to a convention will average three days, and if these men had average salaries or earnings of only $3,000 a year, the mere time cost would be another big item.—Collier's.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

There are often very busy days at this time when two or three wedding decorations are booked for the same date, any one of which would ordinarily tax the force and facilities of the store. Fortunately, orders are generally taken so far in advance that preparations may be made and the work planned, so that everything will be in readiness to arrange when the day arrives. There should be a plan for each house and church with the number of palms, ferns, decorative greens, cut flowers, vases, pedestals, plant stands and all other materials necessary. With the man in charge having a perfect knowledge of the decoration and everything at hand with which to carry out the work as planned, there is great progress and the work is finished in the shortest possible time.

If you want to attract attention to your shop there must always be something a trifle unusual or a little out of common that will make the passersby stop and take a look. This is not as difficult as it might seem. A large basketful of one kind of flower artistically decked with ribbons in a grouping of ferns will make an attractive window. Then a display of small baskets all filled with the same flower and a price card to make them doubly attractive. A handsomely decorated large magnolia wreath, a veritable show piece, in a grouping of ferns, is certain to make a hit. A window of ferns of a size, with a price card, will interest many and is likely to prove effective from a sales standpoint.

Always take advantage of an hour or two in displaying some choice piece of work that is ready in advance of the delivery hour. Such examples of the artistic work of the store are sure to be admired and talked about. A few tin utensils filled with flowers and given an artistic arrangement in the window, with a neat tin wedding card will prove attractive and provide a timely suggestion. The window must never be commonplace, but should always have a point or punch to it, that causes favorable comment.

ATTENTION TO STOCK AFTER DELIVERY.

It is good policy from a business standpoint to inquire and pay attention to stock after it has been delivered. Window boxes may be allowed to get too dry, or the same with hanging baskets. A man could look over considerable of this work in an afternoon when business is quiet at the store, giving his advice, which would be greatly appreciated by the customers.

Rambler rose sprays will make fine decorative effects in the shop in large vases or arranged around mirrors. Sprays of Dorothy Perkins make a beautiful wreath or vase basket as suitable for the funeral as many more expensive flowers. Water lilies are now coming in and there is nothing more beautiful or chaste than these water flowers. They are very popular with flower lovers and can be worked in to advantage as a finish to early morning funeral pieces. A miniature lily pond is always an attractive feature of the summer window.

Prepare for the rush of funeral work that frequently comes on an otherwise busy day, with a stock in various sizes of well made magnolia or oak leaves that will take but a short time to decorate. Variety in their arrangement and color schemes, together with quickly arranged clusters of the long stemmed flowers available, will provide quite an assortment to choose from. A good substitute for the more elaborate casket covers that is not possible in the short time allowed, is a large double spray which made on palm leaves, filled in at the center where the stems come together with stemmed flowers, can be easily of a size to completely cover the entire top of a casket. Ribbon and chiffon bows if made up and kept ready for these hurried times are a great help. There is also economy, as only the right amount of ribbon will be put into these prepared bows, which will also be better finished than when hurriedly made up.

Keep the birthday idea constantly to the front, for it is a possible business producer every day in the year. But the public must be constantly reminded, as this is one of the personal duties of life that is so frequently forgotten. Keep the "Wear a Flower" idea always in mind, and do all you can to make this the custom. Pompons or cornflowers that are now so plentiful are popular with all young men. A tray of these on the counter and in the window is suggestive and should lead to many purchases.

Have you a single or double screen door for the front, which takes the place of the regular door when open? A well made screen door is a necessity, for it is cool, good looking, keeps out the dust and flies, and is in every way desirable.

Prepared Flowers and Foliage.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Can you tell me where I can secure instructions on the drying and preparation of flowers and foliage? I am very much interested in this subject and think there is a large field here in the south for such a business.

METHODS VARIOUS.

Regarding the method of preservation and treatment used in the case of magnolia leaves, P. L. Ricker, assistant botanist of the bureau of plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., states that he has carried on some experimental work with all types of leaves used by retail florists and has succeeded in duplicating commercial results in most cases, but that he has not, however, discovered anything that he feels sure is the same method as ordinarily used in the case of magnolia. The method followed, which process is not, however, the one applied to magnolia unless possibly the javelle water is used in a very much more dilute solution than indicated, as in these strengths the olive green pubescence on the under side of the magnolia leaf is entirely removed by the bleaching process, whereas in the commercial treatment such is not the case, is described by Mr. Ricker as follows:

"Several processes have been used for preserving leaves. To have them retain as nearly as possible their natural colors, it has been customary to press them between blotters, changing the blotters two or more times a day, and preferably keeping the pressed material near some source of heat in order to hasten the drying process, but not close enough to any artificial heat to cause the leaves to become brittle. The leaves when dry are then either given a thin coating of paraffin, applied with a hot flatiron, or given a coating of varnish or white shellac. The labor involved in these operations has been such as to make the method of little value for commercial purposes. In addition they are brittle and very inflammable.

"During the last few years leaves of beech, box, elm, laurel, privet, magnolia, maple, palms, oak and ruscus, have appeared on the market, single, or branches, or made into wreaths, or approximately of natural color, but some of them are more often of rich shades of brown, green, orange, or red, and retain their natural pliability practically forever. Frequently they are non-inflammable.

"The process of preparing leaves in this manner, as far as can be learned, was introduced into this country from Europe several years ago. It is not known to be patented and is practically controlled by a very few firms, who have endeavored to keep the process secret.

"The leaves singly, or preferably on branches, one to three feet long, are placed in a large wooden or cement vat containing Javelle water.[1]

"Full strength will destroy the leaves in a short time. Oak leaves, on account of their large amount of tannin, require the solution to be diluted one-fourth, while other leaves tried, require the solution to be diluted one-half. The time for bleaching varies from 24 to 48 hours, depending upon the leaf used. When thoroughly bleached the leaves should be removed to another vat and other designs. These leaves are often thoroughly washed in running water for several hours or after several thorough rinsings they may be immersed from 10 to 15 minutes in one-fourth of 1 per cent solution of acetic of hydrochloric acid. The leaves should then be placed in another vat containing a basic dye of desired color. In some cases there will be sufficient tannin in the leaves to set the color. The setting of the color is not absolutely necessary unless the material is to be much handled. The acid bath will also aid materially in setting some of the colors. The leaves are then removed from the dye, thoroughly washed and placed for a few hours in a vat containing a 5 per cent solution of glycerine, after which they are removed and placed on racks to dry. They will now remain pliable indefinitey. If it is desired to fireproof

1. Javelle water is made by putting four pounds of sal soda, (also called sodium carbonate and washing soda), into a vessel with one gallon of water and boiling ten minutes; then add one pound of bleaching powder, (also called chloride of lime), free from lumps. When cold strain into a jug or large bottle and keep tightly corked. Metal receptacles will be destroyed by it, if allowed to stand long. For large quantities use the same proportions and strain into a wooden vat and use at once.

the material, it should be given a further bath in a solution of ammonium phosphate."

Mr. Ricker also submits the subjoined which appeared in the Literary Digest of July 12, 1913, extracted from the German publication, Cosmos, of May of the same year:

PRESERVING PLANTS' NATURAL BEAUTY.

The simplest process for plants of field and forest consists in impregnating every part with a naphthalin solution. In a warm room we fill a large preserve jar with a saturated solution bought at any drug store. In order to rid it of the undesirable quality of turning violet and red coloring matter into blue, we add to every 200 grams of naphthalin-benzin, which can be of this two drops of a concentrated solution of salicylic acid in absolute alcohol. Into this solution the dry stems and twigs of the plants are dipped. They may be removed in a few minutes, as soon as crystallization takes place, when the whole upper surface is covered with naphthalin crystals. They are them hung up to dry in an airy room and will retain their natural colors permanently.

"Since this method is not feasible for large specimens, on account of the size of the jar and the quantity of solution demanded, a second process has found favor:

"This depends on the quality possessed by formaldehdye of hardening albuminous substances and changing them into forms insoluble in water. By means of a brush, leaves and blossoms are painted with several coats of a 20 per cent gelatin solution, or one of 30 parts of egg-albumen in 70 parts of water. This coating is thoroughly dried and then leaves and blossoms are brushed with a 10 per cent solution of formaldehyde, which causes the coating of albumen or gelatin gradually to harden. The thicker the coat of gelatin or albumen, the more solid the final coat, which, however, remains flexible, so that the plants do not look lifeless, though unfortunately the covering is very apparent."

"The process, however, is not fitted for extremely delicate and tender plants which lose their beauty thereby. It is recommended that such specimens be treated by a third process:

"Hygroscopic wadding is cut with scissors into fine flakes. The object is packed in these after they have been used to fill the corolla and other hollow parts, and is kept in place by tiny sticks or very fine florists' wire. At the end of 14 days the delicate mummy may be cautiously removed by the aid of small pincers.

"For large, coarse specimens, however, the method most commonly employed is that of drying by means of fine sand. Where the plants have fleshy parts, rich in water, a preliminary treatment of sulfuric acid is advised. The plants are put into a large glass cylinder holding a mixture of eight parts of water to one part of alcohol saturated with sulfuric acid, being so placed that only their stems touch the liquid:

"In the course of a few hours the acid will have caused the fading disappearance of all the colors, but they will reappear in their natural brilliance when the specimens are dried. At worst the green parts will be a trifle yellowish and the brown parts somewhat reddish.

"This acid treatment is merely preliminary to the actual process of drying by means of fine sand. For this a simple apparatus is employed, consisting of a wooden frame which fits inside a box; the bottom of the frame being made of a coarse-meshed sieve. The sand must be very fine and should be well washed in several waters, so as to remove all dirt, then spread on a board and allowed to dry in an airy room for several days. It is then heated in an oven and mixed with paraffin in the proportion of five of paraffin to one of sand, by weight, and stirred thoroughly till the grains of sand are coated. In another metal pan is put a mixture of six parts of the clean, dry sand with one part (by weight) of pure potassium chlorid, and the mixture is heated till the melting potassium chlorid has coated the sand-grains. Two parts of the paraffin sand are well mixed with the potassium chlorid.

Then—

"The plants are wiped free of the acid and fastened into the shape they are meant to retain by means of silk thread and tiny sticks. The corolla is filled with the prepared sand and then the plants are placed in the frame in the desired position and covered lightly and evenly with sand. The box is carried carefully out into the sunshine and covered with a glass plate, or, in rainy weather, placed near the hearth. The plants will be dry in about fourteen days. The frame is then lifted from the box, the sand flows out through the sieve, and the specimens may be freed of sticks and threads."—Translation made for the Literary Digest.

Mr. Ricker adds that the naphthalene-benzine solution, in which the ordinary flake naphthalene should be added slowly to benzine, or gasoline, if that cannot be obtained and stirred very vigorously until no more of it will dissolve, was the first process he tried and magnolia were first leaves experimented with. The process is quite satisfactory with them, but if kept in a dry room they will become brittle in a few months. The above article makes no mention of dyeing the leaves either the bronze, brown or deep red ordinarily used commercially. These colors however, he states, can probably still be obtained from some of the dye plants in the United States engaged in making synthetic dyes by the coal-tar process. Basic dyes such as are used in dyeing cotton should always be used for this work, as the leaves are largely composed of cellulose, which is also the material of which cotton fibres are composed. Mr. Ricker states that by addressing the Farbewerke Hoechst, 122 Hudson street, or the Geigy-ter Meer Co., 89 Barclay street, both of New York, it will probably still be possible to obtain color cards showing the lines that these firms are making.

Artificial Flowers.

Many object to artificial flowers, because in the first place they appear to be, but are not real, and for fear this competition will cheapen and interfere with the sale of natural stock. There is a place for everything and the artificial stock if kept where it belongs, will be found a great adjunct in the business. Prepared palms, magnolia and oak leaves, at first tabooed by the trade are now accepted everywhere and are considered indispensable items of stock. Imitation roses, carnations, dahlias, chrysanthemums, etc, never come in competition with natural flowers. They are not used in table decorations, or sent as cut flowers. Being only sold for what they are, imitations, on account of their lasting qualities, they produce decorative effects in connection with cut flowers, which would not be possible without them.

Artificial flowers are largely used in decorating wreaths and clusters for Memorial Day, and must be satisfactory to those who buy them, as their sale increases year by year. The great advantage is that this stock can be worked up long in advance of its sale, and shipped to all parts of the country. An immense business in these designs has been created in the New England states, department stores handling them by the carloads. Their featuring this business, has helped in the greater celebration of the day, and taxes the facilities of the local florists to the utmost to supply the demand for plants and cut flowers.

Painted weeds, grasses and all kinds of dyed material are now handled by the trade in immense quantities and used to great advantage during the Christmas holidays. Elaborate displays of this material weeks before, features the coming of the event and its sale does not in the least interfere with that of cut flowers and plants during the holidays.

Society of American Florists.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The time when the publicity committee will make contracts for the next series of advertisements in the national magazines is fast approaching. The funds at present available to cover these contracts and settle outstanding liabilities are not large, in fact, do not permit of what the committee feel would be a proper effort to revive the slogan "Say it with Flowers" after the dormant period now happily ending. The first of this advertising should reach 12 million or more people, just as some of our former advertising did. As anyone conversant with magazine publicity knows, this means an expenditure of several thousand dollars. All florists who have not yet subscribed to the campaign fund are urged to send in their subscriptions now, thus enabling the committee to carry out their plans to the full. It is not necessary to further describe our previous success. Suffice it to say that the slogan has been coveted by dozens of other industries, and perverted by many to suit their own conditions. Still, it is recognized by the public that these pervertations do but reflect the slogan of the florists, and we gain rather than lose by the piracies. It is high time that it should again be spread over the country. Its influence is worth many, many times more than it has cost or will cost us, and it is up to the trade to preserve this influence, a condition which can only come through a further expenditure of money, to provide fuel for the publicity fire.

Those in the trade who have not yet sent in cheques to cover the amounts of their subscription guarantees are also urged to make remittance without further delay. The money is greatly needed, as the committee do not see their way to finance the contracts they are arranging to place with undischarged guaranties. Subscriptions received for 1921 amount to $25,188.60, the following subscriptions of record since our last report, included:

B. F. Barr, Lancaster, Pa.	$30.00
Chas. M. Keanz, Great Falls, Mont.	10.00
The El Paso Carn't'n Co., El Paso, Ill.	10.00

Now is a good time to locate positions for the slogan billboards. A number of these billboards are still on hand and immediate shipments of them can be made at the regular price, $50 each. One of these boards on your property, Mr. Florist, would mean a lot of publicity for you, and also for our industry. The price represents the actual cost, and a low cost at that. The secretary has just received a letter, dated at Seattle, Wash., from J. F. Ammann, now in the west on a tour in the interests of the campaign, in which he states that his party is meeting with splendid success wherever they go. In each city so far visited an allied trade organization has been formed, and this means permanent aid in our publicity work.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

President Roland and the secretary were in Washington on Wednesday, June 1, when they met with the advisory committee on the trade exhibition, Z. D. Blackstone, David Grillbrotzer, and Adolph E. Gude, the latter acting for his father, Vice-President Adolph Gude, who was unavoidably absent from the city. It was found that all details in the arrangements for the exhibition were being worked out smoothly, and preparations were up to date in every respect. A visit was made to the convention hall, where it was found that plenty of space would be available to accommodate all applicants for space. President Roland was glad to be assured on this point, as he had been a little in doubt as to the hall's capacity.

Additions to the list of exhibitors are constant, and the prospects are that the entire area as laid off on the official plan will be taken up before the convention opens. The following exhibitors have made space reservations within the past few days:

Taiyo Trading Co., New York.
Horticulture Publishing Co., Boston.
Cohen & Hiller, New York.
Kervan & Co., New York.
C. S. Ford Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
Poultry Feed Co., Chicago.

While in Washington the secretary was pleased to meet Past Presidents Robert Craig and Theodore Wirth, and others of our members who have been prominent in the work of the society in the past. Judge Wm. F. Gude, our Washington representative, while quite busy with the duties of his new office, found time, as usual, to escort the visitors to the various public departments requiring their attention, thus saving much valuable time. In the afternoon the gardens of Dr. Van Fleet, at Bell station, Md., were visited, and the doctor's work in rose production proved highly impressive. The new roses there, some of them especially beautiful, should prove valuable acquisitions to the list of commercial varieties. It is learned that these new roses will be sent out through the medium of the American Rose Society.

Past Vice-President George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States botanical garden, also devoted much time to the visitors, escorting them to various places of interest horticulturally.

THE CONVENTION PROGRAMME.

The official programme for the convention is now in course of preparation and will be completed for mailing to members at least 30 days before the opening date of the convention. Some interesting addresses have already been arranged for, including one by F. J. Giblin, Utica, N. Y., on "Greenhouse Heating Up to Date," one by L. D. Fernald of the New York Post, on "Publicity for Florists," and one by Prof. L. C. Corbett, of the bureau of plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., on "The Production of Florists' Stock with Reference to Quarantine No. 37."

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Plans covering the lay-out of the trade exhibition in connection with the National Flower Show to be held in Cleveland, O., next spring are nearly completed, and copies of the finished plan will soon be ready for mailing. Many inquiries are already coming to the secretary's office in regard to trade space, as well as to other features planned for this great show. It is time now to plan for exhibits in the most important classes in the competitive section of the show, of which the one covering the grand capital prize of $5,000 is most prominent. Anyone who has not already received a copy of the preliminary schedule should write to the secretary for one. It may be said that the committee will be grateful for the promise of even a small exhibit. Every grower within safe shipping distance of Cleveland could do something in the way of a display, looking not so much for personal distinction as for an exposition of florists' products which should be a credit to the industry.

Although the list of guarantors for the exhibition was completed some time ago, the following additional subscriptions have been received, making the total $20,632:

Whitthuhn's Flower Shop, Cleveland..$100.00
A. Washburn Sons, Bloomington, Ill. 100.00
Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh 200.00

MEMBERSHIP DUES.

Bills for membership dues have been sent to all who are in arrears, and it will facilitate the work of the secretary's office very much if prompt remittances are made, so that a favorable financial report may be had at the proper time before the convention. Receipts for cheques will not be sent to members unless requests for same are made at time of remittance, the return of the cheque through the bank, properly endorsed, being considered sufficient. Our executive board believes that much clerical work and not a little printing and mailing expense, is saved by dispensing with the formal receipt.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the following new plants have been submitted for registration by the society:

By Henry J. Doll, Wanskuck Greenhouses, Providence, R. I.—Geranium, Mrs. Henry J. Doll. A seedling, parentage unknown. Plant a strong grower, free and early bloomer. Zone in leaf very distinct. Height of plant, about 18 in. Color of flower, glowing scarlet. Size two inches in diameter. Flowers single, 40 to 50 to a cluster, five petals to a flower.

By E. H. Kunze, Newton, Kans.—Geranium, E. H. Kunze, 1917 Seedling, parentage unknown. Strong grower, of medium height, very compact. Foliage, bright green, heavy from bottom up. Flowers, brilliant rose pink, shading to white center; immense trusses of double florets, many larger than a silver dollar, each carrying from 11 to 17 petals. Prolific bloomer, flower stalks forming at every or every other joint, quite often two from one joint at the same time. A four inch pot plant has been seen to have 11 flower stalks in full bloom and heavy bud at once.

Any person objecting to either of these registrations, or to the use of either proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections, registration will be made three weeks from June 6, 1921.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

New Quarantine Regulations.

One of our esteemed patrons writes as follows concerning new quarantine and other regulations:

"The collapse of the Roman empire was due to the tax gatherers crowding out the tax payers. History repeats itself. Business in this country is being legislated, restricted and harassed out of existence to provide more and more government, state and city jobs. Here is our record for one week:

"1. Ficus elastica cuttings, formerly imported from Belgium, are now grown around New Orleans and are shipped in May and June. Just as the first season's shipments were about ready in May, a quarantine was clamped down to include the two producing parishes, by reason of the camphor scale. The length of the quarantine is indefinite, but it will probably last long enough to spoil the season's crop of cuttings, estimated at over 100,000. No shipments can at present be made.

"2. A new federal horticultural board regulation, dated January, 1920, requiring that all shipments of palm seeds from Oceania be fumigated for 24 hours by carbon bisulphide, was enforced just as our first two shipments of 330 bushels of kentia seeds from Australia were ready for distribution at San Francisco, Calif. It is feared that this fumigation will greatly reduce the germination, besides adding to the delivered cost of the seeds. The shipments are made under permit, a health and sterilization certificate is attached to each case and all formalities complied with. No reason is given by the federal horticultural board explaining the necessity for the regulation.

"3. The New York city authorities are trying to prevent us from storing raffia in our own building in excess of five tons, using for that purpose, a city ordinance which prevents the storage of straw, paper, excelsior and inflammable animal or vegetable fibres in the form of scraps and clippings. We usually carry in stock from 40 to 120 tons (400 to 1,200 bales), so are contesting the order through the courts. Three days were occupied by the trial, several notable nurserymen and seedsmen testifying for us. Decision will be rendered June 13."

The Jap and Yap.

Japan's intentions with regard to the island of Yap were termed "purely military" by Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson in a recent interview with the New York Times. He predicted Japan would seize the Phillipines, Hawaii and Guam, blow up the Panama Canal and declare war against this country, "either before the Atlantic fleet rejoins the Pacific fleet, or in five or six years."

OBITUARY.

Henry Weber.

Henry Weber, a well known grower and retailer of Brooklyn, N. Y., died on June 4, age 62 years. He had been stricken with apoplexy on Memorial Day. His place of business was at 739 Fifth avenue, near Greenwood cemetery, and he was one of the oldest florists of that section, having succeeded his father, Henry Weber, Sr., in the business. The deceased was born and reared in that city and had a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He was an officer and stockholder of the Brooklyn Saengerbund, a member of the Brooklyn Quartet Club, Gilbert Council, Royal Arcanum, and the Thistle Bowling Club. Funeral services were held at the family home, 243 24th street, on June 7, interment being in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Weber is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Herman F. Young and a granddaughter, Elva Young.

A. F. F.

Mrs. Mary E. Hollcraft.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary E. Hollcraft, of Topeka, Kans., an account of whose death appeared in our issue of June 4, were held in Penwell chapel June 2. Mrs. Hollcraft was one of the pioneer florists of that city. Twenty years ago she established a small counter in the Ladies' Exchange building on W. Sixth avenue, and at the time of her death was the owner of a fine store at 807 Kansas avenue. All flower shops in Topeka were closed from 2:30 to four o'clock on the afternoon of June 2, in respect to her memory.

Nicholas Burger.

Nicholas Burger, a florist of Middle Village, L. I., was stricken with apoplexy on June 4, while engaged in watering plants in his greenhouse and died immediately. He was born in Germany 66 years ago, but had been in this country a number of years. He is survived by his wife, a daughter and a son.

A. F. F.

TOLEDO, O.—The Navarre Flower Shop was purchased recently by W. E. Hall of Clyde, O.

BEMIDJI, MINN.—The Bemidji Floral Co. has rented the range owned and formerly conducted by A. E. Webster.

LANSDALE, PA.—Frank Muller is erecting two greenhouses, 22x210 feet, specializing in chrysanthemums and carnations.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Christian Benevolent Home at Chestnut Hill, a suburb of this city will erect greenhouses on its property in the near future.

DES MOINES, IA.—The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. reports record business for May, including Memorial Day, with plants well sold out. They were short of cannas.

BELVIDERE, ILL.—An iris show held here recently under the auspices of the American Iris Society, was noteworthy with choice exhibits by Mrs. Azro Fellows, president of the local Iris Club, and others.

SOUTH PASADENA, CALIF.—The G. & G. Nursery, was recently established in this city, with Geo. C. Groenewegen, formerly of Amsterdam, Holland, and Mrs. Cecilia Gilbert, lately of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., as co-partners. They will specialize in nursery and landscape work.

POSTAL receipts for May show considerable improvement over those of April.

THE secret of running a business, says a New York woman, is in getting the right kind of people to work for you.

BEHIND the smoke screen of poverty the Germans have sent up for the last six months, they have been constructing "like beavers."

A JARDINIERE of double-walled construction that keeps growing plants moist by capillary action through small siphons is a recent French invention.

NEW YORK.—The Americanization committee distributed 8,000 bulbs of Paper White narcissi to school children last fall. An exhibition of the resulting flowers grown by the children was held later and prizes awarded.

ACCORDING to Eugene Meyer, Jr., the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat, a bushel of corn, a pound of cotton and of a hog, at today's prices payable at the farm when expressed in prices of the things the farmer needs and buys is lower than it has been at any time within the last 25 years. It is up to the bankers and business men of America to make up their minds whether they want to help dig the farmer out of the hole or whether they wish to stay in the hole with him."

Coal.

Greenhouse men will do well to put in necessary supplies of coal for the coming season as early as possible. Reliable and well informed coal men say freight difficulties and coal prices will increase as the season advances.

Pueblo Flood.

George Asmus, A. Lange, Joseph Foerster and other florists of Chicago met this week to consider the situation of the trade in the stricken city of Pueblo, Colo., and sent out telegraph inquiries as to the needs of the sufferers.

We feel certain the trade of Pueblo and other afflicted territory has only to make known the requirements and the trade of the entire country will respond with substantial assistance.

Portland Rose Festival.

The great annual rose festival of Portland, Ore., is in progress this week, June 8-10. While the 1921 event, according to the official quarterly of the local rose society, will not be as large as when they entertained the Shrine, the officers and all committees have worked this year to produce a carnival that will be a fitting celebration. Several new features have been added, and the three days of the festival will be filled with events to please the guests of the city.

The queen will arrive at noon on Wednesday, June 8, and the coronation will take place that afternoon at Multnomah field. Following the coronation will come the ceremony of naming the new rose produced by Dr. Van Fleet, and the presentation of the world's prize to the producers of the best new roses. The coronations and other events will be under the direction of the Royal Rosarians. The rose show and floral display at the Auditorium, arranged by the Portland Rose Society and the Florists' Club will open at two o'clock on Wednesday and continue until 10 p. m., with organ recitals both afternoon and evening. In the evening there will be the first illumination of the festival center at the Park blocks, with entertainment by speakers and musicians. A programme has been arranged for every day at the Park blocks.

On Thursday, June 9, the rose show will be open from 10 o'clock in the morning until six in the evening, it closing at that hour so the Auditorium can be the scene of the annual ball given in honor of the queen, by the Royal Rosarians. This ball is by invitation only, but to accommodate the public that evening the big Pageant of the Roses will be staged at Laurelhurst park in which several hundred children will take part. The big event of Thursday is the floral parade, which will be held during the afternoon, and this feature promises to be even larger and more elaborate than in past years. The festival will close Friday, June 10, that day being devoted to a river carnival and speed boat races. The admiral's ball will conclude the programme.

National Flower Growers' Association.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Indications are that a large portion of Ohio's 600 florists will be in Columbus at the time of our annual meeting June 21. The principle topic under discussion will be "Cost Systems for the Grower and Retailer," followed by the election of officers and committees for the coming year. George Asmus, Chicago, has accepted an invitation to be present and deliver an address on "Cost Systems and Merchandising for the Retailer," which will be illustrated with forms and charts used by Mr. Asmus in keeping tab on his own business. It is expected that another speaker will be secured to present a talk on "Cost Systems for the Grower."

It is our plan to then appoint committees to take up the recommendations of the speakers, discuss and elaborate upon them, have them checked by growers in various lines and eventually take the sum and substance of their investigations to a firm of accountants, who will then work out a uniform system of keeping track of costs. The florist who attends this meeting will certainly secure enough direct, tangible suggestions which will enable him to apply them immediately to his own business, and he will be more than repaid for the time spent at this meeting. L. C. VINSON, Secy.

Membership Drive.

TRAVELING SALESMEN'S WEEK.

This is traveling salesmen's week for the Society of American Florists' drive and a plea for them to lend a hand. This letter is to the knights of the grip of our trade. We hail you gentlemen with your pleasant smile and your happy jokes! Without you there would truly be a missing link in our profession. We wish for all men of the trade to greet you cheerfully and give you a hearing at all times and an order whenever possible.

To do this properly, we need education; and organization means education. So we, herewith, solicit your hearty support in the membership drive for the greatest of all organizations of our trade—namely, the Society of American Florists.

Please write the undersigned for application blanks and other material to assist you in soliciting new members. Our committee looks to you gentlemen for great results, since your business is salesmanship and we must try to sell to every florist in the country for this worthy cause.

Let America Do It.

A tourist recently returned from Europe tells the following:

"We were dining in a large fashionable cafe in Hamburg. A shabby little girl selling flowers stopped at each table, dropping a courtesy to the ladies and gentlemen. She was ignored or repulsed by seven or eight tables. Seeing we were foreigners, she moved around us but we stopped her and bought. I did not see her make another sale—again a case of 'Let America Do It.'"

Club Meetings Next Week.

HOLIDAY TRADE SATISFACTORY.

Memorial day business is reported as being quite satisfactory. Saturday, May 28, was the best day. The Retail Florists' Association notified all its members to keep open on Sunday if they desired to do so, but from all accounts trade was not very brisk on that day. It improved greatly on May 30. The trade was fortunate in having a large supply to draw upon and very reasonable prices prevailed in the wholesale market. There was one exception, however, and that was carnations. This flower was very scarce and prices ranged from $1 to $2 per bunch of two dozen flowers. We do not remember when carnations have brought such high figures at this time of the year. Greatly curtailed plantings last year is the cause. There was a huge cut of roses of nearly every variety. Much of the stock was of excellent quality, due to ideal growing conditions. Mrs. Chas. Russell was particularly plentiful and very fine. Columbia is in shorter supply. Hadley was in strong demand and fine long stemmed stock could be had at low prices. American Beauties continued scarce. Ophelia arrived in large quantities, and met with a good demand. Cecile Brunner was in large supply and was quite cheap. Most of the stock offered was outdoor grown. Irish Elegance is now one of the most popular small roses and cleans up well. Basket work calls for a great deal of this favorite rose. Ulrich Brunner was in ample supply and only of fair quality. It seemed to lag in favor. There was a heavy cut of Gladioli Colvillei, The Bride and Peach Blossom. There was a strong call for these flowers both from the local and shipping trade. Very little advance in price was noted and the supply was adequate for all requirements. The cut of the large flowering gladioli showed a marked increase but this stock cleaned out well at $1.50 per dozen. Peonies were good property. Sweet peas were plentiful and cheap. No really first-class stock was to be seen, most of the flowers having a washed-out appearance. A large quantity of snapdragon was on the market, but most of it was inferior in quality. White Watsonias were very plentiful this year and where inexpensive stock was the object, proved a good seller. Some fine pink Watsonias are now being offered. Gardenias enjoyed their usual steady demand. Cattleyas were in limited supply and firm in price. There was only about enough lily of the valley to go around with prices ranging about $8 per 100. Flowering eucalyptus was offered by the green men and made a pretty setting in all the stores. Larkspur, statice, ageratum hybrids and campanulas were in good supply. Magnolia wreaths were handled in large quantities by all the stores and were probably the best sellers. Stores close to the cemeteries did a good plant trade but in this city the call for this class of stock was small. There were excellent rhododendrons to be seen everywhere. Hydrangeas in pots are probably the best sellers at present, although there is a constant demand for Bostons.

NOTES.

On June 1, Henry Avansino, who for several years past has been manager of the wholesale shipping firm of E. M. McLellan & Co., resigned to enter the rose growing business. His greenhouses at San Lorenzo will be devoted to roses excusively. Mr. Avansino intends to enlarge his establishment considerably in the next few years. The well wishes of the trade go with him in his new field.

Ferrari Bros.' greenhouses were large factors in the rose supply for Memorial Day, as their houses were in full crop. During the month of June, lily of the valley will be produced here in large lots for the June bride. Orchids still are a large item at this place in the daily cut.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says the dahlia plants at his farm are making a splendid growth for so early in the season. Mr. Pelicano will be a prominent exhibitor at the fall show when the trade will have a fine opportunity of seeing his new seedlings.

Podesta & Baldocchi are well pleased over Memorial day trade. They had a fine display of potted rhododendrons and hydrangeas which sold well with them. Peonies were another favorite.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting on June 1. The question of the new flower market was discussed.

MARKET REVIVING AFTER HOLIDAY.

The demand for stock this week, has been much better than was anticipated after the holiday. Stock has not cleaned up by any means, but business has been fairly good. There is an excess of all stock arriving, except in white which is in strong demand especially white roses, lily of the valley and white sweet peas. Carnations and roses in general, are in light demand, but clean up almost daily at greatly reduced prices from a week ago. Red roses have a good call for graduation work. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful, and sell readily for wedding decorations. Peonies have had quite a call this week with none to offer at any price. Bachelor buttons, marguerites and small flowers of that kind clean up good. Outdoor lily of the valley is about done and indoor stock has advanced in price almost 100 per cent. Delphinium is also selling well, this being a very popular flower for wedding work. Orchids which have been a drug for some time have taken a spurt and sold without any trouble at $9 to $12 a dozen.

NOTES.

Among the winners of prizes offered at the rhododendron, azalea and iris exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, June 4-5, were the T. C. Thurlow Co., 1st, for 12 varieties of rhododendrons, and Mrs. C. W. Willis, 1st, for 12 vases of irises.

Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, one of the best known growers of carnations for this market, is going out of that line entirely, producing only novelties next season.

The body of B. Hammond Tracey Jr. who was drowned in France arrived in this country last week. He was buried from the home of his father at Wenham, Mass., June 2.

HOLIDAY TRADE EXCEPTIONAL.

Memorial Day business was very satisfactory, and was limited by the capacity of the florist to supply the stock wanted. The week preceding was marked by a strong call for blooming bedding stock, geraniums leading in this demand. The cut flower trade was quite heavy, the call for carnations being the greatest. Peonies, jasmines, roses and gladioli were all good stck, as also were sweet peas, field daisies, dianthus, etc. The spring season just closing had been a fairly satisfactory one for the trade. The demand for landscape work, more or less elaborate, and spring bedding stock has been good. The supply has been fairly adequate. A shortage in geraniums and a few minor items, is noted. While exact figures are not at this time available, there is good reason to believe that the volume of trade is better than during previous years. Except for a backwardness caused by a very dry May, out-door summer stock appears in good condition.

STOCK IS IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Stock is in large supply and there is plenty of everything to go around with the exception of orchids and white roses. Business was very quiet in the retail stores last week according to all reports and the demand in the wholesale market has not been any too brisk. Roses in general are in heavy supply and have been sold in large lots the past week at very low prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell is in strong demand and the call is heavy for Premier, especially in the better grades. White roses are exceedingly scarce and short stemmed stock is selling as high as $8 per 100 in some instances. Sunburst is in good supply and has a fair call. Mrs. Aaron Ward roses are also having a good call. Columbia, Montrose, Ophelia, Milady, Hoosier Beauty, Butterfly, Hearst, Crusader and all the other varieties grown for this market are to be had in quantity. Carnations are in heavy supply, but are not moving any too fast. Peonies are plentiful and are going well. Orchids are extremely scarce with very few obtainable at $36 per dozen and up. Lily of the valley is in brisk demand and gardenias are disposed of almost as fast as they arrive. Lilies are seen in larger quantities at some of the stores, but a few brisk days would make quite a difference in the supply. Daisies, calendulas, forget-me-nots, cornflowers, sweet peas, statice, pansies, calendulas, feverfew, gladioli and a long list of other indoor and outdoor stock is included in the list of offerings. The demand was very light the opening of this week, but is improving at this writing.

NOTES.

Higinbotham hall, home of a thousand priceless gems and famous jewels, was opened to the public at the Field museum of natural history, June 6. The hall is named in honor of the late Harlow N. Higinbotham, an early president of the museum and the chief donor of the collection shown in the hall. He was proprietor of the old Chicago Carnation Co. at Joliet.

The annual banquet and entertainment of the Commercial Flower Grower's will be held at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, June 16. The association has made a liberal appropriation for the entertainment and preparations for the event are well under way. Dancing will be a prominent feature. Tickets $2.50 each.

George Asmus and Herman Schiller, of Schiller's, are considering plans for the installation of a $10,000 rockery in the new conservatory at the north side establishment, with elaborate lighting and water effects. The business of the firm has surpassed the most sanguine expectations of the management.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a large quantity of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses in addition to all the other varieties grown at its Morton Grove range. The call is exceptionally heavy for this variety at this house and the cut is disposed of regularly notwithstanding it is being grown more heavily there than ever.

J. H. Schier, president of the Burlington Willow Ware Co., Burlington, Ia., and Robert Newcomb, one of the firm's traveling representatives were here on business this week.

Miss Nettie Parker of A. T. Pyfer & Co. is planning on attending the Society of American Florists' convention at Washington next August.

Peter Bussema, gardener at the Riverside Country Club, is anxious to locate his daughter Josie, 18 years old, who disappeared April 27.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is having a strong call for sweet peas, which it is handling in quantity with a large proportion of white.

Joe Bieber, who has been with A. I. Simmons, 242 West 63rd street, has left for Toledo, O., to spend the summer.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is handling its usual large supply of local peonies again this season.

A. Lange is offering real orange blossoms of excellent quality for the wedding season.

H. N. Bruns says the demand for June wedding lily of the valley is very satisfactory.

J. L. Raske had charge of the flower booth at "The Elk's Trip to California."

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

Wietor Bros. are all sold out of chrysanthemum plants and expect to dispose of the few pompons they have left in short order. This firm is cutting from a fine crop of Sunburst roses.

C. L. Washburn reports business as brisk at Bassett & Washburn's store, especially from out-of-town points. This firm's cut of roses is large but is moving surprisingly well considering the general market conditions.

P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., and wife attended the graduation exercises at Castle School, Tarrytown, N. Y., where their daughter graduated last week. They returned home June 3.

A. L. Vaughan is driving a new R. & V. sport model, six cylinder car. Business at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store continues to be brisk, with a heavy call for peonies.

Wolf's Flower Shop on East Monroe street was robbed during the night of June 3, when burglars entered the store through the transom. They secured about $25 worth of change in the cash register.

The American Bulb Co. had the new white rose, Medinah, on exhibition at its store the past week. It made friends with the growers here and has proven to be a wonderful keeper.

Herbert Hansen says that business has been good at the Peter Reinberg store the past week, with the better grades of roses in strong demand.

HOLIDAY TRADE EXCELLENT.

The last minute spell of sunny, hot weather enabled local growers to cut a large stock of peonies for Memorial Day. The outlook for this flower had been discouraging but by Monday large stocks came into the market and florists were able to dispose of them at the very reasonable figure of $2 per dozen. Their quality was excellent. The holiday had quite a revival of interest, due to the fact that the American Legion made enthusiastic plans for the parade and other features. A tree in the courthouse park was used by the Legion as a symbol of the fallen heroes and wreaths and other floral offerings were placed there by friends and relatives. Wreaths of magnolia ornamented with poppies were widely used and found favor with the public. The decoration of graves kept those florists busy who cater to this business. Blooming geraniums were in great demand and by Monday were hard to obtain. Spring planting is still on in full swing, being late on account of the spasmodic weather, hot one day and cool the next. On the whole, trade for May was very encouraging, about equal to last year's. June has started in fine and florists report an excellent call for wedding flowers.

NOTES.

Large stocks of peonies were sold by Schramm Bros. for Memorial Day. Frank Schramm told the writer that business was considerably ahead of last year which he considers very encouraging under present conditions. The spring planting demand has been very lively with this firm and they decorated the beach and some large factory grounds.

Armine Suder filled the porch and window boxes at the Women's Club building as a memorial to his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Suder, who in her long career was recognized as a great lover of flowers and as a florist who accomplished great things in spreading this desire.

The Navarre Flower Shop conducted for the past year by Messrs. Navarre and Drouillard, has changed hands again, having been purchased by the Halls, who operate a greenhouse at Clyde, O. Robert Hall will manage the local store.

The Scottwood Greenhouse has enjoyed an increasing call for wedding flowers during the past week. Deaths of several prominent citizens also brought some splendid orders for funeral pieces.

Max Spanner is now an enthusiastic believer in advertising. He ran a special advertisement in the papers on wreaths and sold out completely.

Feniger's two flower shops did a big business for Memorial Day and had in stock an unusually large display of roses and peonies.

Funeral and June wedding work is excellent with Metz & Bateman. They report a fine holiday business.

FOUNDED BY FLINT KENNICOTT 1st

Because we have found that whatever success we may have attained has been built upon the many successes of our customers, we look first to their satisfaction. Unless their profit is assured, no lasting profit can come to us. That is the guiding idea of our service.

Perhaps that is one reason why Kennicott customers stick.

SCHOOL COMMENCEMENTS BRING TRADE.

The commencement season has been in full force for the past two or three weeks, and the florists have found a use for all their stock. Roses, carnations, and sweet peas, have been especially in demand. There has also been a good run of wedding orders and entertainments. There were two or three memorial days, but only home-grown flowers and out-door blossoms were used.

The Joy Floral Co., had a nice business on Memorial Day, much better than in previous years. They have an abundance of flowers of every kind and are able to fill all orders.

Geny Bros., have been busy with graduations and wedding work.

GOOD DEMAND FOR STOCK.

The excessive heat during the past week has affected stock to a considerable extent. Outdoor flowers have come on with a rush and generally speaking, the demand is comparatively good. Pot plants are head liners, selling at moderate prices but with great rapidity. Roses were good property with first class stock wholesaling at from six to 15 cents each. The majority of blooms are excellent. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Premier, Butterfly, Milady and Killarney were the leading varieties, all having a good call. Carnations were in good demand in spite of the hot weather and sold at moderate prices. Dark varieties received the preference and the stock was of fine quality. The supply of cornflowers has increased greatly during the past few days and they are selling fast. Shades of blue, white and pink are offered. German iris offered in limited quantities, is not good. Loveliness and Hadley gladioli cleaned up in a hurry last week, but there was little or no call for stock of an inferior quality. Many spikes have been used for weddings lately. Easter lilies, though very limited as to quantity and of medium quality, are popular. Lily of the valley is in great demand and it finds its chief use in bridal bouquets for June brides. It is not very plentiful, but the prices remain moderate. The stock is well grown. Orchids are more scarce and are much sought after as a corsage flower. The supply of cypripediums is very short and have a fair sale. A few dealers are disposing of a limited quantity of anthuriums. Calla lilies are not offered in many stores. Yellow callas in pots are to be had at moderate prices at a few establishments. Calendulas of large size and good quality are offered at all places, but are poor sellers and bring a small price. Snapdragons are indeed scarce this week and only a few pink flowers are offered. They sell well despite the lateness of the season. Larkspur in all shades of blue is very plentiful and a good seller. Sweet peas are about gone. The few coming in are small flowers and very short stemmed. Daisies of both yellow and white varieties are more than plentiful and are not selling as fast as they might, and they do not bring a very good price. Shasta daisies are coming in in large quantities. Peonies are scarce and bring a fancy price. Stocks are coming into the market in limited quantities in shades of blue, white and pink. They are large flowered, but short stemmed and sell moderately well. Pot plants of ageratums, geraniums, marguerites, genistas, crotons, pandanus and cibotum ferns are commonly seen in all windows, and show little change in price. A limited number of fancy-leafed caladiums are being displayed by a few florists and are excellent sellers. Begonias are not in as much evidence as previously. Many florists are making a specialty of attractive window boxes. Bedding plants such as pandanus, lantana, verbenas, ferns and other greens and trailers are used. Asparagus plumosa and sprengeri are plentiful, but ferns are very limited, bringing $5 per 1,000. All stock coming in has been extremely difficult to keep, owing to the excessive heat.

NOTES.

Street merchants are doing a rushing business in second grade roses, carnations, sweet peas and some very good calendulas.

Grimm & Gorly have been on the jump during the past week and their books show many orders for June weddings.

H. G. Berning reports a good business in his section of the city, and many telegraph orders.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co., is being rushed to fill all orders of roses and carnations.

The St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., reports a fine trade in gladioli and snapdragons.

A specialty of fancy leafed caladiums is being made by the Bourdet Floral Co.

The publicity committee for the trade held its regular meeting June 1.

F. H. Weber is selling some very attractively arranged foliage plants.

A fine grade of cornflowers and roses is being handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Geo. Waldbart is displaying some fine window boxes.

Funeral trade has been good with Fred C. Weber.

LULL FOLLOWS HOLIDAY RUSH.

Trade the past week has been quiet after the Memorial Day rush. Wax designs predominated as usual, and the demand for them was very heavy. As usual markets, department stores, candy kitchens and drug stores had their usual large stocks of wax wreaths, crosses and pillows. This competition is detrimental to the trade and something should be done in the future to curb it as much as possible. The decoration trade this year was good but in no way did it eclipse last year, for the amount of stock sold. Geraniums were excellent and in large supply. Cut flowers and bouquets did not have their usual heavy call.

The Lowell avenue greenhouses opened an annex on Westminster street, and did well.

R. L. Hogan sold several thousand geraniums in four and 5-inch pots.

Pittsburgh.

Business has been rather slow since Memorial Day, with an abundance of all kinds of stock of quality that ran from good to bad. Outdoor flowers of all kinds are on the market with the result that there has been a decided decline in prices. The usual June demand for white roses has found the usual short supply, with the result that it has been impossible to fill all orders. American Beauties are not plentiful, and the quality is poor. Premier seems to be the only rose that is able to stand the warm weather. Columbia, Butterfly, Ophelia, American Legion, Pilgrim, Sunburst, Hilda, Richmond and White Killarney are the other varieites arriving in quantity. Carnations are also showing the effects of the warm weather. Easter lilies and gladioli are two items that continue to hold their own, and clean up at list prices. The local peony season is over and shipments are coming in from northern points. Outdoor flowers are a welcome addition and include delphinium, larkspur, Sweet William, coreopsis, gaillardia and candytuft. The supply of orchids and lily of the valley is sufficient for all needs.

NOTES.

Kaufmann's department store, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary last week, and many handsome floral pieces were in evidence. The 3,000 employees of the firm sent a loving cup made of roses, one rose for each employe. The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Company filled the order, and it caused much favorable comment. All the newspapers carried photographs of it with a lengthy writeup.

George C. McCallum of the McCallum Co., is calling on the firm's customers in the east. Mr. McCallum is making the trip with Henry Blend, the company's representative in that district. The company ball team defeated the California Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church nine by the score of 14 to 12 in an interesting game on the Riverview park grounds.

A review of the Memorial Day business shows that it was not up to expectations. Out-of-town florists report a good trade, but the city demand was not what it should have been, due no doubt to the large number of unemployed, yet the trade has nothing to complain of.

The regular monthly meeting of the Retail Florists' Association, was held June 9, at the Hotel Chatam.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

One of the subjects discussed at the June meeting of the Florists' Club was a summer camp at one of the nearby lakes—Kinderhook, Nassau, or others, where the members who so desired could spend Saturday afternoons and Sundays in healthful recreation at small cost. President Samuel Hansen named a committee of four to look up a site, to obtain prices of leases, and other details. The committee is made up of Frederick A. Danker, chairman; Frederick Henkes, Thomas F. Tracey, and Secretary William McGinn. Members of the club may be enrolled for the camp on payment of $1 each, but they will be responsible for their personal expenses while there. The privileges of the camp will include boats for fishing, the use of a bathing beach, and meals and lodging at cost. The club accepted the invitation of Frederick Goldring to hold the July meeting at his place, Font Grove. The August meeting, which includes a flower display, will be held at the establishment of W. H. Van Hoesen, Round Lake.

EXCELLENT HOLIDAY TRADE.

Business through the month of May was exceptionally good. On the two floral holidays, Mothers' and Memorial, the demand taxed the resources of the trade. White carnations on Mothers' Day brought exceptional prices, some stores getting 20 and even 40 cents each for them. The older and more conservative florists believed that such high prices were not warranted and advised their customers to purchase other flowers, which they did. The veterans believe that one way to kill business on this occasion is to ask exceptionally high prices and to confine the demand to one flower. Memorial Day brought a large business in plants, peonies, and artificial wreaths. In regard to the last named item, many of them were made attractive with magnolia leaves, wax lilies, roses, and other flowers. The demand for this class of goods was so exceptional that most of the florists sold out. Memorial Day is forging to the front as one of the best on the calendar.

The reason for the smile worn by Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, Inc., is that there is a new boy in his household. Thomas F., Jr. He is a month old and is the first child.

FAIRLY GOOD DEMAND FOR STOCK.

The first week in June was quiet for the trade here, with the exception of Tuesday, when the formal opening of a large department store called for large offerings of flowers. But generally speaking the demand is just about absorbing the supply. Flowers are of excellent quality and they are coming in better with the improvement in weather conditions. Funeral work was very good. Some party work is reported and more is expected with the commencement exercises scheduled at the state university. Weddings are also starting now as this is the month for such ceremonies. On the whole, prospects for the remainder of the month are excellent in every way and florists are looking forward to a good trade. Roses and carnations are still the staple lines in the market and show little change in price. Delphiniums are arriving in large quantities and sell readily from $3 to $4 per dozen. Snapdragons are about over with, and plants are not selling as well as is usual for this time of the year.

Immense floral offerings were given to the Morehouse-Martens Co., upon the occasion of occupying its new modern store room on South High street, May 31. The flowers came from the concerns selling goods, and from the contractors who erected the building. All of the trade shared in the extra business caused by this event.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN TRADE NOTED.

The demand for the past week was about normal for the season, showing an increase. For the first few days stock was scarce, particularly roses, later they became more plentiful, with quite a surplus to be carried over. The stock for the most part is of good quality, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier and Columbia. American Beauties, while showing the effects of the late season, are still good enough to bring 50 cents. All specials sell well. There is still a fair supply of carnations, but the percentage of high grade flowers is small, not many of a grade fit to ship. There is a considerable supply of indoor gladioli which is very fine. Outdoor sweet peas of good quality are plentiful and sell well. Gypsophilla, gaillardia, coreopsis, larkspur and feverfew, are other important outside flowers. Gigas with magnificent flowers, sell up close at $1.50 each. Lily of the valley of excellent quality is seen and Easter lilies are about equal to the demand and there are still a few callas. Local and southern asparagus is in good demand. The week's business can be considered satisfactory.

SCARCITY OF GREENHOUSE STOCK.

Growers who are replanting old varieties with new are experiencing great difficulty in obtaining stocks of the standard new varieties of roses and chrysanthemums. C. U. Liggit, the greenhouse plantsman, states that there is a great shortage, particularly in chrysanthemums, there not being one-fourth enough of the young plants to go around. Many chrysanthemum growers did not propagate their own stock on account of the midge, hoping to get perfectly clean plants from others. A number of growers believe it best to change their stock every third year, the new plants if healthy always showing greater vigor than cuttings from their old stock. It is much the same with roses, as many growers are dropping the old variety and planting the newer kinds, such as Premier, Columbia and Butterfly. The Florex Gardens, North Wales, have planted 45,000, in several of the leading varieties. At Jno. Stephenson Sons', on old York road, 30,000 new rose plants have been set out. George Aeugle is also replacing old types such as Prima Donna, Single White Killarney and others, with the newer sorts at his Morton greenhouses.

NOTES.

The daylight saving time, which went into effect in this city on Monday last, is a source of considerable annoyance to the wholesale houses on account of the irregularity of the train service. Some of the locals have been moved forward an hour but on through trains the old schedule remains. Atlantic City, N. J. trains were changed, but those to Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C., are on the old time. Leo Niessen believes daylight saving would be advantageous if it was universal. As it is, out-of-town buyers should get their orders in as early in the day as possible to avoid delays on account of the varying train schedules.

Callas have been in great demand the past season with the result that growers are giving them more attention. Several houses of the Godfrey strain have produced fine flowers of uniform and excellent quality, they being perfect models as to form and snow white in color. Even at this late period this variety is still producing remarkably clean and perfect flowers.

The fishing season has commenced. Mark Mills and wife, Frank Ross and wife and Miss Mosta, have gone to the Poconos for the opening of the trout season, where they will enjoy both trout and bass fishing for the next month. Later they will be joined by a number of the craft who are also experts with the rod and reel.

Herman Bowerman recently opened a new store a few doors below his old location, the new number being 8 South 60th street. He is now in close proximity to 60th and Market streets, one of the busiest retail centers in the western part of the city.

Frank Müller, Landsdale, Pa., is erecting two houses, 22x210 feet, for carnations and chrysanthemums. The large house at St. Leanord's is planted, half with carnations and the balance with tomatoes, both of which stocks look very promising.

The Bickmore Greenhouses, Wallingford, Pa., are adding to their glass area with four King construction houses, 22x210 feet. These are to be used for carnations, which are a specialty here.

Carl Corts spent a few days the past week at Bushkill Falls nursing a lame hand in which a vigorous rose thorn had caused blood poison. It has now healed and is as useful as ever.

Charlie Theiss says the stork has brought him a second grandchild. Charlie's youthful appearance is against such a record, but he has our congratulations just the same.

American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell roses and fine cattleyas were features of the Leo Niessen stock the past week. Rambler rose sprays are also handled in quantity.

Choice roses from his Ellendale greenhouses are being received by A. M. Campbell. His Double White Killarneys and Ophelias are particularly fine.

B. Sproul has sold his flower shop at 58th street and Chester avenue to H. Barrett and opened another one at 158 South 60th street.

Edward Reid says the spring business is all right. Choice roses, gladioli and carnations are features of his stock.

Berger Bros. are featuring fine outdoor sweet peas, fine roses and carnations. Gladiolus are also an item.

Frank E. Miller, manager of J. H. Small & Sons, Washington, D. C., was a visitor the past week. K.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—R. C. Kerr, of the R. C. Kerr Floral Co., calls the Cape Jasmine, Dixie fragrance.

COLLIERVILLE, TENN.—J. B. Cartwright, proprietor of the Cartwright Floral Co., has found a market for more than 50,000 peony blooms in northern cities thus far this season.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Frank Stuppy and wife and mother returned from Boston, Mass., June 4. Mr. Stuppy is greatly improved in health and is planning to add another house to his range this season.

MARKET GRADUALLY IMPROVES.

Business was quiet in the wholesale district during the early days of last week, but there was an improvement toward the end. Moderately cool weather has prevented the market being flooded with worthless stock and although there has been more than enough to supply all demands it has, as a rule, arrived in fair condition. It seems that the frosts of a few weeks ago must have pinched the buds on many of the peonies as there is considerable stock of indifferent quality on the market, which is slow at $6 to $8 per 100. A limited quantity of fine stock is wholesaling at the rate of $12 to $16 per 100. With the peonies there are numerous offerings that have been grown in the open, including sweet peas, phlox, gaillardias, cornflowers and coreopsis. All this has a tendency to throw the carnations in the shade and they are slow and cheap. The market for American Beauty roses and orchids is sluggish. Many weddings are announced for this month, which should create a better demand for good stock. For such roses as Columbia, Ophelia and Premier the prevailing wholesale prices are from $3 to $15 and for exceptionally fine stock $20 per 100. A considerable stock of callas continues to arrive and both Easter lilies and lilies of the valley are plentiful, all moving at moderate prices. In addition to which is listed above, there are creditable offerings of gladioli, yellow daisies, snapdragons. Canterbury bells, larkspurs, marigolds, poppies, centaureas and stocks. Pansies of indifferent quality, continue to arrive.

June 6.—There is a fair movement in roses and peonies, but carnations and much of the outdoor stock is slow, particularly poppies, which have not been selling since Memorial Day. The weather continues moderately cool and favorable to stock.

WASHINGTON CONVENTION, AUGUST 16-18.

The transportation committee for the Society of American Florists' convention has requested us to make the following announcement: "Secretary John Young has sent us copies of communications from the Western, Transcontinental, New England, Trunk Line and Central Passenger Associations, setting forth the rebates obtainable on return journey from Washington, D. C., August next. These rates vary from one-half to one-third off on return. The rebate offered by the various trunk line associations will represent worthwhile savings, particularly to those traveling from points distant to Washington. Due to minor exceptions and limitations operating in certain territories the most advisable course for those who are planning to attend the convention is to consult local ticket offices where fullest information will be obtainable; all going must understand that these rebates can only be obtained through requesting same of agent at time of purchase of going ticket. The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has arranged for special parlor cars for members and their friends on a Pennsylvania railroad train leaving the Pennsylvania terminal, Eighth avenue and 34th street, Monday, August 15, at 11:08 a. m., daylight saving time, arriving at Washington at 4:30 p. m. A pleasurable trip to the convention city is anticipated and, in order to have the club delegation travel as one party, applications for parlor car space should be sent to Wm. Pedrick, Jr., division passenger agent, Pennsylvania System, 263 Fifth avenue, this city, as quickly as possible. Today is none too soon for reservations for those who have made up their minds to take in the convention. On receipt of your reservations Mr. Pedrick will immediately advise of location in car. Tickets may then be purchased (not before August 1, and not later than 12 noon Saturday, August 13) at the nearest ticket office where Pennsylvania R. R. tickets are sold. At the time of buying railroad ticket ask for necessary certificate for the obtaining of the reduced return fare. No member should fail to secure his certificate, as 350 of these certificates will have to be produced at the convention to be entitled to the rebate."

It has been stated that quite a number will go from here in their own automobiles. They are fortunate in being able to own machines, and since automobiles thieves are so numerous and have so highly specialized their industry we do not blame the owners for taking their machines with them. It should be an enjoyable trip, as we have reason to believe that there is plenty of good drinking water on the route. In a more serious vein; the means of transportation may well be left to individual choice. The leading idea should be to get there. For the good of the society as well as in consideration of the place of meeting, this convention should, and we doubt not, will be the greatest ever held. The Society of American Florists as a representative body of the trade, may have imitators, but it has no equals. When the approaching convention is called to order it will be but three days short of 36 years, since the plan was laid, in Chicago, for its formation. The first convention was held in Cincinnati, O., August 12-14, 1885. Happily a number of the pioneers of the movement are yet with us. In the years that have passed since its organization, many of the best minds in the trade of this country have freely aided in guiding its destinies. The surviving pioneers should be at Washington, to exult in the growth and sturdiness of the plant that they started as a tender shoot. The rising generation should be present to welcome and honor the pioneers.

NOTES.

A. T. DeLamare, who was appointed chairman of the "Good of the Club Committee," by President Hendrickson of the Florists' Club, has forwarded to all members a questionnaire asking their views on the matter of making the meetings of the club more interesting. The idea is a good one and it may be hoped that good results will follow. After the answers are in and have been discussed we may be permitted to further enlighten our readers on the subject.

The final meeting of the New York Florists' Club, previous to the vacation in July and August, will be held on the night of June 13. There should be a large attendance.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June 22-24, 1921.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel. Next annual meeting, will be held at St. Louis, June 20-21, 1921.

THE cotton crop is 66 per cent normal.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Bowen Seed Co. is a new concern here.

ALBERT DICKINSON and wife, Chicago, will spend the summer at Lake Mohonk, New York.

IT is reported efforts will be made to put grass and clover seeds, now free, on the dutiable list.

MOTOR costs of bringing French bulbs to Marseilles from Ollioules growing district will be reduced.

IT is said that the 10-cent packets in the commission box trade have not sold as freely as the 5-cent kind.

BURLAP is lower, 8-ounce being offered at about $3.60. Will someone tell the trade when to lay in next season's supply?

A SPECIAL from Frankfort to the Journal of Commerce says a big rise in the home price of potash is expected in Germany.

PRICE of bags at Chicago, June 8, American, 16 oz., $30.00 per bale, in bale lots or over; Railroads, 16-oz., $30.00; Crown, 12-oz., $23.00.

CALIFORNIA growers estimate the freesia crop will be better than last year, but with a reduced acreage and a continued scarcity of the larger sizes.

HERBERT HOOVER says: "Had the fertilizer industry known about the store of Chilean nitrates held during the war, it would be $30,000,000 to the good today."

VISITED CHICAGO: Frederick C. Gloeckner, formerly with the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., enroute to California, where he expects to locate.

BOARD OF TRADE—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, June 8, were as follows: Timothy, $4.25 to $6.00 per 100 pounds, Red Clover, $10.00 to $16.00.

LANSING, MICH.—A sales executive of the Olds Motor Works, returned from a trip through "farmerland," says farmers are beginning to feel more optimistic and are spending money more freely.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—In an opinion recently rendered by Harvey H. Cluff, Attorney General, it is stated that any agreement which seed dealers may print on the label of a seed package, or on their invoices, disclaiming responsibility for the germination, purity or even variety of the seeds sold, cannot relieve them from liability for violation of the Utah pure seed law. Full details will appear in a later issue.

JOHN C. BODGER, the well known California seed grower, is producing cut flowers for the Los Angeles market, growing aspidistras for the plant trade and coquetting with miscellaneous bulbs as Pacific Coast crops for profit.

THE 1920 census of manufacturers of the United States issued by the Department of Commerce shows fertilizer production in 1919 was $278,610,000 from 599 establishments, compared with $153,196,000 and 784 manufacturers in 1914.

PEAS for canning are grown principally in Wisconsin, New York and Michigan. In 1920 Wisconsin had 46,406 acres, New York 18,854, Michigan 8,527. Wisconsin produces over one-half of the canning peas of the United States.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., and Mrs. Brown opened their summer house at Northport Point, Mich., with a house party over Memorial Day. Mr. Brown is on record as having contributed $500 to the new Y. M. C. A. building.

THE Woolworth stores on State street, Chicago, have been making liberal displays of D. M. Ferry & Co.'s large 10-cent seed packets. This is in great contrast to by-gone days when such department stores displayed three packets at a price of five cents for the lot.

THE Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., says that generally speaking, seed crops have gone into the ground under fairly favorable conditions and rather earlier than usual. The acreage has been materially reduced in nearly all lines as compared with recent years.

THE S. F. Leonard Seed Co., 226-230 Kinzie St., Chicago, is moving its offices from the first to the second floor to give the clerical and packing forces much needed additional space. The firm occupies the entire building, 67x107 feet, five floors and basement and has extensive warehouses in the onion set and Wisconsin pea districts.

Southern Seedsmen's Association.

MEMPHIS CONVENTION, JUNE 20-21.

The third annual convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association will be held in Memphis, Tenn., June 20-21. A very interesting program has been arranged, which will include a number of timely papers, the election of officers and a barbecue. The seedsmen will meet for the first session on Monday morning, June 20 at nine o'clock. Hon. J. R. Paine, mayor of Memphis, will deliver the address of welcome, and will be followed by President R. B. Buchanan. The afternoon meeting will begin at two o'clock, and will be devoted to the presentation of papers, and the election of new members. On Tuesday morning, June 21, the organization will convene in executive session, and general business will be disposed of. On the afternoon of that day the barbecue will be held. Members will leave Memphis at 10:10 p. m. for St. Louis, Mo., where the annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association will take place, June 22-24.

The following are some of the papers that will be presented: "The Sweet Potato," by J. C. Holton, of the Mississippi Agricultural College; "Seed Legislation," by Herbert Bebb; "The Place of Plant Breeding by Commercial Companies," by Herbert J. Webber, Hartsville, S. C.; "Seed Analyzing," by Mr. Lacky, Department of Agriculture, Oklahoma City, Okla., and "The Relations of the Seedsmen to the Farmer," by Prof. Lloyd.

Iowa Seed Dealers' Association.

The annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association was held at Des Moines, Ia., June 1. The principal topic under discussion was the new state law and its application. E. L. Redfern, of the Iowa food and dairy commission, was present and offered suggestions and the co-operation of his commission with the seedsmen of the state in the enforcement and application of the new law. New members were admitted, and it was decided to hold a semi-annual session the latter part of September at Iowa State College, Ames.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: J. T. Hamilton, Cedar Rapids, president; W. H. Talbott, Osceola, vice-president; A. M. Eldridge, Shenandoah, secretary, and J. T. Hofler, Nora Springs, treasurer.

French Bulb Prices.

Prices asked for Narcissus Paper White by the Growers' Syndicate, M. Ordinaire, president, according to cable advises this week, remain the same as decided upon the end of April. Other kinds, such as Narcissus Grand Soleil d'Or, white Roman hyacinths and lilium candidum, show no sign of a price decline, but rather a firmer tendency. It is believed here that the growers have been led to these high demands by operations of one or more Holanders who have established growing stations in the south of France, and as growers would profit by an advance in price of the crop harvested from the fields.

Six leading English seed and bulb dealers anounce in the Horticultural Trade Journal of England that they do not intend to purchase French bulbs at the high prices named by the French growers' syndicate in April.

New York dealers in French bulbs expect to have a second meeting, June 13.

Dutch Bulbs.

We have received the following regarding the Dutch bulb crop, dated May 20: "At present the outlook is for only a fair crop of all bulbs, such as hyacinths, tulips, crocuses and narcissi. The weather is still very dry and some tulips are ready to dig, which is too early. If we get rain soon, we may expect a little better crop of late tulips."

Crimson Clover Seed.

The outlook for domestic crimson-clover seed production this year is gloomy. Reports submitted by growers and shippers to United States bureau of markets indicate that the commercial supply of domestic seed of this crop will be even smaller than the 350,000-lb. crop of last year. The yield per acre in Maryland is expected to be only 30 per cent of normal and of 1920, or about 150 pounds. In Delaware a yield of 360 pounds is indicated. Harvesting began May 30, but no offers have been received by growers for their seed. In North Carolina, where considerable crimson-clover seed is usually harvested and sold in the chaff, a production 90 per cent normal and 75 per cent of last year is indicated by reports of decreased yield and acreage. Most of this seed is sold to farmers locally and in adjoining counties and the price does not follow very closely the market for clean seed. Growers are expecting $10 per 100 pounds in the chaff.

Canners' Prices.

The opening prices of the California pea packers have been announced; one new pack No. 2 petit pois, listed at $3; fancy melting, $2.55; fancy sifted, tender sifted, No. 10's, $7, and sifted $1.30; No. 10 fancy sifted, $8; sweet tender sifted, No. 10s, $7, and sifted 10s, $6.25. These prices are considerably lower than a year ago.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

THE outdoor irises, orchids of the flower garden, are making rapid strides in popularity.

THE largest elm in the United States is at Wethersfield, Conn. It is 30 feet in circumference, 97 feet high and 250 years old.

LEMON growers in California claim they are unable to market their product because of increased freight rates and orchardists invite visitors to help themselves.

HARVEY, ILL.—Students of the Harvey high school visited Vaughan's nurseries at Western Springs, May 31, and were taken on a tour of inspection through the establishment.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, and wife have returned from Annapolis, Md., where they attended the graduation of their son from the naval academy.

JOHN WATSON, secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, says that J. C. Vaughan is the only living member who attended the first convention of that organization at Chicago in 1876.

GENEVA, N. Y.—The William Smith park, comprising 27 acres, and formerly owned by the W. & T. Smith Co., who used it to display ornamental nursery stock, was sold recently for building purposes. The Smith company had generously offered it to the public for park purposes, but the authorities failed to grasp the opportunity.

Azalea Ledifolia Alba Dutiable.

The board of general appraisers in a claim in protest that Azalea ledifolia alba should be classified as nursery stock under paragraph 211 of the tariff act of 1913 has held that congress in specifying Azalea indicate in paragraph 210 in a way excluded all other azaleas and the claim of 15 per cent ad valorem was sustained.

Northwest Peony and Iris Society.

The Northwest Peony and Iris Society, in conjunction with the American Iris Society, held its second annual show at Minneapolis, Minn., June 2-3. In spite of an unfavorable season the display was successful in every way. The exhibits consisting entirely of irises were placed in the show rooms of the Pence Automobile Co., Hennepin avenue and Eighth street. There were about 5,000 blooms on exhibition. Some of the better varieties displayed were Lard of June, White Knight, Pallida Dalmatica, Fairy Ma Mie, Mme. Cherau, Glory of Hillegom, Jacquesiana, Monsignor and many others.

The sweepstakes prize, a silver cup, was awarded to Prof. Arny of the University of Minnesota farm school. W. E. Freyer, Mantorville, Minn., had a large display of seedlings and Miss Grace Sturtevant, Wellesley, Mass., exhibited irises of the Avalon type.

American Peony Society.

The eighteenth annual exhibition of the American Peony Society, to be held in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, will take place at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 18-19. The business meeting which will precede the banquet, will be held Saturday evening, June 18, in the banquet room of Horticultural hall. Members who intend to be present at the annual dinner of the society will kindly notify the local committee, consisting of A. H. Fewkes, Winthrop H. Thurlow and Harry A. Norton, as soon as possible on Saturday or before.

Headquarters will be maintained at Horticultural hall, due to the fact that there is no hotel conveniently situated to the place of exhibition. The hall can be reached by taking any outward bound Huntington avenue car, either at Park street subway station, Boylston street, or Huntington avenue. The following hotels are located within easy reach of these cars: Hotel Lenox, Copley Plaza, Hotel Vendome, Hotel Brunswick, Hotel Touraine and the Parker house.

The premium list is now ready and copies may be had on application to A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., or W. P. Rich, Horticultural hall, Boston.

The judges for the show are as follows: Harry Norton, Ayers Cliff, Quebec; Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.; A. H. Scott, Front and Market streets, Chester, Pa.; Prof. A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y.; James Boyd, Haverford, Pa., and R. T. Brown, Queens, L. I.

Netherlands Trade in Nursery Stock.

According to United States Consul General George E. Anderson, Rotterdam, the nursery and plant trade in the Netherlands shows some of the depression to be noted in other lines, but on the whole the condition is considered satisfactory. Shipments to various countries so far this season have been lighter than usual, but trade prospects for the coming season are more promising. Exports to the United States have been small compared with last year, although in value the trade in 1920 was not up to the standard of the year before. The trade last year compared with that of 1919 was as follows:

Articles	1919	1920
Growing flowers and plants	$ 131,314	$ 65,461
Trees and shrubs	1,257,836	1,009,954
Fruit trees	7,791	43,644
Other plants	464,433	140,413
Total	$1,861,374	$1,319,472

Most of the decreased shipments of trees and shrubs, which include roses and similar plants, were due to the collapse in the trade with Germany, which fell from $249,396 in 1919 to $23,212 in 1920, but the exports to the United States also fell from $173,178 in 1919 to $47,664 in 1920. Shipments to almost all countries other than Great Britain fell off materially, but exports to Great Britain increased from $158,772 to $473,785. There was also a decrease in shipments of miscellaneous plants to all countries, but the decrease in shipments to the United States from $278,825 in 1919 to $35,075 accounted for most of the loss. Nearly all fruit trees, plants in pots and the like went to Great Britain and Belgium.

Exports in flower bulbs in 1920 showed a decrease compared to the value of the exports in 1919, but the decrease was in value rather than in volume and the United States showed an increase. The exports of flower bulbs, according to Dutch statistics, were as follows:

Destination	1919	1920
Germany	$ 580,610	100,236
Belgium	50,095	97,676
Great Britain	1,187,627	724,633
France	153,579	118,170
United States	2,119,482	2,219,676
Norway	422,910	317,362
Sweden	1,353,499	1,154,430
Denmark	746,104	450,011
Canada	18,162	126,690
All other	374,961	207,077
Total	$6,998,029	$6,515,961

Grape Phylloxera.

A quarantine against the importation of grape vines and protective measures for their inspection and fumigation are recommended by specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture as means of preventing the spread of the grape phylloxera in California. An extensive study of the life history of the insect has been made by specialists of the department, a report of which was recently published in department bulletin No. 903, "The Grape Phylloxera in California."

The methods recommended by the specialists are in force in a number of sections in the California grape districts. The grape phylloxera, according to the bulletin, is a native of the Mississippi valley and made its appearance on the Pacific coast among cultivated grapes planted about the missions as early as 1858. It has spread throughout the most of the grape districts in the state, and has caused such serious damage that many vineyards have had to be replanted two and three times. Though it is difficult to determine the loss caused by this pest, estimates place the destruction at about 75,000 acres of grapes during the last 60 years.

Fruit Shortage Predicted.

The state agents of the bureau of crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, report that there will be a short fruit crop this year. The shortage will be fairly general east of the Rocky mountains, except in portions of Michigan, New York and New England. The reports refer particularly to stone fruits, such as cherries, plums and peaches, but also indicate that there will be a material shortage of apples and grapes, though not as extensive as the shortage of stone fruits. It is too early, the statisticians say, to make an estimate of the probable yield of blackberries and raspberries. With the shortage of stone fruits, it is expected that the fruit supply will be limited in many sections. While considerable frost damage has occurred in some parts of California, the general outlook for deciduous fruits on the Pacific slope is still regarded as good.

Trees of Great Age.

The New York Sun tells of a tree "said" to be living in Mexico, that is 6,000 years old. It is described as a cypress 36 feet in diameter. But there are really baobab trees in Africa credited with 4,000 years, and the big sequoias in California are given an age approximately 3,000 years. Yews in England are believed to be of equal age, with many oaks and elms known to be 800 years old.

Golden Yellow Sweet Peas

I have been asked, "Why dye peas when there are so many natural colors, tints and shades?"

First—There is no real yellow, apricot or burnt orange pea supplied by nature.

Second—People like these colors and shades and buy them repeatedly just as they do lavender, pink, etc.

Third—The greater the variety of colors offered the public, the more peas the retailer sells. Try it and see.

Fourth—The cost is almost nil. One quart will dye about 2,500, or one cent per bunch of 25.

Fifth—Usually one needs white or very light shades of pink peas in quantity only occasionally, and at other times they can be dyed.

Sixth—In design work, such as the "Eastern Star," you need yellow flowers that stand up well. At such times, yellow carnations are of special service, and it would not pay you to grow natural yellow carnations throughout the season.

Seventh—Try yellow, apricot or burnt orange peas with deep blue or purple in corsage work, etc.

Some, in making trial order, write as if they expect to be "skinned."

All such are going to be agreeably surprised. If I were not sure it will do just as I claim so I will get repeat orders, I should never offer it for sale at all. I think life entirely too short for one to be anything else than on the square. It is not practicable to offer free samples, and the dollar trial will not likely pay expenses while I am convincing you.

Some seem to think the flowers are dipped, so the dye is on the outside. We fill jelly glasses three-fourths full of dye solution and stand stems of fresh cut peas in this in the evening, leaving them thus overnight. In the morning, lift them out, rinse, dry off stems and stand them in fresh water as though just cut. In a few minutes they may be bunched without staining the hands. But should you get the dye on the hands, it may be quickly renewed by a little borax and water, or even soap lather soon takes it off.

Price, sufficient to make one quart, $1.00, prepaid. Six for $5.00.

ATHENIA, N. J.—Wm. M. Hunt & Co. have purchased the strawberry plant growing business of C. Kevitt.

THE new Municipal market for truckers on Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, was opened the last week of May.

BARBERS in Iowa are said to be charging double price for shaving farmers, whose faces are twice as long as usual, owing to the low price of corn.

VINITA, OKLA.—Plans are being made to form a truck growers' organization of farmers in this vicinity. Strawberries will be planted for fall and next year's crops.

THE standard barrel of the United States should contain 7,056 cubic inches, with 28½-inch staves and 17¼-inch heads, head material not thicker than 2/5 of an inch.

LABOR, leaving the cities, is flocking back to the farms, and by mid-summer the normal supply of farm workers, about 6,000,000, should be available, according to Chief Murray, of the United States Department of Agriculture, bureau of crop estimates.

BOSTON, MASS.—Blodgett's Potato Exchange has been formed here. Subscribers are to pay $2.75, as representing one bushel of seed potatoes at the present market, and in return will receive at their doors next fall, four bushels of eating potatoes for each bushel of seed paid for. Sounds like a Ponzi potato plan.

PERISHABLE vegetables and fruits, brought successfully from Chile for the first time by refrigerated steamship, were received in New York recently. The 7,000 mile transportation was cheaper than from Chicago to New York by rail. Grapes, melons, tomatoes and prunes in the cargo are expected to spell competition for California.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, June 7.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $2 to 3; leaf lettuce, per box, 25 to 35 cents.

New York, June 3.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $1.50 to $4; cucumbers, 50 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, per basket, 75 cents to $3; radishes, 100 bunches, $1 to $3; tomatoes per pound, 10 to 25 cents.

Cabbage Heads and Profiteers.

Certain cabbage heads raised in Texas were sold by the producers for $7 a ton recently. They were shipped to Chicago at a total expense of $26.30 a ton, which included the freight, icing and federal tax charges. Then other heads went to work over the cabbage heads, which were sold to Chicago consumers at the rate of $140 a ton.

The actual cost on the tracks in Chicago was $33.30 a ton; sale price to Chicago people, $140 a ton—20 times what the farmers got for them.

The Railway Age printed the facts, and the Railway Age declares the commission merchants "among the most remorseless profiteers in the country." Somewhere on the way from farmer to consumer the price of a ton of Texas cabbage was boosted from $7 to $140. That's going some for cabbage heads!

Market Review of Fruits and Vegetables

In the review of the produce markets throughout the United States by the Department of Agriculture for the week of May 22-28, prices for fruits and vegetables show a decline, with certain exceptions, due to heavy receipts and a desire to dispose of stock before Memorial Day. Southern grown new potatoes because of a weakened demand, declined from $2 to $3.50 per barrel, in some centers, selling at the end of the week at $3.50 to $5.50 per barrel. Old potatoes decreased from 15 to 50 cents, per 100 pounds. The supply of sweet potatoes was good, with prices irregular, a decline of 25 cents a bushel noted in the west with an increase of the same amount in the east. Apple shipments have been the heaviest in years, a total of 103,761 cars having been rolled this season. Values slumped from 25 to 50 cents per box. A noticable falling off in onion shipments was observed, which had no effect, however, on prices which declined. Strawberries slumped in value, the closing price being eight to 18 cents per quart. A good call was had for watermellons, with a moderate increase in price. Cantaloupe values were steady, with lower prices noted in peaches, cabbages, tomatoes, lettuce and cucumbers, due to the increased shipments.

Market News Aids Distribution.

Market gluts are one of the principal causes of loss in marketing farm products, especially those of a highly perishable nature, such as soft fruits and vegetables, which cannot be held until condition of supply and demand adjust themselves. Avoidance of these ruinous conditions is possible in large measure by more careful and widespread distribution, but all products are not marketed most advantageously by the same system, and the marketing plan varies somewhat in different areas from season to season.

With respect to the fruits and vegetables, and more especially those of high perishability, perhaps no more effective work in broadening distribution has been accomplished than that of the Imperial valley melon growers' and shippers' in co-operation with the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture. The department opens a temporary office at Brawley, Calif., at the beginning of the shipping season. By means of a large chart in the temporary office of the department, shippers are able to know the daily distribution of each day's shipments and diversions.

The information, in conjunction with the telegraphic report compiled by the department's representatives in the east and telegraphed to its Brawley office, showing receipts, prices and conditions in from 20 to 25 of the major markets of the country, enables the shipper to have before him each day a complete picture of the market situation with respect to melons, and to distribute his shipments accordingly. There is no discrimination—every shipper has full knowledge of the entire situation. The day has passed when one shipper has advantage over another by reason of more complete information.

Widespread and accurate distribution cannot be accomplished without dependable information as to conditions of supply and demand.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Mrs. Feierabend, widow of the late H. Feierabend, whose death was recorded in our issue of June 4, will continue the extensive business of carnation growing.

Ageratum Fraseri

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅞ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Office Housecleaning.

Nearly all growing establishments at the present day have what is termed the office, and during the busy season, in many places, but little attention is given to keep it in a tidy condition. Now is the time, after the carnations are housed and before the fall work commences, to have a thorough cleaning up of the office and workroom and get them in readiness for the coming season. Get all the papers filed away in proper shape and fix up all accounts as far as possible, and thereby get rid of much of the worry and trouble. Clean up the workroom and give it a good coat of paint, and straighten out the supplies. If the stock of baskets has grown dirty, get a little gold paint and give them a coat of this, which will certainly make them more attractive than the dingy supplies too often seen hanging on the walls or standing around. The florist too seldom appreciates how the customer likes to trade in a clean, up-to-date place, and often endeavors to excuse the dirty appearance by remarking: "It is impossible where so much dirt is handled to keep the place clean." Such a one is only fooling himself. The present-day customers, of whom many are ladies, know better; they see other places that are kept neat and clean, and they cannot be imposed upon with such tales. Now is the time to get everything shipshape for the fall and winter trade.

Delphiniums.

This perennial has become quite a popular cut flower for summer use and is very decorative and showy. Those that have a stock can increase the plants of the better varieties by propagation at this time. When the plants bloom, those that produce the best spikes and are of the best colors should be marked. After the blooms are cut the small growths that break from the stem are very easily rooted. Prepare a bed in a shaded frame and insert the cuttings, watering heavily when first put in. They will need frequent syringing during the hot weather and will root in three or four weeks, when they can be either potted or planted in a frame where they can be given attention. As soon as well established they can be planted in their permanent location, but should be given a little protection during the first winter by throwing a little old straw or some such material over them.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the most useful perennials for the fall is the Anemone japonica. It blooms at a time when flowers are very scarce, and if planted where it can be protected from the early frosts, will produce quantities of bloom that can be made of use in all classes of floral work. The successful blooming of this plant depends much upon its summer culture. If the season is dry, it will require constant watering, in fact, a good soaking. Is is a good plan to place the hose in a bed of this and let the water run until the ground is thoroughly wet, and do this as often as may be required. It will amply repay in the long strong shoots, full of blooms, that will be produced in the fall. The florist not possessing a good stock of this beautiful perennial should procure some of it and plant a bed for fall cutting.

Pansies.

For winter blooming the seed of pansies should be sown early. Procure a strain of seed that will produce large flowers, and unless they are to be grown in considerable quantities mixed colors are to be preferred. To obtain plants enough for winter blooming it will be better to plant the seed in flats and place them in a cool, shady location in the house, where they are much more easily cared for than out in the open. If such a location is not to be had, they can be sown in a cold frame and a sash that is quite heavily shaded placed over them until the plants begin to grow. As soon as large enough they should be planted in a cold frame until the bench is made ready, about the middle of September, in the house. The soil for winter growing should be good, and of the richest, in order to obtain large flowers, and the house in which they are planted should be maintained at a cool temperature, about 45 degrees at night, after settled fall and winter weather commences. Pansies are not, as a rule, troubled much with insect pests, but sometimes in the fall, in the houses, they are attacked by green fly and they are quickly checked in their growth if the aphis gets a good hold upon them. A careful watch should be maintained, and if they are found to be infested with aphis, constant spraying with nicotine solution will keep the insects down.

Compost Pile.

The extra help that is so often employed during the spring trade can be utilized for a few days before they are let go, in getting together a good compost pile, and there is no better time of the year than the present to do this. The sod can be taken off now after the mowing with no great amount of grass upon it, and if stacked at this time, the warm summer days will soon rot the sod and make the pile fine and mellow. So many growers will spend their money for coal and labor and skimp on that most necessary thing for good production, the soil upon which the plant depends for its culture, and again put the matter off until the fall, when the days are cold, the soil too often full of moisture, and the hauling poor, which makes the work more expensive, and in the end, not having as good an article for the succeeding year. It is not necessary to stack the manure with the pile at this time, but if ground bone is to be used, it is better to sprinkle it into the pile now. Bone dissolves slowly and the earlier it is incorporated in the soil the better, and it also helps the rotting of the sod. Take advantage of the slack time with both the men and teams and get the compost pile up at once.

Bougainvilleas.

The plants of bougainvillea that are through blooming should be cut back into shape and potted in preparation for the next season's growth. Much depends upon the summer care of all hard-wood stock if nice specimens are to be grown. They should be plunged outside in a frame or placed in full sun in a light airy house. Outside culture is far preferable for all this class of stock in order that a good strong growth, well furnished with foliage, may be assured. Be sure that they never get too dry. The great danger of all hard-wooded stock is letting it dry out, for it does not show it as quickly as the softer growing plants, but the check is more severe and the plants seldom fully recover from it. The young stock rooted earlier should be placed in a similar location, and kept well pinched back into shape, until enough shoots have been obtained to insure a good shapely plant, when they can be allowed to grow freely, but any extra strong leaders are better cut back during the season. Any chance flowers that show should be picked off at once, that a good strong stocky plant may be obtained and the strength all retained for that purpose.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Julius Rieck, 4658 N. Bryant avenue, suffered a loss estimated at $5,000 by fire, on June 10, many plants in his greenhouses being destroyed.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

While there are still a goodly number of weddings, the rush is past and the irregular business of summer will soon set in. This falling off of trade does not troube the up-to-date progressive florist, who is prepared for this period of little demand and at the same time encourages and makes the most of his opportunities. Men who do not look for business are pretty certain not to find it; they accept the dull times of July and August as a matter of course and these florists think it is useless to make a display, now that people are all out of town, and nobody wanting flowers they accept the loss and keep expenses down to bare maintainence.

The live dealer does not figure this way however. His plan is to keep his shop at all times attractive with sufficient seasonable stock on hand to meet the ordinary demand and in this way encourage and increase the volume of business. Showy outside flowers make very attractive window displays at this time. Larkspur, hydrangea arborescence, gaillardia, coreopsis and herbaceous phlox, are comparatively cheap and will make effective decorative effects. Neatly printed show cards with the name of each variety and one of good size with the inscription "Garden Flowers" will make people halt for a minute to see what it all means. The value of the printed card in the window can not be over estimated as it features and puts life and vim into an otherwise commonplace decoration.

The street front of the store must be kept attractive, which if properly looked after gives a live, always ready for business appearance that counts heavily in the transient trade. Where there is a broad pavement there is nothing more decorative than well-shaped dwarf evergreens in painted tubs. These placed in a row close to the building under the window have a fresh vigorous appearance that is sure to attract attention. So many shops have such an outside, forlorn appearance with their displays of passe bedding plants and other unsalable stock, which condition has come on so gradually that it is not noticed by the proprietor and the stock is carried in and out each day until it is positively worthless. Every morning it should be someone's duty to see that the front of the store is all right and sure to make a good impression on the passers-by.

A requisite for the summer trade is a line of light wooden boxes in which to pack the cut flower box that has to go out of town. Boxes packed for even two or three hours in this warm weather should be iced, which is not practical without the protection of the outside wooden case. Even these should be heavily wrapped in paper, which keeps the heat out and prevents the ice from melting. Boxes of flowers should always be given a light sprinkle and then turned up to run off any surplus water. Many such packages have reached their destinations in a delapidated condition from neglect of this precaution.

Are you featuring the telegraph service in its relation to tourists? There is an opportunity for considerable business in this direction. "Surprise your tourist friends on their birthday or other anniversary with flowers delivered to any city in the United States by the Florists' Telegraph Delivery," is a good window card. Every order taken for such delivery is new business and brings the store into greater prominence. The business will not come of itself however; it must be brought to the attention of the public all the time, and will before long become the store's best asset.

Fancy leaved caladiums are one of the most decorative plants for the summer window, the little dwarf Argyrites with its white mottled foliage can often be used to good advantage in large funeral wreaths the whole plant being set in with mossed roots keeping it fresh after the flowers have wilted.

A dollar in the bank is worth two on the books and it is well to get the accounts collected up as closely as possible before the customer gets away. The modern way of doing business is to as far as possible shorten credits and have all transactions on a cash or 30 day basis.

Now is the time to plan and arrange for the vacations of the various employes. With the dates of the weeks settled well in advance, each has his or her pleasure time to look forward to and enjoy in its anticipation.

Summer Business.

Many florists consider the months of July and August as drawbacks on the year's business, a dead weight to carry and creating a deficit which has to be made up from the profits of the balance of the year. The man who expects nothing is very rarely disappointed and the retailer who is satisfied that this summer period will show a loss, can generally prove it by his ledger. The experience of many in the trade, however, is that this surmise is a great mistake, as with the proper bid for seasonable business and use of the store's force in the preparatory work of the coming year, not only is the deficit made up but an inventory of the stock produced will show as well, a balance for the right side of the ledger.

As a matter of course the vacation months are the dullest of the season but that is no reason for giving up and practically going to sleep on account of a few dull days. There are not so many customers, but those who do call should find a cool inviting store and a pleasant welcome, that is in itself refreshing and conducive to good business. The summer setting should be completed from the street front and show windows to the interior. The outside appearance should always be spick and span in its well painted exterior, its fresh awning if any, its wealth of color in the flower boxes on the cornice over the window, and the pavement tubs of evergreens underneath. The windows should always contain something so attractive that people will stop to observe.

A few white lattice screens made with ordinary planed lath, painted white, decorated with fresh green oak branches in jars of water, which are hidden behind the screens will make a good background against which can be displayed vases of garden flowers such as herbaceous phlox, gladioli, hollyhocks, larkspurs, hydrangeas, etc. Green and golden privet branches also make showy foliage and are most useful in backing up sprays and clusters. Fresh hemlock is also a green that can be used to advantage in flower and decorative work. There should always be a jar or two of Easter lilies in stock, cut as they are now in bud, they last quite a while and like few other flowers are of the same standard in summer as in winter. Water lilies in a miniature pond in the window or shallow bowls in the store are seasonable and attractive.

The principal work to prepare for at this season, is funerals, which at times taxes the facilities of the store to the utmost. Preparatory measures will include a stock of mossed wreaths in all sizes, made up prepared magnolia and oakleaf wreaths, both crescent and full round. These with the addition of fresh flowers can be quickly made into very acceptable designs. Frequently in summer, flowers become very scarce; roses are cut tight, heavy rains spoil the sweet peas and other outdoor stock, orchids are only cut as ordered and there are often transportation delays that are very annoying. Flowers should be at once sought after as soon as the orders are taken, and when it is found the stock on hand is not sufficient, roses that are tight one day can be developed overnight to be of double value the next, and there is great advantage in having the stock on hand the day before, particularly when early trains are to be met to make delivery.

TELEGRAPH SERVICE.

The telegraph service should be featured in connection with the resort and tourist business. Many, for various reasons would like to surprise their friends at distant points with flowers if they knew this to be possible. It is a good feature to exploit during the summer and should be made the text for a leaflet, that would be received with interest by the store's customers. A neatly printed card extolling and explaining this service should have a permanent place in both shop and window.

Considerable business can be worked up with high class restaurants and hotels in providing flowers in small vases for their dining tables. Gladiolis and asters in season are good flowers for this purpose and can be furnished two or three times a week at prices that appear low for the service. Gladioli are at times very plentiful and can then by extensive display on the street front, together with a price card, be moved in quantity.

Flower Store Arrangement.

Address by R. Irving Gresham, Atlanta, Ga., delivered at the annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association at Memphis.

To my mind, a flower store, as all other retail stores, should have a location where the most people pass during the day and evening, in close proximity to the hotels and theatres. I prefer a corner store, where it is possible to have as much glass window space as you can. The store, by all means, should be level with the sidewalk, and I object to having even one step to make, approaching or going to the entrance door.

THE WINDOWS.

The windows should have the first consideration. Get as much glass front as it is possible to obtain, and I think a curved glass front in the windows, with the marble base, makes about the handsomest show you can get in your windows. The floors of the windows should be from 18 inches to two feet above the sidewalk. The flooring of the windows should be of tile, and put down in such a way as to drain. There should also be a water connection in each window for watering plants, arranging fountain displays, etc. There should also be electric sockets for connecting up electrical decorations, such as lighting pumpkins for Hallowe'en displays, etc.

The lighting effect in the windows should be of the best; have the lights concealed, using reflectors with high power lobes, so as to make the windows and the front as bright as you can; which at the same time, will light up the entire store front and show off your display to the best advantage.

In arranging a store front, where there is space for two windows, I prefer one large window and one smaller one, using the large space for decorative effects in the way of wedding scenes, Hallowe'en decorations, Thanksgiving arrangements, etc., and by having a window of this size, you can get beautiful rustic effects in the summer, with fountains and fish ponds, which, combined with birch and cork bark, make very cool and attractive displays. My reason for having the smaller window is to practically show nothing in it except choice arrangements of cut flowers. The advantage of the small window is, that you can combine different colors of velvet, ribbon, etc., with your general color scheme, and by doing this, you do not have such a quantity of cut flowers in the window, and thereby it enables you to keep most of your stock in the ice box. I think one of the most valuable assets to the flower store is the window display, and you cannot give your window too much attention and care.

When it comes to advertising, spend your money on your windows first, and let the newspapers, posters, folders, etc., come next. The advantage of strated to me more this fall than ever before. During our fair, we had a display of bulbs with attractive posters; box upon box of narcissi, etc., and by using baskets filled with tulips and hyacinths, and covering the entire floor with bulbs, we had a display which filled the entire window, and was six feet high in the back and center. We intermingled palms and ferns with the cork bark in making this feature, and we sold more bulbs than we ever have sold before, by far.

We also tried this big window out with a display of baskets. We happened to have three shipments coming from different firms, which were all practically of different designs and colorings, from the smallest tumbler basket to some receptacles six feet high. We arranged these baskets as well as we could, filling the entire window as full of them as we could get it. We also put two very attractive displays on each side of the store as you entered, and although these baskets were bought to carry us through the fall and Christmas, we have practically sold the entire amount.

The windows should have mirrors in the sides where possible, but the back should be left open, so that everything in the entire store can be seen.

THE ICE BOX.

Next to the windows, the ice box should be given the first consideration —in the same line as with a wedding decoration—the altar being the first attention and the bride's table the next. The ice box, the same as the windows, should have as much glass space as possible. It should be well lighted, with tile floor and with step elevations, so that the flowers may be arranged one vase above the other, so that each individual vase of flowers stands out separately and distinct from the other, and if possible, a reserve refrigerator should be maintained in the work room where the surplus flowers should be kept, and not crowded together in the main ice box. In displaying flowers in the box, I think that the new green willow, zinc-lined vases are decidedly the nicest thing of their kind that we have ever had to display our flowers in. It surprasses the old-time fibre jar, zinc, glass and the crockery vases, etc. They throw out the flowers, as a full background does all flowers. The vases are well regulated as to size, and are very substantial. The ice box should have mirrors in the back of it, the same as the sides of the windows.

THE STORE.

Planning the general arrangement of the store is a hard problem because the size of the store has a great deal to do with the general detail, but the arrangements should be such as to get the best display of the flowers in the store; and whoever plans the store should follow out some floral scheme. Arrange it in an Italian garden effect. Pergola effects, with columns, can be worked into most any store to good advantage, and with fancy iattice trimmings, you can get a garden effect background that adapts itself beautifully to the display of flowers. I am very much opposed to mirrors in the up-to-date flower shop, because the barber shops and Greek restaurants have worked mirrors overtime. In the case of my own store, I conceived the idea of a garden wall, which I had built all around the store in tapestry brick of a fancy design, which gave me the handsome effect which you might find in some of the gardens on our wealthy peoples' estates. This dull brick background throws out the flowers and plants to great advantage. In arranging the office in the store, I had a balcony built, and by having garden gates going through this brick wall, with a combination of pergola and balustrade. I was able to get an attractive background in the rear of the store, which afforded me the use of the balcony for office space, and room underneath same, for the assorting and packing of the flowers. Where the decorations of the store is carried out to an elaborate extent, I think a fountain arrangement of some attractive design helps to make the store more attractive, and is in keeping with floral features of different kinds. In arranging a fountain, see that it is well built, of good design, and that there is no leaking or splashing of water outside of it to keep the floor wet and dirty. The fountain should also be built with a view of combining plants with flowers to give an attractive decorative effect. In other words, the fountain should be like a show case in a store; to display your merchandise in the most attractive manner. To my mind, there is nothing so attractive in a flower shop as wicker furniture, upholstered in tapestry cushions. I also prefer baskets, stands and urns of willow, rather than crockery, jadinieres, etc.

PANSIES FOR THE SPRING TRADE.

WREATH OF ASTERS AND MAGNOLIA LEAVES.

The floor of the store should be of some attractive tile design, which can be easily cleaned, and of such color as the general scheme of the store decorations. The lighting effects in the store should be given careful consideration. Flowers, like jewelry, should have all the light obtainable, but the lighting effect should be of a light glow with shaded fixtures, so as not to let the bright electric globe itself come into contact with the eye. Where it is possible, the workroom should be separated from the store, as it is nearly impossible to keep the store clean where the making up of bouquets, designs, etc., is carried on in the store. A clean store and ice box should be a manager's hobby, and I think every store should have a maid to do nothing but see that the ice box is kept clean, the floor always swept and clean, and the fixtures and furniture in the store dusted and washed regularly. I also think that the office should not be on the main floor of the store, when it is in any way possible to have it on an adjoining floor or on a balcony, where there may be privacy for the bookkeepers, etc. There should be placed in the store, at some advantageous position, an attractive mirror arrangement of some kind, but not in a too conspicuous place, so that the customer may use it in pinning flowers on, etc.

WORK ROOM.

The workroom should be situated where there is as much daylight as possible to be obtained, and also well lighted, as this gives the designer the best advantage in combining the different flowers, ribbons, etc. It should also be large enough, where possible, to afford plenty of room for the workers, the shipping clerk, etc. There should be counters provided for the wirers, and also bins built for made-up shipping boxes, so that they may be had on a moment's notice.

In my own case, I have divided up my second floor into different rooms. I have my ribbon room, where all the ribbon, tulle, chiffon, etc., is stored. The stock is kept in glass cases on shelves, and you can see just what stock you have on hand at a minute's notice. I have another room where all the baskets, tumbler vases, etc., are kept; another one we call the glass room, for flower bowls, small glass vases, bud vases and novelty glassware. We have another room that we use for keeping general supplies, such as toothpicks, twine, match-sticks, etc.

On the next landing is where I store all of my shipping cases, cut-flower boxes, etc., where there is a separate bin made to hold every size box that we use, both in corrugated and cut-flower boxes. At the front of this floor, where there is ample light space, is our wire shop, which is also in a room to itself and separated from the other rooms.

I have my arrangements on the top floor similar to the workroom floor. This is given over to the decorators. They have one room where all of the decorative materials, such as electrical fixtures, candelabras, tall vases, urns for church work, lattice paneling, Japanese umbrellas and lanterns, and all articles of this class are stored. We have a separate room on this floor which we call the carpenter shop, where all the painting of baskets, etc., is done; the making of birch boxes, and this class of work.

All of these separate rooms throughout the building are under lock and key. The decorators are responsible for the decorating rooms. They see to it that the different articles are checked out and in, and are stored properly in their respective places. The wire man has his own key, and is responsible for the wire room. I also have a general stockkeeper who looks after the other rooms, keeping them locked at all times, and issues the different articles as they may be needed, and I hold him responsible for the stock in these different rooms. The basement of our store is given over as a stock room for the made-up wire work, heavy decorative materials, iron stands, and goods of this character.

The subject, "Flower Store Arrangement," is rather a hard one, as the location and size of the store has everything to do with the general arrangement, and every manager has to work out his store according to its size and location, but where there is a large building, with several floors and a basement, the above, as described, is my conception for the arranging of a store doing a large business. I have fitted up five stores since starting into business, and the arrangement has had to be different in each case, according to the size of the store and growth of the business.

THE CARNATION.

Summer Care of Field Plants.

Because of excessive heat and dryness, general throughout a wide area of the country, the conditions are not so favorable for the growth of the field plants as is the case in most seasons in the early part of June, and though the plants have made a good average growth they are not as large as they should be at this time, especially those that were planted late. Plants which were set out in April and got the benefit of several spring rains are very well established and able to withstand the hot, dry weather, but those that were late propagated and not very well branched when planted in the field are behind with their growth and must be encouraged in every way to make up their backwardness, or they will be small plants when needed for benching.

KEEP THE FIELD CLEAR OF WEEDS.

There is not any part of the grower's work that is more important than that of keeping down the weeds in the field. Whether the plants are backward or not, the weeds are bound not to be. Hot, dry weather just suits them, and unless attended to they will grow luxuriantly, to the detriment of the carnations or any other plants. The hand cultivator should be kept going continually, never allowing the surface soil to become baked. But avoid deep cultivation which will expose and dry out the roots of the plants, the purpose of the cultivator being to loosen up the top surface soil to form a fine mulch and conserve the moisture for the plant's roots.

While the use of the cultivator will keep a large number of weeds in check, it will not get them all and the man with the hoe must be brought into action. One who can use a hoe properly is a great help on any place, but how very few helpers we find that will give a little thought to the purpose of hoeing, their only idea seemingly being to get to the end of the field in the shortest possible time. Instead of getting out the weeds by the roots, they cover them over with the fine soil, so that in a few days the field is in a worse condition than it was before the hoe was put into it. It is a good qualification in any man to do work quickly when it is coupled with thoroughness, but working rapidly without the latter qualification does not accomplish very far reaching results. If the weeds are cleaned out thoroughly in a field of carnations during the month of June, while they are young in growth, there will be very little trouble from them during the balance of the season. Be very careful while hoeing not to draw the soil away from the plants so that the roots will be exposed.

TOPPING THE PLANTS.

Topping the plants is another important part of their care at this period of growth, and should be attended to on time, so the plants can be given every chance to make new growths and build a good foundation. A little observation of a shoot that has been allowed to extend out before being pinched, will find that the growth is heavier than the rest of the plant, indicating that it is pulling most of the plant's strength and if allowed to go on, the other parts of the plants will appear to be weaklings beside it, showing plainly how important it is to attend to the work of pinching back the growths on time.

In this article I have touched upon the work that seems to me to be very important in the field culture of carnations, which may seem trifling to the experienced grower. But I can assure the beginner in carnation raising that unless the different parts of the work therein mentioned are followed up closely, good results will not be obtained from the plants; and the satisfaction to every grower of having his field well cared for and in good trim more than pays for the extra care given them.

SUMMER CARE OF GREENHOUSE PLANTS.

We read in the trade press of more growers each year planting their carnation stock directly into the greenhouse benches, and not following the summer field culture at all. Some of the most prominent growers in different sections of the country are following this plan and obtaining the best of success. Some plant in raised benches while others plant in ground beds, and are equally successful.

The feasibility of indoor summer culture of carnation plants was thrashed out at nearly every session of the American Carnation Society some 15 years ago and was a very lively topic because it was against the general method of culture then followed. For a time we did not hear very much about it, but evidently this plan has come to the front again.

When following out the method of indoor culture, the stock should all be planted into its permanent quarters by June 15. This may mean sacrificing some flowers during June and early July, but unless the plants can be benched by the time mentioned so that good sized plants can be made by fall, it is better to follow field culture during the summer. After the stock is planted, the important parts of their care is the watering, topping and keeping the surface soil open. The plants will need watering only directly at their roots, until they have spread farther out into the soil. This keeps the soil fresh and sweet for the roots to work in. As regards the topping or pinching back of the growths, the same rule applies to the indoor grown stock as to the field plants to obtain good results. Under this method the work of topping must not be neglected during the summer growth.

The work of keeping the surface soil open is also of equal importance. Do not allow the surface to become baked or a green scum to form on it, but keep it well worked to allow the light and air to enter. Red spiders coming in through open doors and side ventilators must be guarded against by syringing freely every few days.

TAKING CARE OF OLD PLANTS.

The old plants still on the benches should be cleaned out as soon as they get beyond being profitable. Do not leave them to become breeding places for all kinds of insects. As they have finished their work, it is a good policy to clean them out and get the houses ready for new stock. Any repairing of benches can also be attended to, so that when the time comes for bringing in the plants from the field, all will be in readiness. C. W. JOHNSON.

Water Lily Gardens.

One of the striking features of a small yard, or when more elaborate, a beauty spot on the lawn, is the lily pond. This can be as small as 24 inches in diameter, as when made from a sunken half-barrel, or as large as desired when the construction is a cement lined pool. The depth necessary is 24 inches, 12 for good soil generously mixed with cow manure, with a two-inch layer of sand, and then filled within three inches of the top with water.

Nymphæas and other like lilies, as well as the lotus, can be successfully grown in half-barrel tanks buried in the ground. The lotus and hardy nymphæas can be planted as early as May 1, but many of the beautiful, more tender varieties should not be set out until after June 1, when the summer warmth is counted on to be continuous. It is not necessary to change the water, as the lilies like still, warm water and will not do well where the pond is continually fed with cold spring water.

Submerged aquatic plants are necessary to aerify the water. Anacharis canadensis gigantea and Cabomba viridifolia are good plants for this purpose; one to a tub of 24 inches will be sufficient. Two small goldfish are also necessary, as they destroy mosquito larvae and other insects. Water should be added occasionally to supply that lost by evaporation and keep the tank or pond well filled. Ground bone is a good stimulant, as is a little dried blood, the latter, however, given sparingly.

The water lily garden is in flower continuously from July 1 until frost, and is a constant source of delight. While it is possible to grow and flower lilies in half-barrels, results are more satisfactory if the pool is larger, six feet by three, or six by six, round, oval or rectangular. Its location must be in bright sunshine. Hardy nymphæas and nelumbiums will stand the winter, if so protected that the crowns of the plants are not frozen. It is best in shallow tanks to drain off the water and pack the space well with leaves and cover with boards to hold them in place. Tender varieties are best planted each season, as they have to be wintered in a greenhouse. Best results are secured from young plants.

Day flowering nymphæas open at sunrise and close at night. The night blooming sorts open out as the sun goes down. They are both desirable for cutting, the night blooming sorts showing beautifully under artificial light. Following is a list of the best standard varieties: Tender day-flowering nymphæas—Capensis, blue; Daubeniana, light blue; gracilis, white; Mrs. C. W. Ward, pink. Night-blooming tender nymphæas—Bissetii, large, rosy pink; dentata, white; Frank Trelease, crimson; rubra rosea, rosy red. Nelumbiums (lotus)—Alba grandiflora, white; kermesina, a rich rose pink; lutea, yellow.

Hardy nymphæas—Aurora, yellow, changing to red; gloriosa, deep rose; James Boydon, rosy crimson; alba, white; Marliacea chromatella, bright yellow; odorota minor, miniature white; pygmaea, miniature white, very free; tuberosa Richardsonii, splendid white.

Boston Spring Bulb Show, 1922.

The Massachussetts Horticultural Society announces an exhibition of spring bulbs and other flowering plants, with Holland bulbs the special feature, to be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, in March, 1922. The preliminary schedule now being mailed to prospective exhibitors is sent out early so that growers may be informed of the varieties required and may provide the bulbs called for. A final schedule will be prepared later and will include other classes. Awards amounting to $6,000 will be offered at this exhibition. Copies of the premium list may be obtained from Wm. P. Rich, secretary, Massachussetts Horticultural Society, Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass.

It is the intention of the committee on prizes and exhibitions to give competitors reasonable latitude in the depth of pans used. They may use their discretion as to pots or pans but the diameter must comply with the schedule.

Among the features of the show will be two spring bulb gardens, one open to amateurs only, and the other to commercial growers. The garden open to amateur competition will cover 300 square feet, and pansies, daisies or other hardy spring-flowering plants, or hardy shrubs or evergreens may be used as accessories. Two awards will be given in this class, the first prize consisting of a gold medal and $200, and the second prize, $200. The garden for commercial growers will cover 500 square feet, the same accessories being permitted. The first prize will be a gold medal and $300, and the second, $300.

Two prizes will be offered of $100 and $50 for the best exhibits of six 12-inch pans of hyacinths in six distinct varieties, one kind in each pan. For a collection of single early tulips consisting of 12 distinct varieties in 10-inch pans, awards of $50 and $25 will be made. A competition open to amateur growers only, with prizes of $50 and $25, consists of a collection of Darwin or breeder tulips, six varieties in 10-inch pans, one distinct kind in each pan. For a display of single narcissi, 12 distinct varieties, one 10-inch pan of each, awards of $50 and $25 will be given. Many other classes are included in the schedule, and with the liberal prizes offered, a successful show is anticipated.

National Flower Growers' Association.

OHIO DISTRICT.

In addition to George Asmus, Chicago, Herman P. Knoble, of Cleveland, has been secured to deliver an address at the first annual meeting of the Ohio district to be held at Columbus, June 21. His subject will be "Cost Systems for the Average Grower." During the past three years Mr. Knoble has made an exhaustive study of that subject and is well qualified to talk from the standpoint of an expert. A few years ago he headed a small group of business men that took over one of the old greenhouse establishments in Cleveland. His first step on assuming control was to call in the help of expert accountants and establish a cost system, so that today he knows what each department is producing, the cost of operating and the possible profit or loss for any given period. In other words, he knows what each plant costs him from the time it is put in the ground until it reaches the customer. It is largely through the development of this accurate system of costs that Mr. Knoble ascribes his success as a grower.

Other topics to be brought up at the meeting are "The Co-operative Buying of Supplies," "Legislative Protection," "Credits," "Standardizing the Grading of Cut Flowers and Plants," etc. Committees will be appointed on these subjects and plans made to carry on the active work of the association throughout the year.

TOLEDO MEETING.

An enthusiastic session was held by the Toledo section on June 8 at the greenhouses of Schramm Bros., 1311 Cherry street, Vice-President Wm. Kreuger in the chair. Many of the members present signified their intention of attending the Columbus session of the state organization on June 21. After their return another meeting of the Toledo section will be arranged for and plans made to commence a membership drive for the association in this city and vicinity. President Carl Hagenberger, W. Mentor and Secretary L. C. Vinson, Cleveland, were present.

The Cincinnati section has issued an interesting preliminary report "On the Grading of Flowers and Plants, and Upon a Method to Establish Costs in the Greenhouse."

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

New regulations for the licensing of various businesses in the District of Columbia are being sought by the district commissioners to meet changes which have come into conditions within the last few years. A special commission has been appointed to study the question, and to make recommendations for such changes as it may find necessary. It is believed that any changes which may be made in the license law will be in the nature of upward revision of fees, since it is felt that business in Washington has increased greatly since the present regulations were promulgated and that profits have increased to an extent which enables the proprietors of business to pay larger fees. It has been suggested, for instance, that the profits of drug stores have increased to such an extent as to enable operators of such establishments to pay a license fee of $50 per annum, instead of $6 as at present.

Washington florists who have vaults in their cellars extending under the sidewalk in front of their place of business will be taxed upon such vaults, under the decision just rendered by the United States Supreme Court in the appeal of local merchants from a recent act of congress providing for a vault space tax. The suit was brought on the ground that permits to construct vaults were in such form as to create in each by contract a vested right of property in the vault on the street of which the owner would be deprived without due process of law if they were required to pay the rental tax. It is provided by the building regulations that such vaults shall be abandoned should the space be needed for public and improvement. The Supreme Court, however, held that the merchants are mere licensees and upheld the validity of the tax.

Post office officials are watching with interest the results of an experiment now being conducted in Washington, the success of which will completely revolutionize the method of collecting letters now followed in the large cities. The business center of the city has been designated as a "quick collection" section, and collections of mail from the letter boxes are made every 40 minutes by special messenger, who takes his load to the city post office, where a special force of clerks sort the mail and dispatch it without delay. As a result of this "quick collection" service a great saving in time of delivery is affected, amounting to as much as a day in mail for distant points. In addition, it has induced the deposit of mail during the day, instead of its being held over until the close of business, and has enabled the post office greatly to reduce its night force. Success of the plan in Washington will be followed by extension of the service to other large cities.

Chicago Pageant of Progress.

MUNICIPAL PIER, JULY 30-AUGUST 14.

Advertising means factory orders; factory orders mean jobs, and jobs mean fewer unemployed workman and no necessity of bread lines and free lodging houses such as many cities of the United States have found it necessary to establish.

That is the theory on which Mayor Thompson and a large group of Chicago's biggest business men are working in establishing here a great annual business exposition, to be known as the Pageant of Progress Exposition, which will have its first presentation from July 30—August 14, on Chicago's $5,000,000 municipal pier, swept by cool breezes in the hottest summer weather, and in itself one of the city's biggest attractions. The two great upper decks of the pier, each a great exhibition hall 67 x 2,340 feet, without a post to obscure the view, are now being arranged in sections where the products of the city will be shown to the tremendous crowds that are expected.

Among the industries that will be represented in a big way in the exposition will be the furriers, the florists, the automobile and allied lines, which have taken two complete sections of the exposition (each exhibit hall is divided into eight sections of equal size), shoe manufacturers, advertising and paper products manufacturers, furniture manufacturers and distributers, office appliance manufacturers, building material and real estate men, milk distributers, ice cream manufacturers, public utilities, dry goods, chemicals, machinery, beverages and practically every line of business.

All the exhibits will be educational. An educational committee headed by David Kinley, Ph.D., LL.D., president of the University of Illinois, and comprising scientists from all the great educational institutions of the middle west, is co-operating with the men in charge of the industrial exhibits. Not only will the finished products be shown, but also the raw materials and the various processes through which they pass before they are ready for retail distribution. Mayor Thompson has insisted from the first that the exposition be 75 per cent business and only 25 per cent of amusement, but that 25 per cent has already developed into the greatest entertainment programme that has been seen in Chicago since the world's fair of 1893.

A four-day's programme of speed boat races is being arranged by Sheldon Clark, commodore of the Chicago Yacht Club. The races will be run over a two-and-one-half mile course laid out just north of the pier and south of the outer breakwater, so that the boats will be in full view of the spectators throughout the races, and the course is so sheltered by the breakwater that nothing but a northeast wind amounting to a gale could prevent their being run. Such a gale is not likely in August. Some of the fastest speedboats in America have already been entered. Detroit, Mich., Toronto, Ont., and Milwaukee, Wis., are building boats to compete, and will face "Miss Chicago," a boat now being constructed by a syndicate of Chicago business men to win the speedboat championship of the United States for the city. Mayor Thompson headed the syndicate list with a subscription of $1,000, and Chris Smith of Algonac, Mich., the best known boat builder in America, now has "Miss Chicago" under construction.

CHORUS OF 10,000 VOICES TO SING.

A great chorus of 10,000 voices, to sing at the pier daily, is being arranged by a committee of which Milton G. Severinghaus is chairman. Grand opera singers will be soloists, and effects of unusual beauty will be obtained at the evening concerts by placing 1,000 singers on each of the six gunboats that will come here for the naval manoeuvres in connection with the pageant, and ranging the gunboats in a semicircle about a barge on which is stationed a 200-piece band. At a signal from a conductor with an electric lighted baton the band will play and the great chorus will sing patriotic and popular airs. The naval pageant in itself will be a show worth going miles to see. Secretary of the Navy Denby has ordered the naval militia of the states bordering on the Great Lakes, to rendezvous at the pier for their annual summer practice cruise. They will bring six gunboats, several subchasers and smaller craft, and several thousand sailors. Capt. D. W. Wurtsbaugh, commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, will send several hundred of his boys to camp at the pier, during the exposition, and in addition to the naval manoeuvres and sham battles they will feature, they will participate in evening parades through Chicago.

Aeroplanes from the army, the navy and the United States mail service will participate in flights, carrying both passengers and freight, to show the latest developments in aviation. An unusual feature will be races between aeroplanes and homing pigeons supplied by the pigeon fanciers of Chicago. In one of these events carrier pigeons will race with an aeroplane, an automobile and a motorcycle, probably between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Business men's associations in the outlying districts of the city, are co-operating in the Pageant of Progress Exposition by demonstrations of their own, at which they are choosing neighborhood queens, who will compete at the exposition for the honor of being crowned Queen of the Pageant, at a great ball to be held on Chicago Night. The young woman who will act as the queen will be chosen by a committee of Chicago's best known artists and sculptors. Great rivalry between the various neighborhoods has already developed.

San Francisco.

TRADE IN SATISFACTORY CONDITION.

Since Memorial Day, trade has been going along in a satisfactory way. The wedding demand keeps things moving along nicely, and aids the market to clean up in these days of heavy supply. One is impressed with the fine quality of the roses being received. The foliage is splendid and the flowers and stems all that could be wished for. Mrs. Chas. Russell is quite plentiful with prices about the same as last week. Butterfly is now coming in freely and is a popular variety. Prima Donna is a good seller. Columbia is not in large supply and cleans up well. Mrs. Aaron Ward is fine just now and finds a ready market. Excellent Hadleys are to be seen everywhere. Cecil Brunner is another variety that is plentiful. Very few white roses are to be had. From outdoors we have plenty of Ulrich Brunner, but most of the offerings remain poor. Wholesalers report that rose shipments still continue to go out of this market to other cities. Carnation growers must be well pleased with the prices they have been receiving all season. At this date the acreage cut is bringing $4 to $6 per 100. Many buyers complain at the prices asked, but all stock is disposed of early in the day. There is a large cut of Bride gladioli and prices have dropped to a low figure for this stock. Some good red dahlias are being offered and bring the grower $4 per 100. Large flowering gladioli are firm at $1.50 per dozen. Fine long stems and large flowers are the rule for all this stock. Much complaint is heard among the retailers of the poor quality of sweet peas this season. Notwithstanding this the cut is being sold at $1 per dozen. This stock is being grown by Japanese growers and it is very evident that they are not paying very much attention to their stock seed. Lily of the valley is now in good supply with the demand excellent. Peonies are scarce. Giganteum lilies are still in good supply with the call somewhat limited. Snapdragon is not so plentiful as formerly and good stock finds a ready market. Larkspur is in good supply and reasonable. Scabiosa caucasica is a perennial that seems to be in good demand at all times. Flowering eucalyptus is also meeting with much favor. There seems to be a fairly good cut of cattleyas, which sell well. Rhododendrons are about the only flowering plant available at present. Ferns and greens of every description enjoy a fine sale.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

There was a large attendance of the trade at the meeting of the Retail Florists' Association, June 1. P. Vincent Matraia reported that the few remaining florists of the city who were not members of the association were now ready to join, and observe Sunday closing. The club gave a reception to J. Fred Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson, who are making a Pacific Coast trip in the interest of co-operative advertising, on the evening of June 7.

NEW MARKET FOR WHITE GROWERS.

P. Vincent Matraia of the Art Floral Co., who has been an untiring worker for the new wholesale market for white growers, says that practically every florist in this city has signed up to take stock in the company that is being organized to secure the new flower market. The necessary amount to obtain the building is now in his hands and he hopes to be able to close the deal by July 1. The present plans are to secure a lease for four years on the structure which has been selected as the most desirable, and at the end of that time erect a much larger building to afford ample room for all growers selling stock in this city. If this market becomes a reality, we may again see a revival of carnation growing by white growers. The Japanese forced the discontinuance of this industry among the whites a few years ago by making prices so extremely low that competition was impossible.

NOTES.

After comparing notes, it is the opinion of the trade in this city that Memorial Day business was not as good as last year. It is difficult to understand but it seems to be a fact nevertheless that holiday trade is growing less each succeeding year. It is conceded by all retailers that Mothers' Day is far ahead of Memorial Day in the quantity and quality of flowers bought in this city.

Plans for the flower show to be held in this city, October 26-28 are going ahead steadily. The Menlo Park Horticultural Society, which counts among its members some very able private gardeners, has endorsed the exhibition, and many surprises may be looked for from that locality in the way of prize chrysanthemums and orchids.

Miss Ella E. Barton has removed to a much more commodious store at 2209 Union street. Miss Barton has made a great success of the flower business.

Albert O. Stein and Fred Bertrand represented the trade on the Shriners' excursion to Fresno last week.

H. Plath, proprietor of the Ferneries, says the out-of-town demand for ferns and decorative plants continues excellent. Mr. Plath is planning an extended trip to Europe early next year and will visit all the horticultural centers both in this country and abroad.

From the chrysanthemum growing district along the peninsula comes the report that the cool spring has been ideal for the growing of this fall favorite. The plants are making a splendid clean growth and long stems will be the rule.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has left for an extended vacation trip throughout the state and will be away for several weeks. She reported shipping trade for Memorial Day as satisfactory and was in a position to take care of all orders.

The Lynch Nursery Co., at Menlo Park, one of the few white growers of carnations left, has been shipping a fine grade of stock all season. Snapdragon is another special there.

E. W. McLellan & Co. is handling a heavy cut of roses from the firm's greenhouses at Burlingame. Their Mrs. Chas. Russell and Hadley are particularly good.

The governor has signed assembly bill No. 380 authorizing a license fee for conducting a nursery or selling nursery stock in this state.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Tri-State Florists' Association.

The next meeting of the Tri-State Florists' Association will be held at the Annex Hotel, Fargo, N. D., June 24-26. Prominent speakers have been invited from Chicago and the Twin Cities. Saturday afternoon a fishing trip will be made to Detroit Lake.

LUMBER prices are at rock bottom, according to the annual report read at the opening session of the National Hardwood Lumber Association convention at Philadelphia, Pa., June 9, by Frank F. Fish, of Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the organization.

FLORISTS of New Orleans, La., are making vigorous protest against an order of federal and state officials instructing the police to stop all flowers on the way to patrons and ascertain if they have a permit. This is said to be part of the war on the camphor scale.

Pueblo Flood.

George Bolt, Jr., manager of the Pueblo Floral Co., writes June 10: "Our store was completely wiped out, but the greenhouses remain untouched. We are again up and at it and are going to be a bigger and better Pueblo. The flower business will be a little slack for a while, but we will make it better than before this disaster."

GLADIOLUS growers report the crops doing well.

PORTLAND, ORE., wants the 1925 convention of the Society of American Florists.

Girls Jolt Plant Quarantine.

New Orleans, La., June 11.—Swarms of girl graduates appearing on the streets with "uncertified" floral decorations have overwhelmed efforts of the state authorities requiring all wearers of flowers to carry a certificate attesting to their freedom from the pest. State Entomologist Anderson rescinded the order last night, after it had been in effect one day, and the police had met only scornful contempt when inquiries were made as to whether the bouquets were certified or not.

Post Office Inspection.

California now requires post office inspection at destination of "all florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits and other seeds of fruit and ornamental trees or shrubs, and other plants and plant products in the raw or unmanufactured state, except vegetable and flower seeds: Provided, that the list of plants and plant products shall not apply to plants and plant products shipped under the certificate of the federal horticultural board of the United States Department of Agriculture."

Membership Drive.

EVERY MEMBER GET A MEMBER.

Personal letters have been mailed to each member this week. This is in the nature of a follow-up reminder, and emphasizes that a certain duty has been assigned to you to accomplish for our beloved Society of American Florists, as well as for your fellow craftsmen.

We sincerely hope that you have already secured the one new member in our "Every Member Get a Member" canvass, and we trust that you will not stop at that, for remember, we have a few weak brothers who will lay down on the job. Then, too, a few are so situated that they cannot make good. So in order to make up for any deficiency in our campaign, just secure a few additional members. We have a number of "live wires." Come, get into that class and we will reach our goal easily.

American Dahlia Society.

At the last meeting of the American Dahlia Society the nomenclature committee decided that the term hybrid cactus be left as it now stands, and that the variety, George Walters, be classed with the hybrid cactus; also Mrs. E. W. Estes, Shower of Gold, and other narrow petaled varieties, and that these be used as types of that class. The decorative class is to stand alone without a hybrid class, the narrow petaled decoratives to go in the hybrid class.

All new dahlias, if the originators are undecided as to the class, are to be sent to the trial grounds at Storrs, Conn., for proper classification.

The classification of the American Dahlia Society as it now stands is to be continued, except the fancy class—the fancy class to be dispensed with.

The following committees were appointed for the dahlia show to be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, September 27-30:

Committee on all varieties taking prizes at show: Prof. J. B. S. Norton, College Park, Md.; J. H. Pepper, New York; Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, Storrs, Conn., and T. A. Weston, New York.

Membership committee: Chas. A. Searle, Westfield, N. J.; A. F. Clark, Netcong, N. J; Mrs. Chas H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J.; F. P. Quinby, White Plains, N. Y.; C. E. Walker, Paterson, N. J., and H. Mills, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Staging: Wm. J. Rathgeber, Chairman; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., John H. Meleady, New York.

Judges: Amateur exhibits, James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Mr. Clark, Riverton, N. J.; Prof. J. B. S. Norton, Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, John S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.; M. A. Douglass, Woodbury Heights, N. J., and Alt. F. Clark.

Judges: General, F. P. Quimby, White Plains, N. Y.; John MacNichols, Cedarhurst, N. Y.; Alex Michie, Locust Valley, N. Y.; Prof. Safford, Washington, D. C.; Doctor Howe, Bronx Park; James Kirby, Huntington, N. Y.; Wm. H. Waite, Rumford, N. J., and Prof. F. L. Mulford, Washington, D. C.

Judges: At Storrs, Conn., Prof. J. B. S. Norton, Chairman; James Duthie, Myron A. Douglass, W. B. Sweeney, Willimantic, Conn.; John Kennedy, Westerly, R. I., and Frank P. Quimby.

Judges: At College Park, Md.; Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, James Duthie, Prof. Mulford, Washington, D. C.; Prof. Safford, Washington, D. C., and Wm. J. Rathgeber.

Entertainment: Richard Vincent, Jr., Wm. J. Rathgeber, J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass., and W. L. W. Darnell, East Moriches, N. Y.

STOCK OF POOR QUALITY ARRIVING.

Business is slow with an abundance of all kinds of stock that at times is hard to move. Weddings and commencements have not been a factor, so far this June, and with the exception of lily of the valley and white roses which clean up daily there is no special call for any item on the list. Gladioli and Easter lilies move well as the supply is still limited. Carnations are not fit to carry over. Outdoor flowers are arriving in large quantities and are the principal reason for a lowered price over the greenhouse stock. Some extra good sweet peas are seen, but the most of them are poor.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting June 9, at the Hotel Chatham. As an election of officers was in order the attendance was large. The result was as follows: George Wessenauer, president; W. J. Warrick Jr., vice-president; Edward E. Ludwig, secretary,and G. P. Weaklen, treasurer. It was voted to continue the meetings during the summer, and to have a big joint session with the Florists' and Garers' Clubs of this city, and Sewickley in September. It was also decided to have an out-of-town speaker for each session, a man nationaly known in the business and who can tell us about the associations in other cities. The organization here is young, but all the members are enthusiastic and there is no doubt but that it will be a success A membership campaign is now on and it should not be long until every florist within a radius of 75 miles will be a member.

NOTES.

Lawrence Cooper, manager of The McCallum Co's. factory, was operated on for appendicitis last week and at the last report was getting along nicely.

There has been a heavy call for red, white, and blue immortelles, ribbons and chiffon, because of several funerals of former overseas soldiers

Several of the florists have been reported ill, those on the sick list include Fred Reigelmeyer, and Jos. Fineberg.

STOCK BRINGING LOW PRICES.

The weather during the past week has been very warm and showers have been more than numerous, bringing on all outdoor stock with a rush. There is, generally speaking, an abundance of stock of all kinds on the market and although the trade remains excellent, the stock is bringing comparatively low prices. Roses of the best quality are not numerous, but there is a large amount of second rate flowers offered. The best grade of such popular varieties as Ophelia, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier, Ward, Milady, Butterfly and Killarney are wholesaling at from six to 10 cents apiece. They are in great demand and thousands are being used almost daily for June weddings and other functions. Carnations of best quality are rather limited but there is a large supply of second grade blooms. The dark colors are in greatest demand. Gladioli are coming in in large numbers. Some of the stock is very fine, having many large flowers on each spike. Loveliness is the variety in greatest abundance at this time. Daisies, both yellow and white, are more than plentiful as a cut flower, but very few are seen as pot plants in windows. There is a fair demand for Shasta daisies, which are scarce. Some excellent calendulas of enormous size are offered, but they move very slowly. Cornflowers are coming in in large quantities and are being used to a great extent in combination with coreopsis and delphiniums, and are in good demand. Larkspur is offered in shades of blue, pink and white and sell readily. Lily of the valley is sold by a few establishments and the demand is brisk. It finds its chief use in bridal boquets, but due to the excessive heat does not keep well. Lilium Harrisii seems to be in a steady, though not pressing demand. Callas are very scarce and clean up well. Orchids are limited in quantity and bring a good price. The stock is of excellent quality. There are a few cypripediums to be had and they sell well. Irises are entirely gone. Snapdragons though limited in quantity and quality sell well. Begonias are in good demand, but scarce. A few plants of statice, candytuft and ageratum are being sold. They are used mostly in boxes, in combination with other plants. Some fine varieties of geraniums are on the market in large quantities and they sell quite readily. Novelties, such as pandanus, cibotiums, dracaenas, crotons, etc., are plentiful and show little fluctuation in their regular price. Bedding plants still continue to sell well, and there is an ample supply to fill all demands. Greens are plentiful, but ferns are rather scarce and do not keep well. Southern ferns show effects of the warm weather by turning brown within a short time. Displays consist al-

NOTES.

W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, is erecting four large greenhouses of the ridge and furrow type. They are 35x300 feet. A new boiler house is also being built. Mr. Rowe states that he has about 110,000 square feet of glass and wishes he had more.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting on June 9. A large number were present and some important business was transacted.

H. G. Berning states that he cannot obtain enough snapdragons and delphiniums to fill all orders.

The Missouri Botanical Garden is displaying a large collection of fancy leafed caladiums and orchids.

Orchids and carnations are features with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co.

MARKET IN POOR CONDITION.

The market this week was very quiet, and stock was carried over from day to day until the last of the week when there was a general clean up. On June 11, there were carnation days in Lynn, Malden, Winthrop, and Gloucester, which took abut 60,000 pinks out of the market. The price of pinks during the early part of the week was $1 to $1.50 per 100. The clean up the last of the week sent the prices to two and three cents a piece. The drive for funds in aid of the city dispensary helped, considerably on the rose situation. There were about 10,000 roses sold on the streets in aid of that fund. The prices which roses and carnations brought for that occasion was not very high, but it helps to relieve the glut. Business in general is very quiet, and prices correspondingly low without any outlook at present for better conditions. White roses, lily of the valley, and sweet peas, are mostly in demand for wedding work and there is some call for gladioli and larkspur for decorations. Judging from the amount of flowers coming in at present there will probably not be any change in prices for the coming week.

J. Dufflin, buyer for T. E. Palmer, Brookline, has gone to Kalamazoo, Mich., to take charge of the landscape department of one of the leading florists there.

Elliott Tilson salesman for Pierce Bros., met with a very painful accident this week. The truck on which he was riding collided with a touring car, and he had the left side of his face and ear badly cut by flying glass.

STOCK IS IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Stock is in large supply and is arriving in fair condition considering the warm weather of the past week. Roses patricularly are plentiful and good first-class shipping stock which is in limited supply, is commanding fair prices. The weather has turned cooler at this writing, June 14, and the quality of the roses is showing signs of improvement. All the varieties grown for this market are to be had in quantity with Mrs. Chas. Russell in best demand. Carnations are still included in the shipments, but the supply is gradually dwindling with very few saleable flowers obtainable. Peonies are quite a factor in the market and are in good demand. Orchids are having a brisk call and lily of the valley appears to be holding its own, notwithstanding the heavy supply that is being cut this month. Gardenias are selling nicely. Lilies are quite a factor in the market and a fair supply of callas is seen at some of the houses. Gladioli are good property. Sweet peas, cornflowers, candytuft, coreopsis, gaillardia, feverfew, gypsophilas daisies, snapdragons and all other miscellaneous seasonable indoor and outdoor stock is obtainable in quantity. New ferns are arriving and are selling at prices ranging from $3 to $5 per 100, according to quality. Business has been fair considering conditions with the demand strengthening this week as commencement exercises approach.

NOTES.

Mangel & Co., the Palmer House Florists, have their window all ready for their ducks which are an added attraction each year at this establishment. Mr. Mangel has them so well trained that they can now quack, "Say It With Flowers."

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a strong call for lily of the valley and orchids. Roses are in large supply here, especialy Mrs. Chas. Russell, which is grown on a heavier scale than ever this season at the Morton Grove greenhouse.

The Allied Florists' Association is carrying considerable advertising in all the dailies in which the girl graduate occupies the principal part.

The floriculture division of the Pageant of Progress Exposition is maintaining a permanent organization in carrying on solicitation among prospective exhibitors for the contracting of space.

James Henderson, son of A. Henderson, who is home from the Boston School of Technology on vacation, will pursue his chosen profession of architecture in a local office during the summer.

William F. Schofield, the North State street florist, is back from a pleasant visit at Janesville, Wis.

N. H. Kirsch, of Niles Centre, is back from Rockford where he attended the state convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store American Beauty roses are arriving in heavier supply, especially in the longer stemmed grades.

Julius Dilloff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, is calling on the trade here this week. Mrs. Dilloff is with him.

A new retail store will open at the northwest corner of South Wabash avenue and Congress street in the near future.

George Wienhoeber had the order for the Pirie-Withers wedding, which was probably the largest job so far this season. Over 500 dozen larkspur were used in the bridal path and a large quantity of candidum lilies in the two flower beds on either side of the spot where the ceremonies were held. The order also called for the bridal bouquet of white orchids and lily of the valley and six bridesmaid's bouquets. A heart-shaped center piece fully six feet in diameter, made of pink and white sweet peas with a large tree of all the varieties of larkspur obtainable in the middle, created quite a sensation, as the guests circled past the bride's table to admire it after the luncheon.

Peter Schousboe, superintendent of the Peter Reinberg greenhouses for several years, has rented five of the Reinberg houses, consisting of about 50,000 square feet of glass, which will be devoted to roses, carnations and miscellaneous stock. He is catering to the north side trade and is buying considerable stock in the market to fill his orders. He is going to purchase a new Ford.

Arthur Peterson of Escanaba, Mich., stopped off here June 10 on his way home from Detroit, where he attended a business meeting of state fair officials. He was appointed on the board of managers by the governor and was made superintendent of the flower and plant department besides being named on the entertainment committee.

Frank J. Kral, Jr. has sold his business at 1903 South Halsted street to John Tazeska, who took possession June 10. Mr. Kral is attending the convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters at Rockford this week, but will leave shortly on an extended pleasure trip with his family.

E. F. Winterson Co. is disposing of large quantities of larkspur from the well-known wholesaler's farm at Highland Park. New eastern ferns are arriving in good sized quantities at this house.

Leonard H. Vaughan of Vaughan's Seed Store, returned early in the week from the firm's growing station in Michigan, and reported finding the crops there in excellent condition.

Chas. Smith, of the Eastern Wreath Manufacturing Co., Providence, R. I., who is making a western trip, called on the jobbing trade here this week.

George Louder, employe of the nurseries of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., age 20, was drowned in a pond near the Glenview Golf Club, June 12.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is receiving shipments of water lilies in addition to its regular line of stock.

Herman E. Bruns and wife are rejoicing in the arrival of a daughter, Shirley Louise, June 11.

Finest and Most Complete Supply in the Chicago Market---Bar None

The remains of the late O. P. Bassett, which were cremated at Pasadena, Calif., and held there until June 2, reached here last week and were laid to rest in the family lot at Brownville cemetery, Hinsdale, Friday, June 10, at 3 p. m. Mrs. Bassett was unable to be present owing to illness, so the burial services were strictly private. Mr. Bassett was the senior member of the firm of Bassett & Washburn.

The local members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association held a meeting at the municipal pier, where the Pageant of Progress will be held. A temporary organization was perfected and the F. T. D. expects to have two booths, one in conjunction with the Western Union Telegraph Company. Orders will be taken for cut flowers at the Pageant and telegraphed everywhere, right from the booth.

Paul R. Klingsporn, of the membership committee of the Society of American Florists, is ready to add all the new names possible before the convention in August. All those who are not already members should send in their application without delay. Mr. Klingsporn's official headquarters are at the store of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, 182 North Wabash avenue.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is supplying its trade with choice gladioli and peonies in addition to its usual complete line of all seasonable cut flowers.

At Peter Reinberg's store the receipts of roses are heavy with the stock arriving in good condition considering the hot weather.

A meeting of the creditors of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnerman Co. was held at the offices of the Chicago Association of Credit Men, 10 South La-Salle street, June 14. Their liabilities are a trifle over $7,000. The accounts receivable amount to $1,141.92, and it is estimated that the stock on hand is worth about $1,085. A committee consisting of Horace Walter Hawkins, Frank Mikolajczak and Leo Adler was appointed to look after the interests of the creditors.

Zech & Mann are supplying their trade with choice lilies which are in good supply with them. Allie Zech received word this week from N. Gibson that he has disposed of his business at Nappanee, Ind.

Wietor Bros. report a heavy demand for chrysanthemum stock which they disposed of in double-quick time this season. A few pompons are left, but orders for these are arriving in every mail.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., says business has been highly satisfactory all through the season to date and looks forward to improving conditions in general trade the remainder of the year.

Wilfred Eastman, son of L. D. Eastman, 1322 East 63rd street, and Miss Helen Anderson stole a march on their many firends when they were quietly married at Crown Point, Ind., June 14.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are enjoying a splendid shipping business as well as city trade. Peonies are in good supply here.

Manager John P. Degnan, of A. Henderson & Co., says this has been the best bedding plant season on record, with the demand still lively.

Visitors: J. W. Rodgers, Dayton, O.; Hans Rosacker and wife, Minneapolis, Minn., enroute to Europe; Bruno Juergens, Peoria; George MacArthur, Mineapolis, Minn.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Randolph hotel, June 9. Owing to the unavoidable absence of President Kohout, Vice-President A. T. Pyfer presided. The following candidates were elected to membership: Irving Stein, 161 N. Wabash avenue, Chicago; Gustav Bloom, Chicago; Anton Batek, Schermerville, and E. J. Delaney, Hollywood, Calif.

The report of the May party, theatrical entertainment and dance was presented by T. E. Waters, chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, and by a unanimous vote, the secertary was instructed to send a letter of thanks and appreciation to Prof. J. C. Blair, Prof. H. B. Dorner, and the students of the Floriculture Club at the University of Illinois, for their excellent rendition of the "Florists' Shop."

Chairman Waters, of the sports committee, was authorized to organize a bowling team, among the members, which would be entered in competition with other teams at the Washington, D. C., convention of the Society of American Florists, August 16-18.

It was decided to discontinue sessions of the club during the months of July, August and September. The plan of inaugurating the autumn season with a grand opening and entertainment, met with the approval of the members, and 300 tickets were authorized to be issued at $1 each, the committee in charge hoping to have them ready for distribution in the near future.

CHICAGO TO WASHINGTON.

The transpotration committee presented a report on trains and special rates to the Washington convention of the Society of American Florists, August 16-18. The trains for the trip and all other particulars will be announced later.

A rate of a fare and one-half for the round trip on identification certificates has been authorized. On this basis, the fare from Chicago to Washington and return will be $44.96. Tickets will be on sale August 14-16; validation, August 16-19, and return limit, August 21. The one way rate is $29.97, including tax.

Pullman fares, Chicago to Washington, including surcharges and war tax are: Lower berth $8.91; upper $7.13 compartment $25.11, and drawing room $32.40.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The spring flower show of the North Shore Hotricultural Society, was held at the Gorton school, Lake Forest, Ill., June 4-5. Owing to abnormal weather conditions, exhibits were much smaller than usual, many exhibitors who had made entries of peonies finding themselves unable to compete, as the flowers were not sufficiently opened, and the iris classes were not numerous enough to make up this deficiency.

The principal winners in the various classes were Mrs. Chas. Schweppe, E. S. Moore, H. F. McCormack, Prentiss Coonley, and Byron L. Smith, all of Lake Forest. Successful out-of-town exhibitors were Mrs. H. S. Cooper, Kenosha, Wis., and S. Insull, Libertyville, Ill.

There was good competition in those classes calling for collections of perennials. Gloxinias in fine form were shown by Mrs. Schweppe and Mr. Coonley, the former exhibitor having fine examples of Mary Pickford gladioli. Mrs. Cooper took the first prize offered by the Illinois Garden Club for a vase of peonies, and the prizes for table decorations offered by this organization were won by Mrs. Augustus Carpenter, Mrs. Ryerson and Mrs. Brewster.

F. W. SPARK, Cor. Sec'y.

State Fair.

The Illinois State Fair will be held at Springfield, August 19-27. J. S. Miles, Petersburg, is in charge of horticulture and floriculture. Prof. W. S. Brock, of Urbana, is superintendent of horticulture, and Catherine Miles, Petersburg, of floriculture.

STOCK SELLING READILY.

The month of May brought the trade the heaviest business of the year, due to a great extent to the excellent holiday trade. At the present time all seasonable stock is plentiful and of good quality, and is sold wholesale at a low price to keep it moving. Such material as delphiniums, larkspurs, candytuft, gaillardias, cornflowers, pink carnations, daisies, coreopsis, lupines and hardy sweet peas are the principal items. Roses for summer cutting are very good, in fact, better than they were in the winter season and the prices range wholesale from three to 12 cents. Carnations are of inferior quality. The call for graduation flowers was somewhat heavier this year than last. Garden flowers were a factor in this work.

NOTES.

At a recent meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to hold the annual picnic July 4, at Pleasant Hill, Mo., the same place as last year, and a cordial invitation is extended to all the trade to attend.

Miss B. Lucier, formerly with Miller Bros., Abilene Kan., is now employed with Arthur Newell.

Considerable remodeling is changing the interior of many of the retail stores.

Chas. Robinson is now with the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co.

Ray Blessing is recovering from a bad case of blood poisoning.

The greenhouses are being cleaned up for next year. E. J. B.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., June 8, President Wm. Noonan in the chair. B. Wallace was elected to active membership, and one petition for membership was received. The chair appointed Thos. Proctor, James McCarthy and Thos. Twigg to judge the exhibit held in conjunction with the session. The following awards were made: President Noonan, 1st., for 25 sweet peas; Frank O. Johnson, 1st., for 12 hybrid tea roses, and 12 hardy perennial roses.

The report of the rose show held by the society June 7 was read, and it was voted the best display ever had by the organization. It was decided that the society lend its support in the community playground movement, Mrs. E. J. Brown acting as representative. President Noonan presented Mr. Johnson with the Scheeper sweepstake, a fine vase, which he won at the recent tulip show. The next session and show of the society will be held July 13.

Weather conditions have practically ruined the carnation crop, but it has been an asset to gladioli, lilies and outdoor sweet peas which are arriving in large numbers and are of excellent quality. Trade is holding up fairly well for this time of the year, with weddings numerous though small.

NOTES.

A. S. Gray, Chickasha, who was a visitor last week is endeavoring to organize a base ball team to defeat Guthrie at the time of the florists' convention in August. He reports that his chrysanthemums are all planted outdoors, stating that he has better success this way than with greenhouse culture.

An attractive wedding breakfast window is seen at Furrow & Co.'s store. The Guthrie branch of this establishment has extended a challenge to the florists of this state for a ball game to be played at the time of the florists' convention in this city July 6-7.

The Foster Floral Co., has received some very fancy cibotiums, and are featuring them in a window display.

Mrs. L. K. Butts, El Reno, is enjoying a good business, having purchased stock in this city last week.

Clyde Batten of the Stiles Co., who has been sick is now back at work again.

STOCK MOVING SLOWLY.

Business during the past week was rather quiet. While there were some social functions, the wedding period had not yet started. A number of large weddings are scheduled for the remainder of the month and the trade will be busy. Funeral work is slow. There is some demand for loose flowers, and corsages have been considerably in demand. The usual run of flowers are in the local market, consisting of roses, carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons, lilies of the valley and garden flowers. The quality is good and the supply is slightly better than the demand, although prices have not declined materially. Plants are not selling very readily at present. Orchids are one of the newer flowers on the list and the supply is fairly good. Some peonies are still coming in from northern points, but the season is practically over.

One of the large weddings of the season was that of Miss Marion Smith, daughter of Mrs. W. A. Smith, 1073 East Broad street. T. J. HEAT AFFECTS STOCK.

While business has been good the past week, the supply was too large, especially of the inferior grades. Due to the extreme heat, all indoor stock is getting so poor that it is hard to carry it over from one day to the next. All the good stock available is quickly moved at excellent prices. Outdoor cut flowers, such as local peonies, delphiniums, gypsophila and some forced gladioli are now arriving in quantity and of course, have the preference over other varieties. Commencement and wedding work is not very good.

NOTES.

Fred N. Nalton left June 13 for Des Moines, Ia., to attend a Masonic meeting and assist the band, of which he is a member.

Chas. A. Koch, manager of the Wauwatosa Floral Co., has left on a fishing trip after a most strenuous season.

While the sale of bedding stock was exceedingly good up to Memorial Day, it came to a sudden stop and one can see numerous empty veranda boxes and vases.

EXCELLENT COMMENCEMENT TRADE.

Commencements and weddings, have been the main features the past week. Peonies are excellent in quality and are in great demand. Roses, carnations, and sweet peas are being used for all kinds of floral work. Garden flowers are much in demand such as

Do not take any fake or imitation thread, claimed to be the Meyer silkaline, or smilax threads. Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool. Be sure and get the Meyer thread.

EXCELLENT DEMAND FOR STOCK.

The demand the past week has been strong and well ahead of expectations; in fact, there is not enough in some lines to go around, the number of weddings, commencements and social activities of all kinds, taxing the facilities of the trade to keep them supplied. The quality of the stock in general was never better or perhaps as good at this season. The cool May brought all greenhouse flowers along slowly and roses particularly are of fine quality. Outdoor stock is now suffering for want of rain, cornflower, gaillardias, larkspur, sweet peas, feverfew, coreopsis and hydrangeas being the principal items. There is a good demand for Dorothy Perkins and other rambler rose sprays, which owing to the late frosts are not so plentiful as usual. Easter lilies will be a factor from now on and they have a heavy call at top prices. Superb flowers of gigas are fairly plentiful, but every one finds a customer. Lily of the valley is about equal to the demand. There is a good supply of greens, which sell well.

June 13.—The market opened with a good supply of roses, Easter lilies, gladioli, and a general line of outdoor flowers. The first of the outdoor grown local gladioli are arriving, and are very good stock. There was a brisk demand particularly for the higher grades of roses.

THE FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING.

The June meeting of the Florists' Club was preceded by a delightful dinner given by President Alfred M. Campbell in honor of Prof. E. I. Wilde, of Pennsylvania State College, the officers, past officers and committees of the club. The banquet was held at the Union League Club, famous for its cuisine, which was fully demonstrated on this occasion. A magnificent plateau of Premier roses and larkspur filled the center of the oval table. With the passing of the cigars Robert Craig happily voiced the feelings of all present in his graceful eulogy of the host, which was seconded, all rising in his honor. The meeting of the club was fairly well attended, the feature being an address on "The College and its Relative Importance to the Trade," by Prof. E. I. Wilde. This lecture and its intimate discussion by many of the members proved its interest to the best men in the trade. He stated that a college education, while it did not give a student practical knowledge, there was a groundwork laid, a systematizing of the facts and things that had been found helpful and useful from experience which were necessary for a business and social career. The college strives to instil into the student an ambition which will be satisfied with nothing but the best. It equips him to live so as to be a power in his community, and that there was more in life than to earn money to pay debts. The bright college man at the age of 45 should have his business so established that he could then devote a portion of his time to the affairs of his community. The college with its pathologists, entomologists and others with scientific knowledge, could solve many of the grower's problems if they would only co-operate with them. Farmers had found the work of the college of great benefit and if the horticultural trade would interest themselves with the state authorities in securing appropriations for a greenhouse equipment, as the trade under the guidance of J. F. Ammann in Illinois had succeeded in doing, it would place them in a much better position to be helpful to growers. In the discussion that followed many interesting points were touched on particularly that of soils and fertilizers. Robert Craig believed that the young man who was anxious to learn would be greatly benefitted by a college course, which however, would not be of much use to the indifferent, who failed no matter how much they were helped along. He cited Peter Henderson as a man who had gained great success without a college training. Mr. Craig however, believed in the colleges, and would like to see a six week's course in fundamentals for bright boys, who had shown they were capable of benefitting by it. He believed Prof. Wilde was on the right track in getting the trade interested and was sure that much good would come by its co-operation.

A NIESSEN OUTING.

An occasion that is looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure by the Leo Niessen Co., is the annual trip to the lilac farm of Wm. F. Lacroix, Buena, N. J. Mr. Lacroix extends this invitation every year, which this season was set for June 12. A special car attached to the nine o'clock Atlantic City, N. J., express took the merry party to Buena, where they were met by automobiles and soon reached the farm, where everything was arranged for their fullest enjoyment. One of the features was the orchestra of Norman Hinkle, which furnished music for the singing and dancing, and was most enjoyable. A base ball game between the sales and packing department was a lively contest. After an inspection of the 100 acre farm planted entirely with lilacs for forcing, the party sat down to a bountiful repast that would have done credit to our best restaurants. After the appreciation and great pleasure of the visitors had been voiced to Mr. Lacroix and wife, dancing was indulged in until train time and the party were whirled to the city, completing in every respect a perfect day.

NOTES.

Stephen Green of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. is back from a trip with his Buick business car, which included cities as remote as Cleveland, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., and all the towns and cities en route going and coming. A bulging book of orders was the result.

Miss Ann Heacock, a sister of the late Joseph Heacock, a lady now past her 84th birthday, has been drawn on a court jury and expresses her desire to serve. She is still quite active in the affairs of her home and much interested in the suffrage for women.

T. Nelson Geiger left on Saturday, last for a fishing trip through Maine and up into Canada. He expects to spend a month in this sportsman's paradise.

Choice roses, gladioli, and sweet peas were features of the Edward Reid stock the past week. Mr. Reid says, "We never had better stock at this season."

Berger Bros. have enjoyed a very good June business, gladioli, roses, carnations and sweet peas being leading items of their stock.

George Aeugle of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., has added a six cylinder car for his own personal use to his fleet. K.

USUAL SUMMER DULLNESS NOTED.

There is a fine supply of both greenhouse and garden stock on the market. The weather has been favorable both to the trade and the public, but considering that this is the month of June, when all nature smiles, the small amount of business that is reaching the florists gives the impression that nature has a monopoly of the smiling. The condition of business would be considered about normal for July or August, but it is discouraging for June. But there is no mystery about it. Income taxes are falling due; almost every branch of trade is in a disorganized condition and 300,000 men are said to be out of employment in this city alone. Some of the spokesmen for the trade have claimed that the business received from the working people amounts to little, but we have noticed a difference when large numbers of them, as at present, are out of employment. Great numbers of the monied class are sailing for Europe or other points, where ruin and misery are prominent features, but idle curiosity must be justified. The people that stay at home are sitting tight. Some exceptions may be noted. Numbers of men are putting up $50 each to see a foreigner, and as Congressman Gallivan has stated, "a big bum," pummel each other. In greenhouse stock, American Beauty and other roses are all slow. The supply of Beauties is not heavy, but there is enough for the demand. In such roses as Columbia, Ophelia and Premier, which may be said to be the leading offerings, the principal demand is for stock ranging from No. 2 to extra. The orchid market does not clean up and good stock is sold at the rate of $50 to $75 per 100, a few gigas bringing $1 to $1.25 each. Carnations are getting small and so are the prices. The average of stock goes at $1.50 per 100 with $3 for the best. A few peonies bring $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen, but ordinary stock is 50 to 75 cents. These prices do not seem unreasonable, but the trouble is that so many people do not seem to want flowers at any price.

June 13.—The market is in poor condition with an excess of supply of practically all stocks.

GREEK-AMERICAN FLORISTS' ASS'N.

The Greek-American Florists' Association held its annual meeting at Eighth avenue and 23rd street on the night of June 9 and elected officers as follows: George Hanges, president; George Rondires, vice-president; Spiros Sakos, secretary; George Cotsonas, assistant secretary, and James Soterides, treasurer. Directors: C. A. Sakelos, Theodore Malandre, and Christ. Pappas. All are men well known and of good standing in the trade. President-elect Hanges says that his associates are full of ambition. It is expected that the organization will arrange for an outing at an early date. The excursions of this association were in the past well conducted and largely attended by florists, irrespective of their affiliations. They had to be given up during the war on account of the food situation and the difficulty in securing a steamer.

NOTES.

Calling recently on the Olympia Florist, Broadway and 158th street, we noticed an exceptionally attractive show window of gladioli in tall handle baskets, and smaller baskets of cornflowers, yellow daisies, gaillardias, centaureas and sweet peas.

John Lampert, who had been with the Van Praag Florist Co. for 12 years, died from consumption on May 31 in Seton hospital. He went with the overseas army to the world war; was gassed and taken a prisoner to Germany.

S. Masur, the Brooklyn retailer, recently returned from a 10 days' stay at his camp at Delaware water gap. When school closes he will return, taking Mrs. Masur and the family.

A. T. Bunyard and family sailed for England on June 14 to visit Mr. Bunyard's former home. They expect to return about September 1.

James G. Calaftes, who has a fine store at Westchester avenue and Southern boulevard, Bronx, advises us that business is fairly good.

The Greenwich Flower Shop, 111 West Tenth street, is another of the downtown stores that is always attractive.

A fine trade has been enjoyed by Matthew A. Battista, who has an attractive retail store at 44 Carmine street.

Visitors: Theodore Outerbridge, Berumda; Frank McDonald, Boston, Mass., and C. Quadland, North Adams, Mass.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club held its last meeting preceding the July and August vacation on the evening of June 13, President Hendrickson in the chair. Suitable memorial resolutions were adopted on the deaths of Alfred Demeusey, Sr., a member of the club, Mrs. A. H. Langjhar and Mrs. P. B. Rigby, wives of members. C. Lowther reported on arrangements and transportation to the convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held at Washington, D. C., August 16-18. He stated that all arrangements had been made and urged everyone who intends to make the trip to secure early reservations for parlor car seats. Applications must first be made to Secretary Young for identification certificates.

There was a brief discussion on the membership drive for the Society of American Florists, but nothing definite came of it. A. T. De LeMare for the good-of-the-club committee, who recently sent a questionnaire to all members, reported progress. Among the questions asked was one concerning the desirability of another and better place of assembly. Charles H. Totty warmly advocated, for the good of the club, a better hall. Charles Weathered endorsed Mr. Totty's remarks and mentioned objectionable features connected with the present hall, particularly the acoustics. A. L. Miller was satisfied with the present place, but Mr. Weathered clung to his argument. There was a brief discussion relating to the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, to be held in this city June 25-26.

Dr. W. E. Britton, Ph. D., state and station etomologist of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station, New Haven, Conn., by the aid of fine stereopticon views, took the members on an excursion to "bugland." He gave a lucid description of the many insect pests that prey on vegetables and flowers. One might conclude that big bugs have little bugs to bite them. Dr. Britton was given a standing vote of thanks at the close of his address.

The Springfield Floral Co., Springfield, N. J., exhibited a fine vase of delphimium hybrids. John Lewis Childs, Inc., Floral Park, N. Y., displayed a collection of flowers, including peonies, yellow callas and lilies in variety.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga., President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., First Vice-President; Alexander Forbes, Newark, N.J., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Counsel, 73 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June 22-24, 1921.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel. Next annual meeting, will be held at St. Louis, June 20-21, 1921.

THE fertilizer business is reported very dull.

VISITED NEW YORK: Theodore Outerbridge, Bermuda.

CABLE report from Japan, July 15, states Formosum prices firm.

COUNTER trade, generally, is reported slower than during the first half of June, last year.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. Hartmann, Copenhagen, Denmark; Charles Loechner, New York.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. Chas. McCullough and family have returned from their winter home in Florida.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district, because of wet weather and thin stand, show too much top growth.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Howard M. Earl, Chas. McKubbin and C. Maule will attend the St. Louis convention.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—E. A. Martin, with the aid of friends, has purchased his business from the receiver and will continue.

THE Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association will meet in annual convention at St. Louis Mo., next week, June 20-21.

SUDAN grass seed advanced 40 cents per 100 pounds under good demand. The value now is only one-sixth of the 1919 price.

GEORGE W. KERR, with the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who returned from California this week, says the seed crops there look fairly good.

J. M. BRIDGEFORD, managing director of Watkins & Simpson, London, Eng., now in California, made the trip from Cherbourg to Los Angeles in 10 days.

BOARD OF TRADE—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, June 15, were as follows: Timothy, $4.25 to $6.00 per 100 pounds, Red Clover, $10.00 to $16.00.

NEARLY three times the quantity of red clover was imported in May, 1921, compared with 1920, and double the quantity of rape, but for the 11 months period, the 1920 importations were larger.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, is sending out invitations to visit its gladiolus farm at Ovid, Clinton county, Mich., after August 1. The farm is located on the Grand Rapids-Detroit division of the Grand Trunk R. R. and the auto route main state highway line from Grand Rapids to Detroit.

French Bulbs Sold "Short".

It is becoming more and more evident that importers of French bulbs who are most insistent on low prices, are those who have sold at definite fixed prices, these French stocks before they had any real knowledge of what price the French growers would demand.

A third meeting of the French Bulb Growers' Syndicate will be held soon, at which time representatives of the newly organized bulb dealers' association will appear and endeavor to convince the growers that preliminary prices are too high. It is already evident, that regardless of the result of this meeting, the French bulb crop will not move forward to America as early as usual.

Some Dutch exporters in France are said to have bought Paper White narcissi at the high prices.

California Seed Crops.

The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of Gilroy, Calif., under date of May 30, reports as follows: "Seed crops in this state are now far enough advanced to permit of a tentative estimate as to their outcome. The endive plantings amount to about one-half of last year's, with excellent prospects for a crop. The acreage devoted to lettuce, parsley and parsnip has also been cut in half, with an estimated yield of 60 to 80 per cent. Carrot, onion and radish plantings are but 20 per cent of normal and a crop of from 40 to 85 per cent is expected. A 50 per cent yield is looked forward to in sweet peas and salsify, with a 15 per cent acreage planted to the former and 25 per cent to the latter. Beet and celery plantings are extremely light this year, but a good crop is expected, estimated at from 50 to 75 per cent."

Peas and Beans.

The Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., advises an unusually small acreage was planted to peas this year, probably 10 to 15 per cent of the acreage of 1920. Peas are badly affected with aphis in California, and as to other sections of the west, the plantings are so small that crop conditions will have little influence one way or the other in the final results. This firm's pea crops in Michigan look favorable at the present time. Growers are preparing their ground for planting beans, but prices are so low that the acreage will probably not be more than 35 to 40 per cent of the plantings a year ago. The recent rains have helped materially in putting in the crop.

The John H. Allan Seed Co., of Sheboygan, Wis., under date of May 31, reports as follows: "As far as peas are concerned, conditions seem to be favorable for that crop. Some of our fields are just commencing to show blossom, while in others the peas are coming through the ground, so it is difficult at this time to give a forecast as to what the crop will do. However, we have surmounted all of our early spring difficulties. The acreage has been greatly reduced, due to a surplus left from the 1920 crop, and an indisposition on the part of the trade to book futures. Probably a short year's

American Association of Nurserymen.

Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., President; M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., Vice-President; John Watson, 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

MONROE, MICH.—The Greening Nursery Co. recently purchased 106 acres of land near this city, paying $300 per acre.

NEXT week the annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, will be held at the Congress hotel, Chicago, June 22-24.

WINE grape plantings in California this year are the largest in the history of the industry, the acreage exceeding last year's by 200,000.

THE governor of California has signed assembly bill No. 380 authorizing a license fee for conducting a nursery or selling nursery stock in that state.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—Prof. L. R. Taft, state orchard inspector, and party, made a tour recently of Berrien county orchards, vineyards and experimental plots.

THE earliest arrivals for the nurserymen's convention at Chicago next week are Jac. Smits, Naarden, Holland, and John Radder, representing Blaauw & Co., Boskoop, Holland.

DAYTON, O.—The Dayton Horticultural Society, which met recently at the John Siebenthaler nurseries, had excellent displays of peonies grown by W. J. Engle and delphiniums by J. Fromm.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—The Park Place Nurseries Co. was incorporated recently with a capital of $200,000. F. R. Hansell, J. Vernon Simm and E. M. MacFarland, Philadelphia, Pa., are the incorporators.

MIAMI, FLA.—The Southland Nurseries, Inc., has been incorporated with a capital of $150,000 to conduct a general wholesale and retail horticultural and seed business. The officers are Edw. Roney, president; Samuel Smyth, vice-president, and John W. Rose, secretary and treasurer.

AUSTIN, TEX.—At a recent meeting of the nursery and orchard inspection division of the Texas department of agriculture, Geo. B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, and R. E. McDonald, chief entomologist, spoke on the methods to be used in obtaining better inspection service.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The federal horticultural board has recommended that prosecution be started in several cases in this state, involving the violation of Quarantine No. 26, which prohibits the shipment of currant or gooseberry bushes, the host shrubs of the pine blister rust, west of Minnesota.

SENATOR S. P. SPENCER has advised President Lloyd Stark of the American Asociation of Nurserymen that the Cramton "pure nursery stock" bill has been referred to a committee on interstate and foreign commerce which has not yet reported on it and is not expecteed to, at least, not this session.

Camphor Scale.

A new and serious insect pest that may prove a dire menace to the citrus fruit orchards and other cultures of the country unless its spread is checked has made its appearance in New Orleans, La., where it now threatens to destroy many of the camphor trees used extensively for shade along the streets. Local authorities, it is said, are taking active steps to control the pest, and have asked the United States Department of Agriculture to give assistance through its federal horticultural board and the bureau of entomology, which has been investigating the situation at first hand.

While the insect is found attacking more or less vigorously more than 100 kinds of plants, including citrus, the camphor trees appear to be most seriously injured by it, and for this reason the name camphor scale is applied to the pest. How it got into the United States is still unknown, but entomologists believe that it was introduced but little more than a year ago, from its rapid spread during the short time that its presence has been recognized. Thus far the pest has attacked chiefly ornamentals, owing to the character of plants in the infested area, which at present includes several blocks in the residental section of the city, where many of the camphor trees are beginning to show signs of injury, a few of the lower branches dying and a large number of leaves falling off. From its characteristics, however, the insect is believed to be an enemy of citrus trees, figs, and live oaks, as well as other plants of economic value.

This is said to be the first establishment of the camphor scale in this country. Hitherto it has been known to exist almost wholly in India, China, and Japan. Reported occurrences of its presence in the Philippines and Porto Rico are being inquired into as a result of the outbreak in New Orleans. It is described as an insect of semitropic climates and closely related to the San Jose scale, which made its appearance in this country between 45 and 50 years ago from China, and established itself as a very destructive insect pest in orchards. The opinion is expressed that the camphor scale would hardly go farther north than Virginia, on the Atlantic seaboard, if given a chance. But much apprehension is felt by specialists of the department concerning what valuable trees and plants it may attack if its spread is not arrested.

Deutzia Hypoglauca.

Many of the deutzias recently introduced from western China give little promise of value in this climate, and some of the handsomest of these plants, like D.longifolia, D.Vilmorinæ and D.discolor, are usually killed to the ground every year in the arboretum. The specimen, however, found by Purdom in northern China, to which the name hypoglauca has been given, has been growing and flowering here for several years and is a good addition to the short list of the entirely hardy species and hybrids of deutzia which are suitable for New England gardens. Another north China species D. grandiflora, is also hardy here. It is a dwarf shrub with larger flowers than those of other deutzias. Unlike those of other species they are solitary or in two or three-flowered clusters, and open as the leaves unfold and before the flowers of other deutzias appear. More satisfactory, however, for New England gardens than any of the species of deutzia are plants of the Lemoinei hybrids raised by Lemoine at Nancy by crossing D. gracilis and D. parviflora, another north China plant. The original hybrid is a vigorous shrub, often four or five feet tall and broad. It never fails to cover itself every May with pure white flowers, and, like all the Lemoinei hybrid deutzias, is easily increased by cuttings. There are several compact forms of this hybrid in the collection. Of these the most beautiful perhaps is called Boule de Neige. Not quite as hardy is Lemoine's hybrid called D. rosea, obtained by crossing D.

Government Meddling and Bureaucracy.

Hon. Philip P. Campbell, congressman from Kansas, in a recent address before the house of representatives, at Washington, D. C., presented many facts regarding the meddling of government officials in the every day life of the people, that have a direct bearing on the florist, seed and nursery trades. Following are excerpts from Mr. Campbell's speech:

"It would be difficult to enumerate all the departments, bureaus and commissions of the government at Washington, that have been created to exercise bureaucratic authority and paternal guardianship over the people in every part of the republic. There is no activity, business, social, or domestic condition that is not the object of their supervision, their solicitude, or their authority. Over 690,000 civilian employes make up the army that oversees and directs the affairs of the people and assumes guardianship over them. Government agents and inspectors, excercising every variety of authority, are found on every Pullman car out of and into Washington. Government reports on every subject from adenoids to rat traps fill the files of offices that cover acres of floor space in Washington. The mahogany and quarter-sawed oak office furniture already installed has cost many millions of dollars and more is being constantly purchased.

"If a yearling dies of foot-and-mouth disease on a farm in Kansas, the government at Washington acts on the case. If a shoat dies of cholera in a hog lot in Iowa, the government at Washington takes charge. If a weevil bores through a boll of cotton on a plantation in Texas, the government at Washington is stirred to action. Nothing escapes the vigilant eye of the government and its innumerable functionaries. If the price of one article goes up, let the government take charge of the seller; if the price of another article goes down, let the government take charge of the buyer. And thus the carnival of govermnent activities goes merrily on. Government control is assumed to be the remedy for every ill, and government regulation the source of every good.

"The people pay all the expenses. In some instances they pay it all through the government at Washington. In the case of other activities they pay half through the government at Washington and the other half through the governments of the states. But the people pay all the expenses of this complicated machinery of government, that has its agents looking over the shoulders of every business man and directing the affairs of every citizen. This use of government is not without deplorable precedent. The disappointment and despair of the people of France growing out of the delay in the inauguration the millenium by the activities of the government at Paris led to the French revolution. The French government at Paris undertook the control and the direction of everything that concerned the French people. It was assumed that the people could do nothing for themselves and that the government could do everything. Failure, disappointment and revolution followed.

"There is no word in the discussion by the fathers of the powers and duties of the government they have handed down to us that leads to the belief that it was contemplated in their plan that the head of any department or the chief of any bureau or the agent of any commission should at any time make restrictions or arbitrary regulations affecting the life, liberty, property or the pursuit of happiness of the citizen. Such restrictions upon the individuals as was contemplated were to be made only by the states, and the lesser political subdivisions having immediate jurisdiction, and then only by the plain terms of statutes enacted by the representatives of the people. The rapidly growing and alarming tendency today is toward a centralization of all authority and power incident to government in Washington.

"Many bureaus and commissions created to lighten the burdens or better the conditions of the people have only resulted in increasing the burden of taxation they bear. There is a warning in the following words, which was one of the charges made by the fathers against George III in their Declaration of Independence:

" 'He has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat our substance.' "

A Benefactor of the Race.

The next time there is a distribution of medals among benefactors of the human race one might well be pinned on Calvin Keeney. He has done about as much as any one of his generation to promote the arts of peace.

For Mr. Keeney has discovered, or rather solved, the stringless string bean. A gardener whose job it was to grow seed beans for other gardeners, he conceived the idea that time and patience could be saved and efficiency promoted if the luscious string bean could be induced to grow without the hempen fibers that must either be removed from the pod before the meal or from the teeth during it.

Therefore he girded up his overalls and went to work. There is no royal road to such an end. Keeney used the most approved Luther Burbank methods. He got down on his knees and personally investigated every bean plant in his garden. When he found a stringless pod he tied it up as a mark of special distinction, and went on looking for the next.

At the end of the season he had enough specimens to plant an experimental bed the next year, and the process was repeated and repeated again. Finally he had evolved a race of stringless beans. There may be even now a throw-back among them, a bean of specialized parenthood that produces the objectionable strings. Scientists call this atavism. But in general the new strain is fairly permanent.

How many hours will be saved in the kitchen, what percentage of delight has been added to the palate by Keeney's discovery, only a mathematician can tell. As they used to say in classic Rome, he has deserved well of the public.—Chicago Journal.

Important British Fertilizer Transaction

Up to 10 years ago the names of the Island of Nauru and Ocean Island were practically unknown to any save the geographer and the specialist. These islands are tiny specks of land lying in one of the loneliest spaces of the Pacific Ocean about 50 miles south of the Equator and some 3,000 miles west of the South American coast. In 1885 these islands, which were considered of no commercial value, were formally annexed by Germany. Some time afterward phosphate deposits were discovered on Ocean Island and some years later on Nauru. One of the effects of the world upheaval of August, 1914, was the formal transfer of these German islands to Great Britain under the terms of the mandate. An agreement was made on July 2, 1919, between the governments of the United Kingdom, the commonwealth of Australia and the dominion of New Zealand for the allotment of British-controlled phospates in the Pacific ocean on the basis of 42 per cent to the United Kingdom, 42 per cent to Australia and 16 per cent to New Zealand.

It now appears that the British Empire has acquired one of the richest supplies of phosphates in the world. It is stated that the formation of these phosphate deposits has been accomplished largely through the agency of fish-fed birds which have left vast deposits of guano on the islands. These deposits, mingling with the lime of the coral rocks, have practically converted the whole of the islands into great repositories of phosphate of lime. These phosphate deposits run to a depth of 40 feet on Nauru and 57 feet on Ocean Island. A representative sample of this island phosphate yields the following results, according to chemical analysis made for the British fertilizer trade:

Moisture Sample:	Per Cent
Water	3.87
Tribasic phosphate of lime	82.56
Ground sample (dried):
Carbonic acid	2.06
Equal to carbonate of lime	4.69
Phosphoric acid	39.34
Equal to tribasic phosphate of lime	85.89
Oxide of lime and alumina	.76
Organic matter and combined water	2.86

Neither island possesses harbor facilities. It has been necessary, therefore, to construct jetties, of the cantilever type, running far out over the reefs. The phosphate is taken far out on cars to these jetty heads and thence lightered to steamers, moored far out in deep water. Roughly, from 1,000 to 2,000 tons under good weather conditions, can be loaded on shipboard daily from the two islands, the present annual production of which is in the neighborhood of 350,000 tons.

The bulk of the phosphates so far has gone to Australia, but it is understood that arrangements have now been effected by Great Britain for taking up for home consumption its full quota. It is stated that the South Wales Basic Slag Co., Ltd., has just completed an arrangement between the British phosphate commissioners, acting in conjunction with the ministry of agriculture, for taking over Britain's 42 per cent allocation of the island's output of phosphate rock. This constitutes the largest transaction so far in the history of the British fertilizer industry, the previous most important deal having been in Florida phosphate rock, purchased by Great Britain during the war.

It is anticipated that some 180,000 tons of high grade island phosphate will be delivered to the United Kingdom each year and after mixture with basic slag will be distributed at farmers' stations as basic phosphate at something under three shillings per unit of phosphate of lime. The present quotations of phosphate of lime range above five shillings per unit. The first consignments of island phosphate are expected to arrive in England in June or July. It is learned that one-third of the company's output for the coming six months has already been contracted for.

Ageratum Fraseri

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraseri" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that it is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraseri" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about 8 to 10 inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ⅞ of an inch in diameter. The plant spreads about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant.

2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $ 6.00 per 100.

Another Popular Callahan Greenhouse

The Type E Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse shown above is another favorite with progressive florists. It offers wide center clearance and convenient, efficient benching arrangement. Its standard construction includes very strong roof bracing and gable end bracing.

This house is furnished in three standard widths (D), as follows: 27′-6″, 31′-0″ and 34′-4″. It includes all of the many features of Callahan design, such as the Easy-Splice V-Joint, extra large inside drip gutters, lapped and beveled roof bars, etc. You must see it to really appreciate it. And the cost is less.

American Peony Society.

Boston, Mass., June 18-19.

Annual Meeting and Exhibition.

With the co-operation of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the American Peony Society held a successful exhibtion and meeting in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., June 18-19. It has been a general complaint this season that the peony crop was not as good as in some previous years. We also venture to state that if the date of this exhibition had been a week earlier, there would have been more exhibitors, nevertheless, the weather not being a fixed quantity, it is impossible to always fix the dates in advance to conform to its whims.

Under unfavorable conditions the exhibitors showed commendable enterprise in placing so much stock. One instance was the case of T. C. Thurlow & Sons, Inc., West Newbury, Mass. This firm staged 5,000 or more blooms, but not all were in competition. There was a bed of mountain laurel in the center of the hall and vases of peonies were placed all around the four walls. They had also extensive exhibits in competition in the main hall. Harry A. Morton, Ayers Cliff, Que., was another exhibitor who, notwithstanding the distance, brought in excellent stock and captured first prizes. E. E. Randall, Pride's Crossing, Mass., made excellent displays, his first prize dark pink, with Mme. Gessler being particularly interesting. Good dark pink varieties noted in the exhibition were Jules Cabot, Walter Faxon, Coqulin, Sarah Bernhardt, Martha Bullock, and Triumphe de Lille. Good light pink kinds were Therese, Venus, La Perle, Mme. Jules Desseux and Albert Crousse. White: M. Dupont, La Lorraine, Tourangelle, Kelway's Glorious, Baroness Schroeder and Festiva Maxima.

A great attraction of the exhibition was the display of orchids (Miltonia vexillaria) by J. T. Butterworth, Framingham, Mass., for which he was awarded a gold medal. This exhibit occupied large space on one side of the hall, being staged on a background of cedars.

It is the custom of the American Peony Society to hold its meetings immediately after the banquet, this being the procedure on the evening of June 18. The dinner was an enjoyable function and enlivened by talks from members of the society and others. Among those present were President Wm. A. Peterson of the American Iris Society and Secretary John Wister of the American Rose society. President Lee R. Bonnewitz was in good form and presided at the banquet and later at the meeting. Secretary Saunders, in reading his report brought out that the society has 408 members, an increase of 100 in the past year. There was a general discussion relating to the good of the society. A proposal to hold two shows in different parts of the country each year was left to the decision of the directors. The treasurer's report showed $2,700 on hand.

W. E. Saunders, London, Ont., a brother of the secretary, was present and in well chosen remarks presented an invitation from the mayor and Chamber of Commerce of his city to hold the next annual meeting of the society there. The invitation was accepted by a unanimous vote of the society. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: A. H. Fewkes, Newton, Mass., president; Harry A. Norton, Ayers Cliff, Que., vice-president; Prof. A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., secretary, and A. H. Scott, Chester, Pa., treasurer.

President Bonnewitz's Address.

As peony growers, we are glad to meet in the metroplis of New England, the land of Hollis and of Richardson. We, from farther south, have been thinking of these two ancient peony enthusiasts very much the last few days, because Hollis' Supreme and Richardson's Grandiflora have been almost the last reminders of a perfect peony season. Peonies thrive in the sun and you, whose vocation keep you indoors, can at once see that we, who grow peonies, not only thrive in the sun, but that the sun itself leaves its mark upon us. Just glance around the room and you will have no trouble to decide at once which of us grow peonies by proxy, and which grow them with our own hands. I am a firm believer in the statement that the growing of this flower brings health, pleasure and a long and happy old age.

The American Peony Society was organized in the east less than two decades ago and as we look over the list of the original members we can at once see that it was formed by men who not only loved peonies, but who were also interested in growing them for profit. But a change is coming over the society. We are glad that it still contains those who are growing peonies for profit, but it is a great satisfaction to see that its membership is being swelled by great numbers of enthusiasts who grow this wonderful flower for its beauty, size, color and fragrance. These peony enthusiasts now so far outnumber the commercial growers that the society seems to consist almost wholly of amateurs, for I really believe that there are 10 amateurs in our organization to every one professional grower. And this brings to me the thought that as the amateurs so outnumber the professionals, we professionals should hand over to them more of the responsibilities of the society. At the present time I believe there is only one officer of the society, our treasurer, Mr. Scott, who is not in the business of selling peonies. The society has made two efforts to place amateurs at its head. Once in 1917, when it elected James Boyd, an amateur as president, but while in office he graduated into a professional grower. In 1919 the society again selected an amateur in the person of your present presiding officer, to look after the affairs of the society, but he followed Mr. Boyd's example and also became a professional grower. And so, at this meeting you have again the opportunity, if you so wish, to select an amateur to bring his enthusiasm into service for the advancement of the organization.

We are glad to report a very substantial increase in our membership during the past year. Probably twice as great an increase as has taken place in any former year, and this growth has brought with it a very satisfactory increase in finances, so that we are able to offer better premiums at this show than at any preceding one, and I doubt not that our treasurer's balance will also note satisfactory increases. All this augurs well for the future of the society, which I believe is destined to become one of the largest, if not the very largest flower growing organization in the world. It is true that we have our problems to solve, but I believe the membership is able to satisfactorily solve every one of them. Our last bulletin just issued by our efficient secretary shows much progress in the solution of the problem of the elimination of unsatisfactory varieties. We are proud of the good work of our able secretary and hope that he will live to be a centenarian, and that throughout his years he may be willing to devote his energies to such good work for the peony as he has been doing for the past 10 years. Doubtless there are other questions, on some of which we might not all now think exactly alike, but I am quite sure that time and thought will enable us to solve every problem in a satisfactory and harmonious manner.

This is the annual meeting of the society when every member is expected, or at least has the right, to be present. But we have come here today,

Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O.
President American Peony Society.

A. H. Fewkes, Newton, Mass.
President-Elect American Peony Society.

not for the purpose of exercising our rights, but for the privilege of being able to see a display of the flowers which we think are the most beautiful on earth. Now these flowers have all come from individual gardens and they have been brought here with the tender care of loving hands for your enjoyment and for mine, and we want to express to every exhibitor an appreciation of his loyalty to the aims and objects of our organization.

It is a pleasing thought that every peony enthusiast gathers unto himself a coterie of friends who absorb his enthusiasm for our favorite flower, and who in their turn spread the enthusiasm to others. I believe there is an unlimited field of opportunity for the sale of the finest varieties of peonies to millions of our people who do not now even know that the peony is a flower of such easy growth and culture, and do not realize what pleasure they are missing by failing to grow it in their gardens. There are many counties in the United States, where, at the present time, there is not a single high grade peony, and if you and I can by our own enthusiasm engender a desire for the possession of one of these treasures in the heart of even one individual in each of these communities, the result will be that the peony will become known as the great American flower, which can be grown successfully from Alabama to Alaska, and from California to Quebec.

Notes of the Show.

Leonard Barron, who has recently returned from a six weeks' trip to England and France, states that the nursery business is particularly good in England. In the latter country, the horticultural trades are recovering from the devastation of the war more rapidly than was expected.

President Bonnewitz, who seems to be mechanically inclined, has invented a galvanized iron combination of vase and basket for transporting flowers a distance. To avoid upsetting, the bottom is made heavy. He is not putting it on the market.

We humbly suggest to the peony and other infant societies that they exercise due care in labeling and also placing their award cards. If shows are held to interest the public, everything should be made as plain as possible.

Among those who discussed in the meeting and banquet, the various phases of the trade were R. T. Brown, Queens, L. I.; John C. Wister, Chas. E. Hoyt, W. H. Thurlay, Geo. N. Smith, and James Boyd.

Besides the officers, judges and those already mentioned, the following out-of-town visitors were noted: T. A. Havemeyer, Leonard Barron, and J. H. Lane, of New York, and Chas. E. Hoyt, of Danbury, Conn.

There was a good attendance on the afternoon of June 18, but a heavy rain in the evening kept the people at home; but rain was what the farmers and gardeners had been praying for.

Secretary Rich of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and James Wheeler make no noise in running a show, but they get there.

Bertrand H. Farr, of Wyomissing, Pa., delivered an interesting lecture, on the afternoon of June 18, on the culture of the peony.

Among the numerous exhibits of T. C. Thurlow & Sons was a collection of Japanese single peonies.

Kurume Azaleas.

At the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held at Boston, last year, one of the principal features was the exhibit of Kurume azaleas staged by the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass., the plants, particular mention of which was made in our columns at that time, numbering about 120 in more than 50 named varieties. They were found by E. H. Wilson in a garden at Kurume, a town on the southern island of Kyushu, Japan, and were secured for the Arboretum after long negotiations and at very considerable expense and sent to this country, according to the bulletin of the society.

At the Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, Calif., in 1915, a gold medal was awarded to a collection of 30 plants of these azaleas in 12 varieties. These plants were afterwards sold. No other exhibit of these azaleas, which botanists now consider forms of Azalea obtusa, has been made in America or Europe. In 1916, at Mr. Wilson's suggestion, John S. Ames, of North Easton, Mass., procured a number of small plants of these azaleas from the Yokohama Nursery Company. They arrived in the spring of 1917, and this was the first importation of Kurume azaleas into the eastern states. These plants have grown well and flowered profusely and their beauty and charm is the delight of their owner and his friends.

This race of lovely azaleas is remarkable for the abundance of its flowers and the lustre and purity of their colors. The flowers vary from pink to rose, cerise, lavender, mauve to magenta, salmon, vermilion, bright-red to deep scarlet, and to purest white. Many of them have a petaloid calyx and hose-in-hose flowers. In such flowers, the stamens, which are always five, and the pistil, are perfect and there is no malformation as in ordinary double-flowers. The anthers, which are light to dark, varying with the color of the corolla, add not a little to the pleasing appearance of the blossoms.

It seems incredible that after more than three-quarters of a century of intercourse with Japan, the occidental nations should not have known before Mr. Wilson's journeys in that country, all about this beautiful race of garden plants which has been developed to perfection by the flower-loving Japanese. This is, however, the case in regard to the Kurume azaleas. It is true, that one kind, named Hinodegiri, has been introduced into this country in quantity for several years past and has become quite a favorite, especially in the Pacific states. It is also true that an old inhabitant of our gardens, Azalea amoena, with its magenta-colored flowers, and the red-flowered Azalea obtusa belong to the Kurume group, but these are not the best kinds, and there are hundreds of varieties. In Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture V (1916) the above three kinds are mentioned, and the existence of others is briefly hinted at. In England, these Kurume azaleas appear to be no better known than here. Bean, in his

Trees and Shrubs Hardy in the British Isles, published in 1914, makes no mention of them; Millais, in his monograph of the genus rhododendron, published in 1917, says a few complimentary words about them, and lists about a dozen under Japanese R. indicum or R. indicum-amoenum hybrids.

E. H. Wilson, to whom we are indebted for most of this information, informs us that it was during the Arnold Arboretum expedition to Japan in 1914 that he first became acquainted with these Kurume azaleas when visiting at Hatogaya, a few miles north of Tokyo, the garden of a Mr. Oishi, who specialized in these flowers. The plants were very small, but Wilson was allowed to make a complete collection of dried specimens for the herbarium of the Arnold Arboretum. Curiously enough in and around Tokyo itself, Wilson found that the Azaleas amoena, obtusa and Hinodegiri were commonly grown but no others of the group.

On the Arnold Arboretum expedition in 1917-19 it was determined to make a full investigation of these azaleas, to visit the city where they have been originated, and the mountain on which the wild parents were reported to grow. Opportunity came in 1918, and, to Wilson's great good fortune, he had as companion H. Suzuki, the head of the Yokohama Nursery Company, and a most important personage in Japanese horticulture. The city of Kurume is on the island of Kyushu, and some 800 miles south by west from Tokyo. They arrived there May 3 to find the azaleas in full perfection of bloom. "I went prepared," says Mr. Wilson, "to see a display of blossoms, but the entrancing beauty of myriads of delicately colored flowers, covering a multitude of shapely grown plants, surpassed my most sanguine expectations. The gardens of Messrs. Akashi and Kuwano, the two leading specialists, were veritable fairy-lands, and I gasped with astonishment when I realized that garden-lovers of America and Europe knew virtually nothing of this wealth of beauty. Most of the plants were trained into low standards, each about 20 inches high, with a flattened or convex crown some 18 inches through, and were monuments to the patience and cultural skill of the Japanese gardener. Other shapes there were, but this was the favorite and most effective. The flowers, each about half to three-quarters of an inch across, and borne in clusters of from two to several at the end of every twig, were in such profusion as to almost completely hide the leaves. If a fault could be found, it was that the flowers were too numerous."

Specialists in Kurume recognize some 250 sorts and each has a name, but the distinguishing points are often too slight for the uninitiated to appreciate. More than 50 kinds are quite distinct one from the other, though for practical purposes they may be reduced to about 25. Messrs. Akashi and Kuwano selected as the very best the following six: Takasago (pure pink, hose-in-hose), Azuma-kagami (deep pink), Kirin (deep rose, shading to silvery rose), Kumonouye (pure salmon), Kurainohima (vermilion, hose-in-hose), Kurenoyuki (white, hose-in-hose).

Messrs. Wilson and Suzuki visited all the principal gardens and spent several hours in that of Kijiro Akashi, who for more than 40 years, has assiduously devoted himself to the development of these azeleas, and has raised from seeds and perpetuated by cuttings, nearly all the forms in cultivation. In his garden is the finest of all collections, and the loving pride with which this grand old gardener pointed out the particular merits of this or that pet can be appreciated only by those whose lives have been passed in close companionship with plants. In this garden Messrs. Wilson and Suzuki made a selection of 43 of the best sorts in duplicate, and later this was increased to 52 kinds. On April 24, 1919, this collection was unpacked at the Arnold Arboretum and all the plants found to be alive, and, considering the length of their journey, in good condition. For this, thanks are due to the skillful packers of the Yokohama Nursery Company, to whom the task was entrusted. Making the selection was much easier than persuading Mr. Akashi to part with his plants though, with true old-time Japanese politeness, he offered any or all that he had. He loved his plants, and one fully understands his sadness when the time to part with them actually came.

Mr. Akashi kindly furnished Mr. Wilson the details of the history of these azaleas as far as it is known. They were originated by a Japanese gentleman named Motozo Sakamoto, who lived in the city of Kurume about 100 years ago. The parents came from sacred Kirishima-yama (a volcanic mountain in south Kyushu still active) but whether brought from there by Mr. Sakamoto or given to him by some pilgrim is uncertain. At any rate, Sakamoto cultivated several varieties, and raised and selected seedlings, including one he named Azuma-kagami, from which it is claimed have descended all the pink-colored forms. After his death, Sakamoto's collection passed into the hands of K. Akashi. The original plant of Azuma-kagami is still healthy. Mr. Wilson photographed it, but failed to purchase it, though he tried hard to do so. Mr. Akashi showed a gold medal awarded to him for the exhibit of 30 plants in a dozen kinds of Kurume azaleas at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The plants were afterwards sold, and Mr. Akashi's pride in the gold medal seemed a little saddened when he thought of the loss of those 30 plants.

It was determined next to visit Mt. Kirishima, the place tradition says the parents came from. Mr. Wilson had visited this mountain early in March, 1914, and remembered that an azalea grew there, for he had gathered leafless specimens. A night was spent near the base of Mt. Kirishima, and starting early next morning, an altitude of 1000 meters, where forests abruptly give place to grass-land, was soon reached: above this, the mountain slopes were dotted with blossoming azalea bushes in great number. Mr. Wilson says, "They grow in volcanic soil on windswept grassy slopes and among rocks. In size, the bushes are from nearly prostrate to a yard high, and hardly two had flowers of the same shade of color. We gathered specimens of forms with pink, salmon, mauve to rich magenta-colored flowers; at a little higher altitude, red-flowered forms, and among these was an occasional white one. Much variation is found in the size and shape of the flowers and leaves; the anthers also vary in color. With the variety of forms on the mountain, we could accept as true the story of the origin of the Kurume azaleas, as given by K. Akashi and reiterated by others, for seedlings raised from a species with such multi-colored flowers, could easily give rise to all the colors in the garden forms of this group as is known today."

On the return journey, the nursery district round Osaka, where are grown most of the plants exported from Japan, was visited. The growers there are now taking up these Kurume azaleas, but the variety is limited, the plants indifferently grown, and the names usually changed. Fitly enough, it is in the town from whence they derive their name that they have been developed to their present day perfection, and so high is the standard of beauty that it is difficult to imagine how it can be improved upon. As to their suitability for outdoor gardens, there is every reason to believe that they will thrive wherever Azalea amoena has proved perfectly hardy in the open.

Chicago Commercial Flower Growers.

The annual banquet and stag of the Commercial Flower Growers' Association was held at the Randolph hotel, Thursday evening, June 16, and was well attended, about 75 members being present.

The principal business of the evening was the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: Peter Pearson, president; George Ball, vice-president; Otto Amling, secretary and N. J. Wietor, treasurer. Rudolph Ellsworth was re-elected to the board of directors and Joseph Kohout was selected to fill the vacany caused by the election of George Ball as vice-president. Walter A. Amling is the holdover member of the executive committee. Michael Wiltgen, Evanston, and George Haarer, Morton Grove, were admitted as members. It was decided to suspend the meetings during July and August. A communication was read from Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., which will be acted upon at a later meeting. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and the A. F. Amling Co. donated the roses and carnations which adorned the table. O. J. Friedman spoke on the coal question and told the members that he thought he could save them some money, provided they bought in large enough quantities.

The dinner was splendid and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. Benson furnished the music and entertainment, which was personally selected by the committee. Those in attendance joined in the singing. The Triangle Trio were exceptionally good and the Misses Irma Glen and Valerie Walker made a hit with everyone. Otto Amling, T. E. Waters, O. J. Friedman and others told some amusing stories which kept the crowd in an uproar at all times. The surprise of the evening occurred when August Poehlmann, in behalf of the members, presented the retiring president, Joseph Kohout, with a beautiful silver coffee set in recognition of his valuable services during his term of office. Mr. Kohout was so surprised with the beautiful gift that he was hardly able to thank the members for their kind token of appreciation. It was after 11 o'clock before the happy crowd dispersed and everyone agreed that it was one of the most enjoyable affairs the trade ever attended, due to the hard work of the committee consisting of Peter Pearson, chairman; August Poehlmann, Otto Amling and R. J. Windler.

TOLEDO, O.—This city is being made into a garden of flowers to welcome the thirty-third annual international supreme convention of the Loyal Order of Moose here on June 27. A campaign started here several months ago, had as its slogans, "Plant flowers in every spot where flowers can be made to grow," and "Welcome the Moose with flowers." As a result, flower planting has become almost a mania with the citizens.

Cost Systems for the Average Grower.

Address Delivered by Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland, Before the Ohio District of the National Flower Growers' Association at Columbus, June 21, 1921.

Cost per square feet of bench space per year for items listed from the records of the Friedley Co.

Figured on basis of 40,000 square feet bench space—

Labor and superintendent	$0.654
Proprietor or supervision salary optional	.129
Pots all sizes but average is taken	.145
Fuel—coal being used	.13
Fertilizers and insecticides	.017
Repairs and replacements	.024
Depreciation	.054
Insurance	.024
Rent or interest on investment	.074
Bonus to employes, if any	.016
Water	.006
General culture expense—wire, twine, etc.	.020
Delivery expense including drivers salaries	.136
Barn account—two horses, used entirely for green house	.017
Office expense—One bookkeeper, stationary and postage	.058
Telephone and telegraph	.007
Traveling directors fees, audits, dues, light	.015
Sales—This has been taken care of in superintendent and supervision salaries	.000
Advertising	.025
Discounts allowed	.005
Uncollectable accounts	.006
Interest on borrowed money	.018
Total of above items	$1.580
Estimated annual income gross should be	$2.500

Original cost of merchandise purchased, whether seeds or plants, must be added to above items. Should not be to exceed 50 cents per square foot, and much less would be possible.

This cost sheet is based on growing of the following plants and flowers: Twenty thousand chrysanthemums; 20,000 Boston ferns; 100,000 Paper White narcissi; 250,000 Holland bulbs; 5,000 single plants of poinsettias; 50 cases Easter lilies; 15,000 cyclamen; 20,000 geraniums; 5,000 vincas; 5,000 ivies; 2,000 Calla lilies; 3,000 baby rambler roses; 2,000 climbing and hybrid perpetual roses; 12,000 hydrangeas; 6,000 primroses; also assorted varieties of spring stock and Christmas stock; flats of table ferns, Valentine stock, Easter and Mothers' Day specials.

In order that we may be able to make this workable, let us take as an example a plant that has 10 houses 21 x130 feet, which has three benches five feet wide and 125 feet long, or a total of 625 square feet. In the entire plant would be 18,750 square feet. For all the items listed, it would cost to operate these houses 18,750× $1.58 or a total of $29,625. Now if the operator would be one of the type that buys much young stock, this cost would increase until it would be a maximum of 50 cents per square foot additional or another $9,375, making a total of $39,000. If this plant produced less than this amount gross, it would be advisable for the operator to make some very serious investigations, since he would find without this investigation that sooner or later he would be going into bankruptcy or working long hours with but little return; excepting perhaps if he were propagating all of the stock which he was finishing. So to bring this home to every pot plant grower, quickly figure out how many square feet of bench space you have, not glass area or ground covered, but actual square feet of benches and multiply by $1.58 per square foot per year and add to it all the stock you buy for growing on and the total will give you approximately what it has cost you to operate your green house per year. These figures are not guessed at or estimated, but are an exact transcribe of a complete set of books covering a period of two years. However, they are high because the past two years operation has been exceptionally high and for that reason a safe method to adopt.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Now let us try some specific item, such as chrysanthemums, and see how it works out. These should all be planted by July 1 and harvested by December 1, so that for average's sake we can easily figure five months since some will be planted early in June and can be marketed in middle October, but the average will work out correctly.

Let the amount be 20,000 plants. This takes one bench of 625 square feet to carry the stock plants from December to May or six months and six-twelfths of $1.58, the cost per year, or 79 times per square foot and 79 times 625 square feet would be a total of $493.75, the cost of the plants by the time they went into the sand.

Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland, O.

Three months in sand on 300 square feet space would cost one-fourth of a year's cost for space or one-fourth of $1.58, which is 39 cents in round figures and 300 times 39 would total $117. Now 1,300 square feet will hold these plants for one month; that is, the space they will consume will not occupy more all told than 1,300 square feet for one month and one-twelfth of $1.58 is 13 cents or $169. So far the plants have cost us a total of $779.75 for 20,000 plants, which is $38.98 per thousand. This represents the actual cost. Twenty thousand plants can be planted in 11,250 square feet of bench space. They will occupy this space as stated before for a period of five months. Then five-twelfths of cost per year or $1.58 would give the cost per square foot, which is 65 cents in round figures and 11,250 times 65 cents is $7,312.50, plus cost of plants, which is $779.75 or a total of $8,092,25. This would mean that you must get at least 40 cents per plant out of chrysanthemums to make them pay. This is figured high for the reason that the heat would only be applied practically one month and the pots would be omitted altogether. This would reduce the unit cost from $1.58 to $1.32, but only on the last five month's operations and with one month's fuel added in, this would change to be something like this:

Five-twelfths of $1.32 or 55 cents times 11,250, total of $6,187.50 plus cost of plants, $779.75 is a total of $6,967.25 or approximately 35 cents per plant. Chrysanthemums are a pretty hard proposition to grow and make money. It is only because they can be grown as a crop when otherwise the space would be empty.

CYCLAMENS.

Let us now take 20,000 cyclamen. To start with the seed, the cost is usually $12 per thousand, total $240. The space they take up before being ready for the sold bench is approximately 150 square feet, four months, or 53 cents times 150, total $79.50. One bench four feet wide and 120 feet long will hold the seed planted in the bench instead of pots from December to April 1 or four months, and four months would be one-third of $1.58 cost per year or 53 cents times 480, the number of square feet in bench or $254.40. As we plant them, they are put into benches instead of pots from April 1 to July 1, which takes up 3,750 square feet three months, then take one-fourth of $1.58 which is 39 cents times 3,750, a total of $1,462.50.

From this point on the amount of space they take up varies, but it can be figured on a total amount of space used and reduced to one month which I will do. July, nine benches, August, 10 benches, September, 11 benches, October, 11 benches, November, 10 benches, December, 10 benches, January, six benches, February, three or a grand total of 70 benches for one month. Six hundred and twenty-five square feet on a bench times 70 totals 43,750 square feet for one month at 13 cents per square foot totals $5,687.50. This makes a grand total cost of $7,723.90. Figuring so that we may check, we find the equivalent of 57, 370 square feet has been used for a period of one month to grow the cyclamen crop. At a cost of approximately 13 cents per square foot, you can see we are not very far off in using the average of 13 cents per square foot of bench space per month.

HYDRANGEAS.

Usually you must buy young stock and it seems as though this is the cheapest since when your plants all flower well enough so that there are no cuttings, then your crop will bring the highest return making it cheaper in the long run to buy. Figure the young stock if your own propagation and on a basis of 12,000 plants that they will consume for the active time before being put into the field approximately 4,500 square feet for one month and 4,500 times 13 cents, the cost per square foot totals $585 or a cost of four and eight-tenths cents each. I have gone over our outdoor records carefully and find that it takes approximately 800 hours labor to hoe, spray, sprinkle, cultivate, pot and bring into the greenhouse a lot of 12,000 plants and at 65 cents per hour, total cost is $520. To this cost should be figured the fertilizer that is necessary, water, the interest on investment of land and any horse labor that is required. This would add another additional $200, making a total cost on all until brought into greenhouse in fall of $1,305 or an average cost per plant of approximately 11 cents. This, of course, does not allow for the pot, since this item is accounted for in the greenhouse under so much per square foot bench space. Neither does this assume that every plant is a specimen, but takes into consideration only the average. It has been our experience that the amount of plants has shrunk until they cost us in six-inch pots somewhere between 29 and 34 cents each. However, our average grade has been lower than it should be because of soil conditions. After these plants are brought into the greenhouse and stored in the cold house and chrysanthemum houses, then later put into the forcing house, our records show that these plants all told, good, bad and indifferent, consumed 31,250 square feet of bench space collectively for one month and at 13 cents make a total cost of $4,062.50 for entire lot, plus cost when ready to come into the greenhouse of $1,305, or a grand total cost of $5,367.50, or an average cost per plant of $.447.

You notice this seems low but then you know that this is for the average only and the average saleable plants are as a rule low. In our case, as stated before they shrink as low as 35 per cent of the original amount, which would increase the cost to almost three times or approximately $1.34 for each finished plant in a six-inch pot. The producer makes it possible to lower his cost down to a basis where the plant suitable for a six-inch pot should not cost more than 35 cents in the field and 39 cents to force it, making total cost of 74 cents, but this means for every plant, so the more that do not flower the higher goes up the price of those that do flower. The seven-inch plants cost on this average 95 cents each and the eight-inch plants $1.52 each. It takes one square foot of bench space to flower the six-inch plant, one and one-half square feet for the seven-inch plant and three square feet for the eight-inch plant.

BOSTON FERNS—20,000.

These are figured on the basis of six-inch plants. While we do not grow all in six-inch plants, yet the six-inch size gives a good basis to average.

Young plants cost about $6 per hundred. It takes 750 plants to a bench of 625 square feet. You can get three crops in a year or 2,250 plants per year on 625 square feet and at $1.58 per square foot cost per year, total cost of plants would be $987.50 and each plant would cost approximately 44 cents. This price seems low, but as stated before, it is on the basis that every plant becomes a perfect specimen. The great factor which goes into the cost of production in the greenhouse business is the amount of perfect plants which come out of a crop from the beginning to the end. I am giving you the lowest cost for 100 per cent production basis and wherever there are any plants lost or do not come through perfectly, this of course, adds to the cost of the perfect plants.

I could go into the analysis of each individual plant but I do not believe that this is necessary. If you will apply this general law, you will not make a mistake. A finished four-inch plant takes approximately three plants to the square foot, a six-inch plant, one to the square foot, seven-inch plant, one and one-half square feet to the plant and an eight-inch plant three square feet to the plant. Every florist knows approximately how long it takes to finish a plant and if you will take the cost of the young stock and market quotations will always govern fairly safe in that regard, and then find out the length of time this plant is in the various stages from the small pot to the finished stage and multiply this space occupied by 13 cents for every square foot, you can easily obtain the actual cost per plant. With the items which I have quoted above, the prices which I have given you will answer your purpose so far as getting down to a fixed basis is concerned. Through the same line of reasoning, I find that it costs approximately 13 cents to grow a four-inch geranium. Get these factors fixed clearly in your mind that $1.58 is the cost of a square foot of bench space for a year, 13 cents for a month, that means propagation, house and all complete, that whenever a square foot of bench space is idle it is costing you 13 cents a month to leave it idle and the sooner that it is made to work, that much quicker it will help to reduce the price per square foot on the average over the entire place. I am satisfied that 13 cents is an unusual high cost, that with proper culture methods and efficient and constant filling in of stock in your benches that the price should be not to exceed about 10 cents per square foot per month.

Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Ass'n.

The wholesale Cut Flower Association met at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, June 16, with August Poehlmann in the chair. The main business of the evening was the election of officers which resulted as follows: Paul Klingsporn, president; Eric Johnson, vice-president; A. C. Kohlbrand, secretary and Philip Schupp, treasurer.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The greatest of our national holidays, the glorious Fourth of July, now looms up and should be given a warm reception and recognition by the trade everywhere. Get out the flags and the bunting, the bust of General Washington, a copy of the Declaration of Independence, a picture of the immortal trio with the fife and drum, and arrange these in good decorative effect in the window, with vases of red, white and blue flowers. In addition to showing your patriotism it is the best kind of publicity, as it features a day in which all are interested and certain to be attracted by the novel display. Begin decorating on July 2, as this year's fourth will be one of the triple holidays lasting from Friday night until Tuesday morning. Make this the best thing of the kind you have ever featured. It will be sure to add prestige and bring business.

Now that the season is practically over give an hour or two to a retrospect of the business of the past 12 months. Was it satisfactory? If not, why? One of the most essential books is that in which is kept a record of the business week by week, with details of the trade of the various holidays and other extra demand periods, with explanatory notes made at the time when the matter was fresh in mind as to how the business could be increased and more economically conducted. With this invaluable data at hand the planning for the coming season can be worked out much more effectively, past mistakes avoided, and new ideas in store management and efficiency worked out that should be most beneficial.

It is now inventory time, a matter that is sadly neglected by many. A careful going over the stock at this time is most beneficial. Without handling every piece and ascertaining its value the result is pure guess work. Some of the stock will be found to be of the year before which has stood on the shelves unnoticed. This is not good storekeeping. The various articles, baskets in variety, ferneries, flower bowls, vases and pottery of all kinds should be featured again and again in their season, particularly articles that for various reasons do not seem to take. In some cases a price reduction is necessary, but featuring is best and in most cases will be found to do the trick. All fancy stock not likely to sell at this time of the year should be dusted and stored away so as to be bright and fresh on the opening of the autumn season. Articles that need repair or will be the better with a touch of paint and gilt should have this attention as soon as possible, for otherwise it soon becomes junk and is then a total loss.

Philip C. Schupp, Chicago.
Treasurer Wholesale Cut Flower Dealers.

With the closing of the books there will be found bills that are badly in need of collection. Except for those who have no intention of paying and are found to be not responsible, diplomacy is better than threats. Letters first presenting the matter as an oversight and proving ineffective should be followed with others appealing to their sense of right. One after another of these will be sure to eventually bring an answer of some kind with perhaps a payment on account or a promise to pay at a certain time. This period must never be forgotton by the bookkeeper. Always use plain envelopes, as these are sure to be opened. Where amounts worth while are apparently uncollectable, it is best to obtain a judgment, which, when filed in court, has to be paid in case the debtor becomes interested through a legacy and before a settlement of the estate can be made.

KEEP THE STORE ARTISTICALLY ARRANGED.

While trade is light at this season, there should be a supply of flowers in such variety as will convince customers that their business will be well taken care of. A dainty little basket or two or a decorated wreath in the case, shows the artistic ability and gives confidence to the strangers buying for the first time. Phlox, gladioli, larkspur, cornflowers and water lilies are comparatively inexpensive flowers, that if decoratively handled will give the store an attractive appearance. A rest chair or two, with palm leaf fans to hand out to customers these torrid days, will be much appreciated.

In the past 10 years the trade has taken great strides forward, particularly in the organization of the various branches of the business. All these bodies are offshoots of the grand old Society of American Florists, to which everyone connected with the trade in any capacity will be honored by becoming a member. In fact, it is their duty to join this great body of representative men who have done so much in the wonderful annual convention proceeding to advance their interests and in the exhibitions to lay before the entire trade of the country, the latest mechanical devices and up-to-date stock used in the betterment of their business. In the national campaign now on to increase the membership of this body, every retailer, large or small, should join and interest himself in bringing in a friend, all of whom will be sure to benefit by their association with these best men of the trade.

OCONOMOWOC, WIS.—The Gould Co. has shipped 11,000 peony blooms this season from its 10 acre tract near this city.

PORT HURON, MICH.—A peony and sweet pea show was held recently under the auspices of the Port Huron Horticultural Society at the James A. Davidson store. Over 1,000 peony blooms in 12 varieties were displayed. The Mund Floral Co., St. Clair, and M. Ullenbruch were among the exhibitors.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The publicity committee is getting its plans in shape for the forthcoming publicity drive in the magazines, the only anxiety now being as to the wherewithal for financing this effort. As has been said before, the money required must actually be in hand, hence the committee's concern. A good many guarantees are still to be discharged, and once more we urge all those who have pledged themselves, to send cheques covering their pledges without further delay. There has been plenty of evidence lately to show that the slogan is worth all we can expend on it. In cartoons, editorial headlines, and in other ways it has been featured. "They Said It With Flowers" is now a common headline used to cover public functions of various kinds, and the dear public sits up and takes notice of it. The head of our nation was recently cartooned in a prominent New York daily as "Saying It With Flowers."

The campaign fund has been augmented by the following subscriptions since our last report:

Fisher & McGrath, New Castle, Pa.	$25.00
George W. Marshall, Okmulgee, Okla.	5.00
S. C. Derrick, Cooperstown, N. Y.	5.00
B. J. Macklin, Cambridge, Mass.	5.00
Cleveland Cut Fl. Co., Cleveland, O.	50.00
W. A. Worrel, Pocatello, Idaho	100.00
Eldred Flower Shop, Pasedena, Calif.	10.00
G. W. Frisch & Son, Dayton, O.	10.00
Hugo Teute, Rochester, N. Y.	5.00
Groffe & Dresel, Chicago.	10.00
W. E. Day Co., Syracuse, N. Y.	10.00
C. E. Rossiter & Son, Sunbury, Pa.	5.00
Oregon Fl. Club Ass'n, Portland, Ore.	125.00
The Doswell Fl. Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.	10.00
August L. Kroner, Quincy, Ill.	5.00
Elec. City Conserv'y, Great Fall, Mont.	10.00
Ben Boldt, Denver, Colo.	10.00
	$ 310.00
Previously reported	25,188.60
Total	$25,498.60

All who have not yet subscribed to the fund are assured that there could be no better time than now to render their support. The big publicity effort about to be made will be governed entirely by the amount of money available for it, and the greater it can be made, the greater the resulting benefit.

WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

The Ladies' Society of American Florists has prepared a folder which will surely interest the ladies who are thinking of attending the convention, August 16-18, and should convince not a few others that it would be a splendid idea to plan to make the trip. There is no more interesting city in the United States to visit than Washington, and with a large gathering of kindred souls in attendance at the convention it should prove doubly interesting. This folder will be mailed to our whole membership very shortly, with other printed matter concerning the gathering.

TRADE EXHIBITION.

The space available in the trade exhibition is going fast, and a banner show is already assured. The following names of exhibitors are in addition to those already reported:

Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Baum's Home Flowers, Knoxville, Tenn.

Lima Sheet Met. Prod. Co., Lima, O.
Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J.
S. H. Russin, New York.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The plan of the trade section of the big show to be held in Cleveland, O., next March is completed, and plates ready for the printer, so that it is now only a matter of days before prints will be ready for mailing to those likely to be interested.

Although the guarantee fund covering the exhibition's finances is practically closed, a subscription from W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass., is this week reported, making the fund total $20,657.00.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Publicity Campaign.

The following tale expresses beyond doubt the conditions of the florist of today as against former times and now more than ever illustrates why we should continue both our national publicity campaign as well as our local advertising. We may not find the road quite so smooth as at present and may need our reserves for future building. Hence the story with the hope that many will get an inspiration.

SCRATCH.

Once there was an old hen who had passed the time when she needed to worry about the axe. She had helped many broods of chickens to see the light and had been, indeed, through the war. This wise old hen felt she knew all there was to know. This is a sad state to get into. There came a season of warm rain and lots of it, when the worms were washed out of the ground and lay in lush profusion about her feet. She didn't have to scratch. The worms, and the delicious bugs, flocked about her, and crawled over her feet, and she ate rapidly and heedlessly. Came a time when she waxed exceeding fat, and her appetite became finicky. She would strut about the barnyard and kick bugs and worms out of her path, if they were not of the best variety. In fact, this old hen became mighty choosy about her food, and many an insect bit her in the foot with impunity. She wouldn't deign even to look down.

Then imperceptibly things began to change and the worms weren't quite so profuse as before. But the old hen knew that this was only temporary and that good times would soon return. So she leaned luxuriously against the barn door and dreamed cute little dreams about hen heaven and the joys that were there for her. The worms grew scarcer and scarcer and the old hen began to lose some of her surplus fat. She finally had to dig into her reserve fat, and on that day she began to wake up to the fact that food was not going to crawl down her throat as it had in the near past. So she leaned up against a tree and moaned, and groaned over the hard times that had come. She grew thinner and more thin, until she staggered unseeingly around the barnyard, all out of sorts with herself and with the world. There was not a grain of hope left.

She finally fell through the fence of the pigsty in a stupor, and lay there all skin and bones, crying as though her heart would break. "Oh, dear, what will become of me! Oh, dear, oh, dear!"

"What are you sobbing about?" said an old fat pig, who was rooting about in the rich brown mud. "Oh, there is nothing to eat, and I am starving for food," she moaned.

"What rot!" remarked the pig, in his swinish way. "No food indeed! There are millions of worms for you right under the surface of all this nice brown mud, if you only had the gumption to scratch a little. Scratch for your grub, and you'll have plenty. Scratch, darn you, scratch."

And the hen, being an old one, had sense enough to listen and to try the advice of the old pig who was so fat, and lo! she found that it was true. There were not as many worms as in the good old times, but there were enough to put flesh back on her bones, and pep back into her old muscles. Young hens wouldn't have had the gumption unless they were exceptional young hens.

Moral: Scratch early and often during the lean times. There are just as many worms, but they are harder to find.—King's Round Table and The Keystone.

Oklahoma State Florists' Association.

The Oklahoma State Florists' Association will hold its annual convention at Oklahoma City, July 7-8. A new constitution will be adopted, and it is urged that all members attend, as other important business matters will be discussed. One of the features of the meeting will be a baseball game between a team organized from members of Furrow & Co.'s establishment at Guthrie and the state association.

Among the papers to be presented will be one by Mrs. Shaw, of Canyon City, Tex., on "Armistice Day." Mrs. Shaw recently initiated a movement to make November 11 an international flower day for the soldier dead of all countries. Other papers that will be read, include: "Relation of Cost to Price," by Percy Cowan, Enid, and "Carnation Fungus," by John Furrow, Guthrie.

Texas State Florists' Association.

SAN ANTONIO MEETING, JULY 12-14.

The following have been extended a special invitation to attend the Texas State Florists' convention: W. H. Englehart, president Tennessee State Florists' Association; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Henry Penn, chairman of the publicity committee of the Society of American Florists; Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association; Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., and A. S. Gray, president of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association.

These are some of the distinguished florists that we believe will be present at the Texas State Florists' Association convention, and if some of the trade from out of the state, in traveling long distances can see their way clear to be present at our convention, then we feel that every florist in Texas should make their arrangements to attend the San Antonio convention, July 12-14. I want to repeat again that the coming convention will be the greatest in the history of the organization and much good will be derived from the many valuable papers that will be presented.

All Texas and southern florists are urged to co-operate with the Society of American Florists in its drive for new members. Every employer should see that the members of his firm affiliate not only with the national organization but with the state association as well. Members of the trade are asked to mail their checks for one year membership amounting to $5 in the Society of American Florists and $3 in the Texas State Florists' Association to the secretary, Main and McKinney streets, Houston, Tex.

R. C. KERR, Sec'y.

F. C. Suchy, the Mission Florist of San Antonio, writes: "Outside of the regular convention programme, we have planned for the first day a luncheon at the St. Anthony hotel, the official headquarters. The second day, after the regular business, we will drive around to all the missions, ending with a watermelon feast in the Hot Wells hotel grounds. On the third day there will be a regular Mexican fiesta at our beautiful lily pond in the Mexican village, including Mexican dances and singing."

Mr. Suchy closes by inviting everybody to come, assuring all of a hearty welcome.

Missouri State Florists' Association.

ANNUAL CONVENTION, JUNE 27.

By special invitation of the Kansas City Florists' Club, the Missouri State Florists' Association will hold its annual convention in that city in the Knights of Columbus hall, 1121 Grand avenue, Monday, June 27. All members are urged to be present and bring an eligible prospect. There will be important matters to come up before the meeting, including the annual election of officers. Automobile rides to the greenhouses, parks and other places of interest will be a feature. Members of the association are cordially invited to be present at a session of the Kansas City Florists' Club, to be held at 7:30 p. m. the same day, to hear addresses by Messrs. J. F. Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson, who have recently returned from a Pacific coast trip in the interest of co-operative advertising.

An interesting programme has been prepared for the morning and afternoon sessions of the state association. After business matters have been finished, the following papers will be presented: "Development of Floriculture in Missouri," by G. A. Knapp, Nevada; "Benefits of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association Service to the Retail Florists," by Wm. Rock, Kansas City; "The Wholesale Florist," by H. G. Berning, St. Louis; "Retail Store Management," by Frank X. Gorly, St. Louis; "Promoting the Planting of Hardy Perennials," by Bryson Ayres, Independence; "Latest Developments in Plant Breeding," by R. L. Isherwood, Chillicothe; "How the State Fair Benefits Horticulture," by H. S. Wayman, Princeton, and "Missouri's One Hundredth Anniversary," by Governor Lloyd, St. Louis.

Wisconsin State Florists' Association.

The third semi-annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association will be held at Madison, July 19, with headquarters at the New Park hotel. The committee in charge promises an interesting programme every minute of the day. Outside of a business session at 1:30 p. m., the day will be given to entertaining.

WHAT you know will work wonders if you only apply it.

THE new tariff bill is not expected to be enacted before October.

ACCORDING to the currency provision of the emergency tariff, federal reserve rates of exchange on the day of exportation shall be used whenever the actual rate, considered for the purpose of assessing duty, shows an appreciation or depreciation of five per cent from the standard rate.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, Mrs. George Asmus, has made the following appointments for the convention to be held in Washington, D. C., August 15:

Auditor—Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.

Introduction Committee—Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, Mrs. George H. Cooke, Mrs. C. Schellhorn, Miss Amelia Gude, and Miss Louise Gude.

MRS. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Bureau Investigation.

We understand President Harding has appointed or will appoint a special commission to investigate the work of federal bureaus. This commission would seem the proper body to be informed by florists, seedsmen and nurserymen, through their legislative committees or representatives, as to the harmful and wasteful operation of sundry quarantines, particularly Plant Quarantine No. 37, and the free distribution by the government of common garden seeds and nursery stocks as bribes to voters.

Birthday Flowers.

The decision of the New York Florists' Club regarding the selection of birthday flowers, in which it was thought unwise to name a separate flower as being, in preference to all others, the birthday flower of the month is sensible and sound. All flowers are beautiful and appropriate, to designate certain varieties for the various months, would create a situation much like the white carnation for Mothers' Day, causing a lot of trouble with little profit. Birthday remembrances should be kept to the front every day in the year, featured in connection with all seasonable flowers as the most appropriate gift.

Corn Borer Hearing.

The European corn borer (Pyrausta nubilalis Hubn.), a dangerous insect not heretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, occurs in portions of Canada. It appears necessary, therefore, to consider the advisability of prohibiting the further importation from Canada of celery, green beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemums, asters, cosmos, zinnias, hollyhocks, and cut flowers or entire plants of gladioli and dahlias, except the bulbs thereof, without stems, in addition to the plants and plant products already prohibited or restricted entry by Quarantine No. 41.

Notice is, therefore, hereby given that, in compliance with Section 7 of the plant quarantine act of August 20, 1912, a public hearing will be held at the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., Room 10, Entomology building, at 10 a. m., on June 28, 1921, in order that any person interested in the subject of the proposed amendment of this quarantine may appear and be heard either in person or by attorney.

Fulbruge's Flowers, Inc.

The store for many years operated by the L. L. May Co., 90 East Sixth street, St. Paul, Minn., has been purchased by Fulbruge's Flowers, Inc. Chas. R. Fulbruge, for the past 10 years with Holm & Olson, has the management of the new firm. The store sale was made March 19, but owing to a general remodeling and redecorating of the entire store, and the installing of new fixtures, the formal opening took place June 20. The firm is incorporated to conduct a general florist business embracing all tributary branches. Gertrude M. Distel, also for many years with Holm & Olson, recently severed her connection with that firm and will be associated with Fulbruge's Flowers, Inc. Robt. Messmer and Kathryn Dietrich, formerly with Mazey's, Minneapolis, have been added to the store staff.

The officers of the new firm are: C. R. Fulbruge, president and treasurer; Gertrude Fulbruge, vice president; H. D. Frankel, secretary.

The L. L. May Co. will devote their efforts entirely to the nursery business.

Dutch Bulbs.

Up to about three weeks ago the crop of hyacinths and early tulips was very promising. Owing to the entire absence of rainfall, however, in May, and very hot weather towards the latter part of the month, these crops have ripened off quite suddenly and the consequences are that all hyacinths have remained undersized so that large bulbs will be exceedingly scarce, and the quantity of first size tulips will be considerably smaller than anticipated. It, therefore, looks at the present moment as if some of the varieties will be scarce for best quality stock and prices higher, so that it would be out of place under the present circumstances to ask for price reductions.

The following items are now already considered subject to advance in prices: Hyacinth Gertrude (generally very poor crop); Tulips Rose Gris de Lin, Rose Luisante, Vermilion Brilliant, Yellow Prince, Couronne d'Or, Imperator, Proserpine, Coleur Cardinal, Belle Alliance, Artus.

Golden Spur narcissus has advanced in price.

Postal Savings.

The total deposits in the United States postal savings system on May 31 were approximately $155,500,000. The net amount on deposit suffered a decrease, yet the decrease was not as great as that of the previous month. As labor conditions become adjusted, the heavy withdrawals necessitated to meet living conditions are gradually declining.

During the month of May four offices made gains of over $12,000, namely: Tacoma, Wash., $348,185; Dallas, Tex., $16,949; Miami, Fla., $16.67, and Boston, Mass., $12,328.

One hundred and thirty-five postal savings depositories now have over $100,000 on deposit.

Washington Convention Hotel Rates.

The Society of Ameicran Florists, through its committee on hotels, has been able to secure special rates at hostelries in Washington, D. C., for the annual convention of the society, August 16-18. The hotels and the amounts asked are presented herewith:

Hotel	Single room	Single room and bath	Double room	Double room and bath
Raleigh	$3.00-$4.00	$4.00-$7.00	$4-$6	$5-$10

STOCK MOVES WITH DIFFICULTY.

Business conditions remain about the same as reported last week, a large supply of stock with a limited demand. An occasional commencement or wedding causes a little flurry, but not enough to clean up the market. The weather has been very warm, which has caused some of the stock to arrive in a wilted condition and practically makes it unsalable. White roses, lily of the valley and orchids and gladioli are the items most in demand and there is never a surplus of either. Outside of these it takes pushing and price concessions to make other stock move. The supply of roses is large and some of the stock is poor. Carnations move slowly and at bargain prices, and the most of them are showing the effects of the warm weather. It will not be long until they are done, although some of the growers have arranged for crops to last until asters begin to arrive. Easter lilies are in short supply, which is just as well, as it is hard to realize enough from them to allow the grower to break even. Delphinium has been a big factor in the local market this season, but it has been overdone, and consequently prices are low. Outdoor stock is in heavy supply and includes Sweet Williams, coreopsis, corn flowers, gaillardia and larkspur. What few sweet peas are arriving are of very good quality and sell readily. Asparagus plumosa has been in over supply, and most of the southern shipments have arrived in very poor condition. Although some of the retailers are complaining about business, the wholesale houses claim that June will show a healthy increase over last season. Prices are much lower than last year, but the quantity of stock handled is much larger.

NOTES.

Much publicity is being given to the big joint meeting of the Retail Florists' Association and the Florists' and Gardeners' Club to be held in September. The members of both organizations are very enthusiastic and are working to make this the best meeting of its kind ever held in this district.

Miss Maxwell, Wilkinsburg, reports the largest June business in her history, and the G. P. Weaklin Co., East Liberty, reports likewise, so someone is getting the business.

The wholesale houses are now working on summer hours from 7 a. m. until 5 p. m. daylight saving time, which is one hour faster than eastern time.

Walter Faulk, of the north side, has been confined to his home for several days with pneumonia, but at this writing is on his way to recovery.

Miss Emma De Bortoli, of Elwood City, Pa., is in the West Penn hospital, but expects to leave in a few days.

McClements, on Wood street, are showing some very attractive combinations in fruits and flowers.

Homer D. Wood, of The McCallum Co., spent a few days in Cleveland, O., last week on business.

JUNE TRADE COMES IN SPURTS.

The demand for flowers during June has been very spasmodic, going at times when florists were forced to go at top speed to fill orders, to days when mid-summer dullness prevailed. What business there is comes when some school holds its commencement exercises or some well-known person passes out of this life. Weddings have not been as numerous as was the case last year, yet some florists report very sizable orders for this class of work. Growers report a steady call for bedding stock because of the late season. The weather during the past week has been clear and very hot, bringing all sorts of garden flowers into the market. There is a fair demand for these. There is a large supply of excellent roses on the market. Carnations are still plentiful enough for the demand but will soon be done. Other seasonable flowers are on hand in good quantities.

NOTES.

Carl Hagenberger, West Mentor, president of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association; L. C. Vinson, executive secretary, Cleveland, and Lars Anderson, Rocky River, were here last Monday to attend the local meeting held at Schramm Bros. A good number of local growers were present. The visitors explained the constitution and by-laws and answered many questions concerning policies and benefits to be derived from the organization.

This is the vacation season for florists and many will soon be out of the city recuperating after a strenuous season. When all the circumstances are considered, it is really remarkable the way the call has kept up during the past six months; other lines have shown substantial decreases, but the trade here as a rule can show a good increase. This goes to show that flowers are no longer considered an absolute luxury.

Schramm Bros. do not believe in letting business take its course during these so-called dull months. They are conducting an active campaign for the sale of birthday bouquets, anniversary flowers, weddings, and for new arrivals in the home. They had an excellent stork window last week that attracted considerable attention and resulted in increased demand.

A thief crawled through the transom of the Century Flower Shop one night last week and extracted a few simoleons from the cash register. Since the million dollar post office robbery, no one pays any attention to the theft of a few dollars.

Hall's Flower Shop, successor to the Navarre Flower Shop, is conducting an active campaign for June bridal business. They have an attractive display in their window featuring this class of business. A miniature bride is used to good advantage.

Harry Turvey in West Toledo reports a healthy demand for flowers. His business located in a growing suburb, is showing substantial gains every year and Harry is deserving of prosperity.

Albert Lehmann and wife left on Friday for a two weeks' motor trip in Michigan. They will spend the time at Houghton lake fishing.

Max Spanner is planning on rearranging his shop on Madison avenue during the dull season. The entire store will be repainted and redecorated.

SEVERE DROUGHT AFFECTS STOCK.

This section, all through the month of May, was visited by a most distressing drought, which was broken one day this week, but not enough to remedy the damage already done to vegetation, both flowers and vegetables. Most of the florists have sold out their entire stock of plants, but many of the smaller dealers still have some left, which are retailed in the open market or on the streets. Prices in all kinds of small plants are still good. With the uptown florists, trade continues excellent. While the commencement season is virtually over, it was unusually good while it lasted. All the florists report great activity in wedding orders, and the attendant festivities in pre-nuptial affairs, of which there are many. The supply is good. Roses were never better; Columbia, Premier, Milady, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ward, Ophelia, Butterfly and Killarney are all equally popular. They are coming on in great profusion. Carnations are not so plentiful, but sweet peas and gladioli are in excellent supply. There are plenty of lilies in the market, and as funeral work is good, there is great use for them. Other smaller flowers, like candytuft, feverfew, mignonette, calendulas, and even pansies are used considerably in corsage bouquets and in funeral designs.

The Joy Floral Co. is enabled to make large shipments daily to its Chattanooga, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., establishments, shipping many hundred of roses daily. The trade in each of these branch houses has been very good, far exceeding what was hoped or expected of them.

A number of handsome wedding orders for next week have been obtained by Geny Bros. Funeral work has also been good with them. Their pot plants sold out at a good profit.

STOCK IS IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Stock of all kind is in large supply but the quality in general is nothing to speak of, owing to the hot weather of last week. Roses are plentiful, but good first-class shipping stock is scarce and is commanding fair summer prices, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, which is in splendid demand. The weather was unusually hot last week but it is cooler at this writing and an improvement in the quality of the roses is already particularly noticeable. Carnations are in large supply, but good, fresh shipping stock is selling at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per 100. Most of the carnations that arrived the past week plainly showed the affects of the hot weather and some of the wholesalers were glad to dispose of all they could at whatever prices they would bring; naturally the department stores, one of which advertised them at 11 cents per bunch, furnished the best outlet. Orchids are holding their own, with the best cattleyas bringing $3 each. Lily of the valley is having a good call with the better grades selling at $8 per 100. Sweet peas have seen their best days. Gladioli are quite a factor in the market with fancy stock selling at prices ranging from $10 to $15 per 100. America, Augusta, Mrs. Frances King, Schwaben and Mrs. Frank Pendleton are included in the shipments. Peonies are seen at some of the houses in good sized quantities and are having a good call. Lilies are scarce but a few callas are seen. Cornflowers, white and blue daisies, pond lilies, forget-me-nots, delphiniums, larkspur, stocks, gypsophila, candytuft, coreopsis, gaillardia, feverfew, snapdragons and a large supply of other indoor and outdoor seasonable stock is included in the offerings. Greens are plentiful with new ferns arriving in large quantities every day.

When The Devil Drives

Intense competition has driven the standardized, large capacity, rose grower who daily examines cost sheets, to find out how to keep up production. He can have no slack season. He can have no mercy for his plants. He must deliver all summer. "Needs must, when the devil drives."

Let us, then, be your rose grower while your plants have their needed rest. We keep you in regular supply. You keep your customer; for every rose sale carries another sale with it.

ARMOUR-MITCHELL WEDDING.

Chas. A. Samuelson had the order for the Armour-Mitchell wedding flowers and decorations at Lake Forest, June 18. The improvised altar in the home of the bride's parents was adorned with white larkspur, lily of the valley and white roses. Tall vases of pink roses and larkspur flanked the altar, and the same flowers artistically arranged in 20 urns on large pedestals, lined the bridal path. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of yellow and brown irises and rambler roses. The matron of honor carried a bouquet of larkspur and rambler roses. The flower girl carried a basket of lily of the valley and roses. The reception room was decorated with pink roses, larkspur, orchids, gypsophila and poppies. Flowers were massed everywhere about the house, blue and pink being the principal colors. The plants employed included cibotiums, palms and caladiums, and the entire scheme of decorations was ably executed by Ed. Enders, chief designer of the Samuelson force.

NOTES.

George Ball, who was elected vice-president of the Commercial Flower Growers' Association, Thursday evening, June 16, has already secured a new member. His name is Carl Ball and he was born on the night of the big stag.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is disposing of a large quantity of choice gladioli, which are in brisk demand at good prices. Double White Killarney roses are attracting the attention of the buyers at this establishment.

Morton Poehlmann, son of Adolph Poehlmann, who just graduated from the Western Military academy, is the latest addition to the force at the city salesrooms of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. Roland Poehlmann, son of August Poehlmann, graduated from the same academy several years ago and is also on the job at the store. John Poehlmann, son of the late well-known wholesaler, now in charge at the store, is a graduate of the Culver Military academy.

Henry Neve has sold his old range of greenhouses at Des Plaines to M. J. Roeser, who has already taken charge. He has purchased several acres of land at Des Plaines near the river and is erecting a new 70x200 ft. Lord & Burnham house which will be devoted to sweet peas and asparagus sprengeri.

The Raedlein Basket Co., 713 Milwaukee avenue, is receiving so many importations, that it has rented another large storeroom to accommodate them. Curtis Kindler, who is at the firm's factories in Germany, is expected home next month.

Practically all the wholesale houses will finish taking their peonies out of cold storage this week or next. The supply is almost exhausted and the season as a whole has not been any too satisfactory for the grower, dealer or the buyer.

The Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., had an exhibit at the Palmer house the past week when Mr. Gnatt and R. E. Blackshaw were in charge. Ed. Allis has just returned from a successful southern business trip for this house.

Krowka Bros., 4938 North Western avenue, have bought the Andrew Koehlke range at 5442 North Western avenue consisting of 22,000 square feet of glass. Pot plants will be grown at both places.

There were flowers from President Harding and senators and representatives from every state at the funeral of the late Congressman-at-large William E. Mason, which was held here June 20.

Adam Kasper, of the E. C. Amling Co., Los Angeles, Calif., is expected home next week where he will spend his vacation. He was with the E. C. Amling Co. here for a time.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are well supplied with peonies in addition to all other seasonable stock and report a good demand for same. Gladioli are also on the bill of fare here.

It is estimated that the floral offerings in the Circuit court rooms, June 20, when the 20 men recently elected on the coalition ticket took office, represented about $2,500.

DEMAND GOOD FOR STOCK.

The market this week has been fairly brisk. The prices are low, owing to the abundance of stock coming in, but everything has cleaned up well. Wedding flowers have been mostly in demand, white roses bringing 10 cents on shorts and up to 25 cents on the fancies. Lily of the valley is selling at $12 per 100. There has been good demand for peonies with very few coming to market. Carnations were low in price until Friday, then the market braced up and they sold at $3 per 100. Gladioli and delphiniums are going well for wedding decorations. Red roses are bringing a premium over other roses for graduations, all other items selling at the same prices as a week ago.

NOTES.

N. F. McCarthy submitted a statement of assets and liabilities to his creditors June 16, the statement showing his trouble was lack of working capital and that he was absolutely solvent if the business were allowed to proceed. A committee was appointed to investigate and report June 23.

The premium list is out for the big exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural hall, September 22-25. Ferns, orchids and other plants will be displayed. For copies, address Secretary Wm. P. Rich, Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Geo. Haines, mother of Geo. Haines, assistant manager of the Exchange, was buried June 13.

STOCK MOVING SLOWLY.

The weather experienced in this vicinity during the past week has been unusually hot and outdoor crops have been retarded rather than hastened, due to this fact. Generally speaking, there is plenty of stock on this market, but the demand for flowers has not been at the top notch and the prices have been exceptionally low. It is predicted by tradesmen that if the excessive heat abates during the coming week, trade will pick up rapidly. Roses are constant in demand but the prices have taken quite a drop and very fine stock is selling at exceptionally low prices. There is a comparatively small quantity of white roses coming in and the demand for them is very small. Carnations of all colors are selling well and are being handled by all florists. The stock is of fair quality but the prices it commands are low. Gladioli are increasing steadily in numbers, but not in size of blooms. Loveliness is the leader this week, and the demand for high grade material is good. A few moderately good quality snapdragons are coming into the market and they sell very rapidly, being used to a large extent in combination with delphiniums. Only shades of pink, white and yellow are offered. A limited quantity of outdoor sweet peas have made their appearance. They sell moderately well and bring a fair price. Fine delphiniums are found among the floral offerings this week and they are in big demand, although not plentiful. Callas of good quality are few and far between and bring a good price. Easter lilies are not plentiful but are in heavy demand for weddings and funeral use. Some fine stock is offered at a reasonable price. The supply of lily of the valley is very limited and the demand is more than brisk. Large quantities are being used in bridal bouquets and the price is therefore comparatively high. Daisies, white and yellow, are very plentiful. Shasta daisies are also numerous but do not sell well. There is a moderately large quantity of cornflowers on the market. Calendulas of good size and quantity are very plentiful. A limited number of stock plants are offered, but they move slowly. Geraniums and ageratums are not as much in evidence as heretofore. Coleus, alyssum and other bedding plants are offered by local florists in small lots. Some very fine sprays of baby's breath has found its way onto the market and it sells well. It is being used to a large extent in combinations. Statice is seen in a few windows and a very few everlastings are offered. Achillea ptarmica is also found in limited quantities. It does not sell well as it is in bloom outdoors. Orchids are more plentiful this week and their price is comparatively high. A few cypripediums are offered at a moderate price. Pandanus, dracaenas, cibotiums and other ferns, show very little fluctuation in price and the supply on hand is ample. Greens are plentiful this week and some fine smilax is offered. Ferns are not as numerous and bring $5 per 1,000. Southern ferns have turned brown rapidly on account of the hot weather.

NOTES.

Street merchants are doing a good business in carnations, second grade roses, a large number of daisies and some very poor snapdragons.

An attractive window of foliage plants is seen at the Geo. Walbart store, being used in combination with ornamental grasses.

USUAL SUMMER DULLNESS NOTED.

Business during the past week has been rather quiet. Some of the dealers, however, report a fair demand from certain sources, but on the whole there is little activity. This is to be expected under the circumstances with considerable unemployment and also because of the fact that a large number are away on their vacations. The commencement exercises are now over, and on the whole the demand was not as large as in former years. Social functions outside of weddings are not numerous at this time. Some weddings are scheduled for the remainder of the month of June. Funeral work has been rather good and this has been the most promising feature. The usual run of flowers are in the local market. Roses are of good quality and sell from $3 to $8 per dozen. Carnations are also plentiful and sell at former levels. There is a good demand for sweet peas and prices range from $1 to $1.50 per bunch. The new flower to appear in the market is delphinium, which is selling rather briskly. In roses the usual varieties are Columbia, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Sunburst. Plants are not selling very well and the supply is limited as is usual at this time of the year. Shrubbery is still in good demand, although the season is practically over.

NOTES.

Joseph McKellar, who has been operating a retail florist establishment at 22 North High street, has taken a lease on a large store room in the James building on West Broad street, next door to the Broadway theater, in which a large modern shop will be conducted. The North High street store will be continued. The new place will be opened some time in July and the fittings will be the most modern in central Ohio. The store room is 22x50 feet and in addition a large basement is included in the lease. J. W. Thompson will be manager of the Broad street shop, which will be conducted under the name of McKellar the Florist. Mr. McKellar reports considerable funeral work with business good in all ways. One of the features of the trade of the concern is the number of orders received for corsages secured by having solicitors visit the various schools and educational institutions just previous to commencement exercises. The company also sold 4,000 roses for the Jewish relief.

The Livington Seed Co., which has been operating a retail florist and seed business at the corner of Long and High streets for 34 years, will move about July 1 into larger quarters at 59-61 East Chestnut street, which has been used as a wholesale department for some time. A full line of seeds, bulbs and garden implements will be carried. A. R. Livingston is president and general manager of the company.

JUNE WEDDINGS INCREASE TRADE.

Last week's business is reported from all quarters as being very satisfactory. The usual amount of June weddings and school commencements has called for a large volume of trade. There has been a decided increase in funeral work, which made the majority of the stores very busy. Stock of every description continues in large supply. Roses on some days are in such quantities that it is almost impossible to move all of the cut. The cool weather keeps the highest quality of stock on the market. Nearly every variety is now at its best, and much of the stock goes at bargain prices. Butterfly is one variety that none could be disposed of if it were obtainable. Largely increased plantings of it are being made this summer by our leading growers. Ulrich Brunner from the second crop, is now arriving and is in good demand, owing to its long stems and fine flowers. Fireflame is particularly good and a ready seller. There has been a noticeable increase in the Spencer sweet pea supply. The stock has also shown much improvement in color and form. All colors are available in any quantity. Gladioli are increasing in variety and quantity, steadily but are still firm at $1.50 per dozen. Some fine white varieties are largely featured by the leading stores. Bride is very plentiful and cheap. More dahlias are to be seen now, also the best pink and red varieties bring the growers $4 per 100. Peonies continue to be a part of the daily purchases but are to be had in small lots only, as the season is pretty well advanced for this flower now. Giganteum lily remains steady at $4 per dozen. Carnations are more numerous than at any time during the spring season, good stock bringing $2 per 100. Very little Laddie is now obtainable. Cattleyas continue in steady supply with no change in price. Gardenias, too, are plentiful. There is a strong demand for lily of the valley these June days to supply the demand for weddings. The trade is fortunate in having an ample cut to draw upon. Prices remain steady at $8 per 100. Snapdragon is now good and is a popular annual. Larkspur, scabiosa and ageratum hybrids are in good demand for basket work. Gerbera Jamesonii of good quality is also finding a ready market. Watsonias continue in generous supply. Pink flowering eucalyptus is now at its best and enjoys a good call for decorative work. Fern and asparagus growers are finding a ready market for all the stock they can offer at satisfactory prices. The usual spring demand for Bostons and other ferns and palms is keeping up well. Flowering plants for store use are scarce, rhododendrons being about the only thing available.

RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

What was probably the most representative gathering of the trade ever held in this city was the one assembled at Native Sons' hall on the evening of June 7 to greet J. Fred Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson of the national publicity committee of the Society of American Florists. Every branch of the industry was represented. President Albert O. Stein of the Retail Florists' Association introduced Mr. Ammann, who in a splendid address, presented the percentage plan of advertising as practiced by other large eastern cities and endorsed by the Society of American Florists. Hilmer V. Swenson made an address, illustrating with stereopticon slides the advertising done by the Allied Florists' Association of Chicago since its organization. Mr. Ammann urged those present to form a similar organization for the advancement of the industry. President Stein then appointed the following committee to organize the Allied Florists' Association of San Francisco: Retailers, Angelo J. Rossi, Charles W. Brown and P. Vincent Matraia; Wholesalers, J. A. Axell, E. W. McLellan and Charles C. Navlet. Growers, Eric James, Victor Ferrari and H. Plath. The spirit of co-operation was noticeable by its presence that evening and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Messrs. Ammann and Swenson were again entertained at luncheon the following day at the Cliff house, overlooking the Pacific ocean, by the members of the association and their wives. A most enjoyable time was had by all present. Both guests expressed the greatest pleasure over the successful outcome of their visit and the hearty response received from the trade for their suggestions of co-operation. They left for Los Angeles on June 18 to form a similar organization in that city.

NOTES.

The subscribers to the co-operative flower market for white growers, will hold an important meeting next week at the offices of the Art Floral Co. to sign the agreement of incorporation. Jos. P. Haywood, Burlingame, P. Vincent Matraia and Chas. W. Brown of this city compose the committee in charge of the movement. Over 50 growers and retailers have agreed to become stockholders in this new company to better market conditions in this city.

The appointment of Charles C. Navlet, San Jose, to the executive committee of the Allied Florists' Association has met with much satisfaction among the trade. Mr. Navlet has long been prominent in trade circles in this city and vicinity and operates stores in Oakland and San Jose as well as in this city.

Work on the new flower store on Geary street, near Stockton, to be known as the Paris Floral Co., is being rapidly pushed to completion. Jack Lavenzalo, formerly of Avansino Bros. Company, is the principal owner of this new shop which promises to be one of the most attractive in the downtown section.

Chas. Abraham of the Western Nursery was an interested guest at the mass meeting on June 7. Mr. Abraham is proprietor of one of the oldest established nurseries in this city, and is one of the foremost authorities on plants in California.

The flower show committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the Retail Florists' Association held a meeting on June 16 at the Art Floral Co.'s offices to further complete its plans for the exposition to be held here in October.

E. W. McLellan & Co. are handling heavy receipts of roses from their Burlingame greenhouses. Mr. McLellan is one of the strong supporters of the new co-operative flower market. He will leave shortly for his annual vacation in the north.

Alexander Rose, proprietor of the St. Francis Wood's Nursery, accompanied by his associates, visited factory sites in Richmond last week for the purpose of establishing a pottery for the manufacture of flower pots.

David Burpee, of W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is a visitor to this city. Mr. Burpee is on a tour of inspection to the various seed growing centers of the state and also to his firm's seed farm at Floradale.

STOCK SELLING READILY.

The market the past week has been stocked with quantities of flowers of all kinds, particularly roses, which have been over abundant, those in the shorter grades piling up to a small surplus, that had to have the assistance of the street men to clean up during the last of the week. Roses have never before shown the quality and class at this season that they have the past month. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier, Columbia, Pilgrim, Dunlop, and Crusader are so much larger than Ophelia, Maryland and the Killarneys that the public are becoming educated to a higher standard, with the result that all dealers find the medium to higher grades easier to sell than shorter lengths and the older kinds. There are still a few carnations, some of which grade up very well. Theo is a bit under size, but its bright pink shade makes it a favorite. Ward, Benora and Matchless are still good enough to bring six cents. Outdoor sweet peas that have the advantage of watering facilities are fine, while the field rows that depend on rain, of which the country is sadly in need, are poor. Some of the outdoor gladioli are superb, as is much of the greenhouse stock. Easter lilies of good quality sell up close at top prices. Callas are done. Cattleyas and lily of the valley are about equal to the demand at last week's prices.

PROSPERITY.

In speaking of the business of the past season and particularly of that of the past two months, a wholesaler thought that the entire trade had a great deal to be thankful for, in the large and high quality of the various stocks and the strong and steady demand that had kept pace for them. In the hundreds of thousands of roses that were handled in this market every week it was a wonder to him where they all went, and this was only one of the many varieties of stock on the list. Before the war the word "glut" was worked overtime; now the expression is almost obsolete, and there only remain symptoms. Average prices had been uniformly good, very much better than those before the war. When asked to give a reason for these conditions, he believed the demand for flowers was constantly growing, while there was little if any increase in the supply. He liked to see an active, snappy market and hoped the present situation would continue until more glass was imperative in order to supply an unmistakable demand.

BEDDING PLANTS.

Robert Craig, in speaking on various aspects of the business, said that the supply of bedding plants had been very inadequate the present season. For the past 10 years there had been very little if any profit in this stock, prices having somehow gotten to such a low level, that the grower hardly received a new dollar for an old one. During that time not less than 15 firms, most of whom had made a specialty of this class of plants, had for various causes gone out of business, and their places had all been dismantled and were no longer a factor. As far as he knew, no other new ranges had been established to replace them, so that the competition of this 350,000 feet or thereabouts of glass was removed and prices were now on a plane that allowed the bedding plant grower something more than a bare living.

A FRIENDLY TRIBUTE.

Every one who has the pleasure of his acquaintance knows what a hustling, capable and genial personality is combined in Walter Davis, the efficient floor manager of the S. S. Pennock Co. Among his hosts of friends there are a number who belong to the Masonic order, and when in May last it was learned that Mr. Davis had advanced to the 32nd degree, his florist friends in the order gave him a surprise dinner. This event took place at the Adelphia hotel on June 8. Those present were: John C. Gracey, Charles Grakelow, Ralph Faust, Jos. G. Neidinger, Ross Davis, Victor Ridenour, Alvin Jones, Chas. Moorby, Harry Lisle, Fred Kramer, Lewis Nieman, and E. W. Gaehring. After the dinner, as a further token of their appreciation and esteem, he was presented with a 32nd degree consistory ring, with a brilliant diamond setting. Mr.

Davis refers to this occasion as one of the most delightful moments of his life, while his associates will always remember the great pleasure it was to honor him.

A GRAKELOW RECEPTION.

On Monday, June 13, Chas. H. Grakelow gave a reception at his Broad street residence to his many friends in the various commission and florist supply houses of this city. There were about 50 guests and to say they had a good time was putting it mildly. There was everything for the inner man, high class vaudeville by the best artists and Charles' inimitable stories thrown in for good measure. It was a delightful occasion that will long be remembered by those fortunate enough to be present.

NOTES.

Charles H. Grakelow is about to pull off one of the greatest successes of his career. A year ago he was elected exalted ruler of the lodge of Elks, and is now serving his second term. Inside of a year he almost doubled its membership, and this year added a thousand more. The showing made in Chicago at last year's convention took the city by storm. Los Angeles, Calif., is this year's convention city, and Exalted Ruler Grakelow is piloting 534 members of his lodge to this meeting, together with an immense amount of paraphernalia, which in its entirety requires four special trains of 10 cars each. These trains will leave this city on July 4 at noon, traveling 10 minutes apart. It is the largest single aggregation of men who have ever attended a convention in this country, and when the distance to be traversed is considered, it is truly a record event. Of particular interest to the trade is the fact that the genius and gulding force of the whole affair is Mr. Grakelow, whose inspirational work at the trade conventions is a matter of the greatest pleasure to all those who attend.

John Walker with his genial personality has been spending a few days in this city, accompanied by his brother Thomas, who has recently sold his greenhouses near Pleasantville, N. J.

Mr. Walker had improved the place and worked up quite a business during the past 10 years, which together with the advancement in real estate proved by the sale to have been a very good investment. He is now going west with his brother looking for new fields to conquer.

Jacob Becker has sold the large lot in the rear of his Market street stores at 52nd street on which still remained several greenhouses. This ground is now to be covered with a movie palace. When purchased, this lot was on a one-horse car line making half-hour trips; it is now the center of one of the city's best business districts. One-half of the original plot covered by retail stores, is still owned by Mr. Becker.

One of the stellar attractions at the Robert Craig Co.'s establishment are the cyclamen houses, where the plants have attained a wonderful growth for the season. They have never had them as good. Large stocks of dracænas and crotons are exceptionally well done.

The London Flower Shop has had a very successful season, being particularly busy the past month with weddings and school commencements. Irwin Rosner, assistant manager, will have entire charge of the store during the summer.

Mrs. J. Drew-Bear and her daughter, Miss Joy, have arrived safely in London, England, where Mrs. Drew-Bear will spend the summer visiting relatives and enjoying a well-earned vacation.

The wholesale houses all close now at 4 p. m. The S. S. Pennock Co. will close Saturdays at 1 p. m. during July and August.

TRADE IN POOR CONDITION.

Business has not improved, in fact the wholesalers generally agree that last week was duller than the preceding one. Rose buds are getting small and outdoor stock is suffering for rain. This is particularly noticeable in sweet peas, many being of poor quality and it is almost impossible to move them. Peonies are also in poor condition. In the retail trade the best feature is quite a revival in steamer orders, which with a few wedding decorations and funeral work keeps something doing.

NOTES.

If times are dull there is yet some "balm in Gilead." One of the leading hotels announces that it is serving a 45 cent breakfast consisting of either a whole kippered herring or an egg, rolls and butter and a pot of coffee that makes two cups.

Although great numbers of people are going abroad, there is some slight satisfaction in a considerable business in steamer trade. For the Aquitania, which sailed for Southampton on June 14, G. E. M. Stumpp had a number of good orders.

The enterprising proprietors of the Colonial Flower Market, Third avenue and 149th street, recently opened another attractive retail store at 2339 Eighth avenue, between 125th and 126th streets.

William Bogart, of the retail firm of P. L. Bogart's Bros., underwent an operation for appendicitis, in the Post-Graduate hospital on June 15 and is doing as well as can be expected.

It is stated that an ever-bearing orange tree has been discovered in Florida. That may be fine for the fruit trade, but what the florists need is more ever-buying customers.

W. P. Sears decorated the church of the Heavenly Rest on June 15 for the Parker-Jones wedding. Palms, ferns and many peonies made a beautiful display.

Our good neighbor, R. T. Brown, Queens, officiated as a judge at the exhibition of the American Peony Society in Boston, June 18.

Harold Trepp, well and favorably known as a salesman for Clarence Slim, is in the hospital seriously ill with pneumonia.

On June 18, the prolonged drought was relieved by light rain. Some say this dry spell is the worst in several years.

P. F. Kenney, wife and family will leave in July for a month's tour of the Pacific coast cities.

Miss Fanny McKay of W. H. Long's staff is visiting her home folks in Baddeck, Nova Scotia.

Sullivan Bros. & Co. are handling good varieties of gladioli and report fair sales.

Exceptionally good sweet peas are being received by Doyle & Booth.

A. F. F.

Rochester, N. Y.

Trade has been very brisk the past week. There have been a great many weddings and graduations. Carnations are getting smaller and poorer each day. Roses have been scarce due to the great demand the past week. Especially was this true of white roses. Red roses are also hard to procure.

ROSE SOCIETY EXHIBITION.

The annual exhibition of the Rochester Rose Society was held in Convention hall annex, June 13-14. On long tables that extended the length of the room there were splendid displays of roses, with palms and bay trees as a back ground. Only amateurs were allowed to compete for prizes, who were divided into two classes: the exhibitors who took care of their own rose bushes and those who employed gardeners. The Park department had an entire table for its display, which consisted chiefly of climbing roses, one of the varieties being Aviator Beriot. Fred C. Wallace, Canandaigua, showed excellent Columbias. About four-fifths of the varieties were hybrids, due to the fact that they are the favorite outdoor roses.

NOTES.

John Dunbar is taking the cruise with the Chamber of Commerce, which left here June 17, stopping at Fort Niagara, N. Y., Toronto, Ont., and Montreal, Que.

Felix Alberts had his motor truck stolen June 16. As yet no trace has been found of it.

Edwin Wilson, Jr., is employed at the H. E. Wilson store during the summer vacation.

J. M. Heller has returned from the Shriners' convention in Des Moines, Ia.

CHESTER.

Oklahoma City, Okla.

After continuous rains which delayed shipments, business is again normal. Weddings are more numerous but funeral work is light.

NOTES.

Clyde Batten, who recently returned to work from sickness is again on the disability list. This time it is a broken thumb received while practicing for the big ball game to be played during convention time.

A championship three-cushion billiard game was staged June 18 between J. W. Furrow, A. Cohen and Paul Richmond, the victor being Mr. Cohen. Florists, beware—he is a slicker!

A. S. Gray, Chickasha, met Otto Lange, of Ft. Worth, Tex., and Eugene Woerz, of Ardmore, at Ft. Worth, June 20, in regard to Armistice Day celebrations.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION.

The thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association opens its first sessoin as we go to press, the meeting extending over three days, June 22-24, being held at St. Louis, Mo., with headquarters at the Statler hotel. Following the call to order Wednesday morning, the visitors were warmly welcomed to the city by Roger P. Annan, of the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange, President H. G. Hastings, of Atlanta, Ga., delivered his annual address covering well the important features of the year's activities, followed by Secretary-Treasurer C. E. Kendel. The balance of this session was occupied by the preliminary report of the membership committee, a discussion of proposed amendments to by-laws and constitution, and the announcement of the entertainment committee. The afternoon was given over to a meeting of the executive committee and an inspection trip to the Missouri Botanical gardens arranged by the local committee. In the evening there was an entertainment and dance tendered by the manufacturers, accessory line dealers and exhibitors.

Arranged for the Thursday morning programme are a number of interesting papers and reports, among them "Promoting Larger and More General Plantings of Vegetable Seed," by Birby B. White, Detroit, Mich., and "Promoting the Use of More and Better Field Grass and Clover Seed on Farms," by L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis. Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, will present his report as chairman of the garden bureau, and James H. H. Burdett, Chicago, will give his report as director of the national garden bureau. The session will close with a general discussion and reports of committees.

On Thursday afternoon, the programme includes several features in the form of papers and addresses, the topics in the hands of prominent seedsmen, as follows: "The Seed Trade of the Southeast," by Frank S. Love, Montgomery, Ala., secretary Southern Seedsmen's Association; "The Seed Trade of the Southwest," by Dick O'Bannon, Sherman, Tex.; "The Flower Seed Growing Industry in California," by L. D. Waller, Guadalupe, Calif.; "Latest Developments in Corn Breeding," illustrated with stereopticon, by Eugene D. Funk, Bloomington, Ill.; "Mosaic and Angular Leaf Spot Diseases of Cucumbers" (illustrated), by Dr. S. P. Doolittle, bureau of plant industry, Washington, D. C.

During the afternoon, the visiting ladies will be entertained at a reception at the Sunset Hill Country Club.

In the evening, the annual banquet of the association will be held at the Hotel Statler, followed by an address by R. F. McNally, vice-president of the Bank of Commerce, of St. Louis, and other speakers.

At the final session, Friday morning, there will be reports by Francis C. Stokes, Moorestown, N. J., chairman of the nomenclature committee; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., for the committee on experiment stations; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, chairman of the committee on tariff; C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn., chairman of committee on seed analysis, and W. H. Barrett, Adrian, Mich., for the committee on necrology.

H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.
Pres. American Seed Trade Association.

Final adjournment will follow the annual election of officers.

A more detailed account of the convention proceedings will appear in next week's issue.

OPENING SESSION.

Upwards of 100 attended the opening session June 22. Roger P. Annan, of the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange, welcomed the visitors in a stirring speech, President Hastings following with his address. The secretary reported the membership 249, a gain of seven over last year, and that for the first time in the history of the association there was a deficit of $684.68, representing. total unpaid bills over maximum assets. The amendments to the constitution proposed last year were adopted, admitting regional seed trade organizations to membership.

Among the early arrivals were noted David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.; Leonard H. Vaughan and Carl Cropp, Chicago; Henry Field, Shenandoah, Ia.. L. D. Waller, Guadalupe, Calif.; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; G. F. Bradley, Cleveland, O.; J. R. Condon and Leonard R. Condon, Rockford, Ill.; Kenneth Salzer, La Crosse, Wis.; E. S. Gunn, Lincoln, Neb.; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Watson Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; Ralph B. Howe, Chicago, and a special train of those attending the Memphis convention of southern seedsmen.

PRES. HASTING'S ADDRESS IN PART.

Custom, despite any personal desire to the contrary, prescribes that your president address you at the opening session in such manner and on such topics as the spirit may suggest. I wish to again repeat here what I embodied in my words of thanks to you in Milwaukee, Wis., that I did not wish to consider my elevation to your presidency so much a personal honor as a recognition of the growth of the seed business in that great and rapidly growing section of our common country known as "The South."

Twice before, in 1896 and again in 1906, was Virginia honored by the selection of those splendid men, T. W. Wood and Henry W. Wood, but we of the farther south look on Virginia despite its wealth of distinctively southern thought and tradition as essentially a border state and that a year ago you honored the south by going to a state for your president that cannot be termed a border state by any flight of imagination. I know you will bear with me a moment while I call your attention to just a few salient facts as to the territory that we of the southern contingent of the seed trade serve. I do this because I know there is throughout the more northern part of our country a lack of knowledge of the important part the south plays in business and our national life. The south composes geographically about one-third of our country. It contains about one-third of our population. It is the most essentially American part of this country with only a negligible per cent of foreign born. It produces approximately 40 per cent of the agricultural production of the United States.

Florida and the entire Gulf coast section is the winter truck garden of our country, providing annually tens of thousands of carloads of vegetables for winter and early spring shipment. Florida divides with California the honor of supplying the nation with the citrus fruits. Georgia, South Carolina, Florida and Texas have taught our northern friends what real watermelons taste like. There is no use attempting to catalogue the list of what many term these minor items of the south's production. It can be said truthfully that the south can and does produce every staple crop that the north does plus cotton, that great staple that so largely clothes the world. While cotton is just at present in the dumps along with corn, oats and other staples it should not be forgotten that up to the time that the United States ceased to be a debtor nation during the war period, exports of cotton were regularly depended on to maintain the balance of trade in our favor and did it year after year through good times and bad. Even with the extremely depressed present conditions cotton, together with cotton seed and the production therefrom is a billion dollar item and in peak years has gone as high as three billions.

Please pardon this disgression from purely seed trade topics. My excuse is that I know from contact through the years, that there has been an underestimate of the importance of the south in our national life and business, due not to intent, but to a lack of knowledge of the south and its industries. Further, I am confident that in the not far distant future the south will be the richest agricultural section of this country. Not much over one-third of the south's tillable area has been brought under cultivation and we feel that the south's real development has just begun.

SECRETARY AND TREASURER'S REPORT.

Secretary and Treasurer C. E. Kendel's report showed the finances to be in a healthy condition. The total receipts for the year were $7,076.85, with expenditures of $6,747.73, leaving a balance in the treasury of $329.12. The association now has a total membership of 249, being a net gain of five over 1920.

Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Ass'n.

The meeting of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association at the Hotel Statler, St. Louis, Mo., June 20 and 21, was well attended, about 75 members and visitors being on hand. At the business meeting in executive session a resolution was adopted protesting against the duties on seeds in the tariff bill now before congress, on the ground that the number of seed buyers in this country so far exceeds the number of producers that a duty is against the interests of the majority.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: William G. Scarlett, of Baltimore, Md., president; John C. McCullough, of Cincinnati, O., vice-president, and Clarence K. Jones, Baltimore, Md., secretary-treasurer.

The business meeting adjourned Tuesday noon, June 21, and the afternoon was devoted to a golf tournament.

Southern Seedsmen's Association.

MEMPHIS CONVENTION, JUNE 20-21.

The third annual convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association was held in Memphis, Tenn., June 20-21. A very interesting programme was arranged for the occasion, consisting of a number of timely papers, the election of officers and a barbecue. The seedsmen met for the first session on Monday morning, June 20, at nine o'clock. Hon. J. R. Paine, mayor of Memphis delivered the address of welcome and was followed by President Buchanan. At the afternoon session the following papers were presented: "The Sweet Potato," by J. C. Holton of the Mississippi Agricultural college; "Seed Analyzing," by Mr. Lacky, Department of Agriculture, Oklahoma City, Okla.; "The Place of Plant Breeding by Commercial Companies," by Herbert J. Webber, Hartsville, S. C., and "Seed Legislation," by Herbert Bebb.

Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.
Second Vice-Pres. American Seed Trade Ass'n.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: J. Steckler, New Orleans, La., president; D. R. Mayo, Knoxville, Tenn., vice-president; Dick O'Bannon, Sherman, Tex., second vice-president; Frank S. Love, Montgomery, Ala., secretary-treasurer; R. B. Buchanan, Memphis, Tenn., and E. A. Martin, executive committee.

New Orleans, La., was chosen for the next meeting.

Joseph Steckler, Sr. New Orleans, La.

PRES.-ELECT, SOUTHERN SEEDMEN'S ASSN.

Joseph Steckler, Sr., president of the J. Steckler Seed Co., Ltd., New Orleans La. one of the largest establishments of its kind in the south, was born in 1870 in New Iberia, La., the son of the late Henry Steckler, Sr., a planter and merchant of that parish and city for many years. Joseph Steckler entered the employ of the late Richard Frotscher when a boy of less than 15 years, acquiring the knowledge of the seed business from the very beginning. During the young man's employment, Mr. Frotscher enlarged his business by purchasing the seed house of Jesse Fettis, 101 Gravier street. Young Steckler remained in the employ of Mr. Frotscher until the latter's death, when the business was sold and then, associated with his brother, Richard P. Steckler, bought a branch seed business of Mr. Frotscher's, and established, in 1898, the present house of J. Steckler Seed Co., Ltd. The establishment is now known the world over as a house of quality and reputation in the line of flower, garden and agricultural seeds.

Mr. Steckler is connected with many organizations and civic bodies, banks, homesteads, parks, etc. He is a public spirited citizen in every sense of the word, always willing and ready to lend his assistance and encouragement to any worthy cause. In consequence of his open, frank and friendly disposition, he numbers his intimates by the hundreds, and his friends by the thousands. He stands high morally, as well as commercially, being a man of large and influential family connections. He and Miss Marie Pauline Muller, also of New Iberia, married about 27 years ago, and their union has been blessed by eight children, six girls and two boys.

Mr. Steckler was prominent at the Southern Seedmen's Association convention, held at Jacksonville, Fla., June 7-9, 1920 where he was induced to accept the first vice-presidency of the association.

Poppy American Legion.

Flowers of the charming new Poppy American Legion were exhibited this week at Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, attracting much attention. The blooms were brought on by L. D. Waller of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadalupe, Calif., on his way to the St. Louis convention of the American Seed Trade Association, arriving in splendid condition after their four days' journey across the continent in an ordinary pasteboard box, being cut and packed in the bud stage. The flowers of the Shirley type are four inches across, and borne on strong stiff stems 18 inches high, well clad with rich green foliage. The color is an intense and pleasing scarlet, with a small white area at the base of the petals. This new poppy is being offered by the L. D. Waller Seed Co., with whom it originated.

Kentucky Blue Grass Seed.

SUPPLY LESS THAN LAST YEAR'S.

Buyers of standing acreage have not been active this year because of the uneven stand of plants and consequent uncertain yields. Rough cured seed for August delivery was traded in early at $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel but advanced to $2 when stripping started.

In the Missouri territory, which includes a small part of Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, the production of Kentucky blue grass seed this year will depend upon the lenth of time the limited number of strippers can operate, as the high price offered by cleaners is an inducement to put every available stripper in operation. The use of the motor truck in transporting strippers to pastures in distant localities which promise higher yields also is a factor tending to a larger harvest in that section this year. A conservative estimate places the prospective production at 175,000 bushels to 200,000 bushels of rough cured seed compared with revised estimates of 125,000 bushels to 150,000 bushels last year.

Stripping started June 1, a week to 10 days earlier than normal, and was at its height June 6. Cool weather prevailed and the strippers were operated at capacity. The growing Kentucky blue grass seed crop in that section was affected by unfavorable weather conditions in much the same manner as in Kentucky. However, the seed stalks, while thin on the ground, are longer and more even and the fields are clean of weeds and contain practically no white clover. As a result, shrinkage in cleaning is not expected to be over 40 per cent compared with 60 per cent last year.

The acreage has been purchased outright in many instances at prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 an acre. Where the grower would not sell, the acreage is stripped for one-half of the seed obtained. Contract prices for rough cured seed, August delivery, opened at $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel, but soon advanced to $2. Growers are selling freely at the latter price but a few are holding for $2.50.

From present indications the total supply of Kentucky blue grass seed available for sowing the coming season will be about 40 per cent less than that of last year. Old stocks of choice 21-pound seed are reported to be practically exhausted and the carry-over of lightweight seed small. Based on data collected by the United States bureau of markets during the first week of June, it is estimated that the total production of Kentucky blue grass seed this year will be about 350,000 bushels of rough cured seed compared with 525,000 bushels in 1920. Although this year's crop of rough seed in Kentucky will probably show 10 per cent to 15 per cent greater shrinkage than the 1920 crop, the 1921 Missouri crop is expected to run 20 per cent higher in clean seed, and the total production of clean seed this year compared with 1920 probably will be in the same proportion as rough-cured seed, or 175,000 bushels compared with 270,000 bushels.

The production of Kentucky blue grass seed in Kentucky this year is estimated to be the smallest since 1913. Present indications point to a harvest in this state of approximately 175,000 bushels of rough-cured seed compared with 400,000 bushels last year. Stripping started a week or 10 days earlier than last year and was in full progress on June 2 with weather favorable for curing. The acreage that will be stripped this year is considerably less than last year. However, comparisons are difficult to make because pastures are spotted. With prevailing high prices as an incentive, an excessive number of strippers available, and satisfactory labor obtainable at wages 50 per cent to 65 per cent less than last year, it is expected that every acre promising a profitable yield will be stripped.

The anticipated yield per acre is about 60 per cent of that of last year. Warm weather during March, which promoted early, rank growth was followed by freezes during April and the first week of May, which in many cases either blasted or killed the early seed stems. The seed stalks are uneven in height and white clover is much more prevalent than usual, making it difficult to operate the strippers efficiently. It is the opinion of the majority of cleaners that the seed will shrink 50 per cent in cleaning, indicating that it is light weight.

Connecticut Seed Crops.

Watson S. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., on June 1, wrote the following: "Very favorable prospects are ahead for seed crops in this state. We experienced the earliest spring on record by at least two weeks, and as a result native strawberries and peas have been on the market for nearly a week, breaking all records. Every seed crop is ahead of normal in the same ratio, and is in exceptional condition. The acreage devoted to beet, carrot, onion, turnip, kale, and even sweet corn has been considerably reduced, due to the surplus of seed carried over from last year. In spite of curtailed production this year, there is no doubt but there will be an ample seed supply for the spring of 1922. Business for March and April, while nearly up to the average in volume, was much less in dollars. The month of May was very poor compared with former years."

The Everett B. Clark Seed Co., of Milford, Conn., reports as follows: "The acreage in our general district on all seed crops is greatly restricted, amounting to not more than 25 per cent of the plantings of a year ago. Sweet corn acreage is 30 to 40 per cent of normal, and planting conditions are too cold and wet to produce a good crop. In beets, but one-half of the area devoted to their cultivation is utilized this year. The roots kept well throughout the winter, and the stock, with satisfactory growing conditions, looks thrifty. In some sections the prospects seem unfavorable for a good pea crop. In the western part of the state the acreage for this crop amounts to 25 per cent of normal. The small plantings of kale and onion look exceptionally well. It is too early to report on beans, as the restricted acreage is just being planted."

New Jersey Seed Crops.

Edgar F. Hurff, of Swedesboro, N. J., on May 31, advised the tomato acreage on early varieties in his section of the state is about normal. The late kinds are just being planted, amounting to not more than 25 to 30 per cent of last year's, which might be increased before the planting season is over. The area devoted to pepper is the same as in 1920, while squash and pumpkin have not as yet been planted.

Nebraska and Colorado Seed Crops.

The Western Seed & Irrigation Co., of Fremont, Neb., under date of May 31, writes as follows: "We have had a somewhat backward and changeable spring, being warm early in the season, and changing to cold and rainy weather during April and the first part of May. This delayed planting to a considerable extent, but most of the crops are now in. Listed corn is

VAUGHAN'S PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of the colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Chicago Parks Bedding Mixture

This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies, they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $1.80.

Vaughan's P. P. (Popular Price) Mixture of Pansies

This mixture like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types, and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c.; oz., $3.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early-Flowering Giant White, with eye, Yellow, with eye, Light Blue, Dark Blue, Jupiter Purple, Mars, Cornflower Blue, North Pole Pure White, Wodan Black, and Mixed (eight colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c; oz. $3.00.

up and makes a good showing, but some of the larger varieties had to be replanted on account of the heavy rains filling the trenches. Sweet and flint corn acreage is much less than a year ago. This condition also holds true in vine seeds, not only in this state, but in Colorado and portions of California. We believe nearly all stocks of cucumber, muskmelon, watermelon, pumpkin and some varieties of squash are much lower than they have been for a number of years, which with a limited acreage will probably mean a shortage of some kinds next winter.

"The seed trade has apparently been holding off placing its contract orders for the coming season, and those that have been placed run considerably less than during a number of previous years. In view of this the growers have not felt justified in planting the usual acreage. Prices are less compared to former years, and are now at their lowest ebb. It is expected that this condition will improve between now and autumn, or delivery time."

Forty-sixth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

American Association of Nurserymen.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

As we go to press, the American Association of Nurserymen is in session at its forty-sixth annual convention in the Congress hotel, Chicago. The attendance at the first session, Wednesday morning, June 22, augers well for an excellent representation of the industry, and the deliberations extending through two days, and closing with the annual election of officers, Friday morning, make a programme of well-balanced interest, both in the open sessions of the many questions that have arisen in the trade since the association's last annual gathering.

At the opening of the first session, Wednesday morning, President Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., called the convention to order, and later responded graciously to the hearty welcome extended the visiting nurserymen on the occasion. Several reports followed, including those of A. M. Augustine, chairman of the arrangement committee and Henry B. Chase, chairman of the programme committee. After the disposal of regular business the balance of the morning was devoted to the programme as announced, including addresses of Hon. Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture; Hon. Edward N. Hurley, formerly chairman of the federal trade commission, and Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, the latter having for his topic, "The Situation as to the Future Imports of Fruit Tree Seedlings." Another number on the programme at this session was an address by L. B. Scott, of the United States Department of Agriculture, his subject being, "The Growing of Fruit Tree Seedlings in America." President Stark then delivered his annual address, an able and interesting survey of trade accomplishments and possibilities, following which the meeting adjourned to reconvene at two o'clock.

At the Wednesday afternoon meeting the entire session of the open period was devoted to various committee reports, among them the executive committee, market development, auditing and resolutions, as well as those of Traffic Manager Charles Sizemore and Treasurer J. W. Hill, the latter showing the association's financial condition to be very satisfactory.

The executive session which followed the open meeting, discussed the future plans of the association, the period being given over to "Market Development Publicity" and "How Market Development Funds Should Be Used to Produce Greatest Results." The object of the discussion was to arrange a plan of publicity for the coming year. Among those who spoke were E. H. Smith, of the Harrison Nursery Co., York, Neb.; Fred Burke, Graham Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y.; Henry T. Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; E. E. May, Shenandoah, Ia., and William Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y.

The Thursday morning meeting, an executive session for voting members only, will have for its discussion, "The Trade Mark" ("Trustworthy Trees and Shrubs"). Is it practical as an association emblem? C. W. Carman, Lawrence, Kan.; C. H. Perkins, Newark, N. Y., and John H. Dayton, Painesville, O., will lead the discussion against the trade mark, and Earl Ferris, Hampton, Ia.; Robert Pye, West Grove, Pa., and J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., will speak in favor of it.

For Thursday afternoon, an open programme session includes the reports of the chairmen of the committees on tariff and legislation, arbitration, standard trade practice, nomenclature, relations with landscape architects, courses in nursery training in agricultural colleges, and that of the advisory committee co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture.

At eight o'clock, there will be a meeting of state vice-presidents.

On Friday morning, state vice-presidents will make their reports, and following the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the selection of the city for the 1922 meeting, the convention will adjourn.

A detailed report of the proceedings of the last days of the programme will be found in next week's issue.

OPENING SESSION.

The first session on Wednesday morning was opened by prayer by the Rev. Dr. Howard A. Johnston, president of the Chicago church federation. President Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., then responded to the address of welcome by Capt. Arnold Jerns, of the Chicago Association of Commerce. J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., introduced former secretary of agriculture C. T. Meredith, who spoke about the great work being performed by the 17 bureaus of the United States Department of Agriculture. He told that through the self-sacrificing labors of men of the department, the value of the wheat crop had been increased 50 million dollars through the discovery of Durham wheat. Mr. Meredith stated that the appropriations for research work of this nature was only one-half of that set aside for free seeds.

Dr. Kellerman, of the federal horticultural board, Washington, D. C., in the absence of C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the board, presented an address on "The Situation as to the Future Imports of Fruit Tree Seedlings," bringing out the difficulties of importing nursery stock due to the lack of inspection in Europe. He thought that the United States will be forced to limit importations only to those species that are new to this country, and for purposes of propagation. The enforcement of the various quarantine laws had been effective in protecting the nursery industry, he said. President Stark then expressed his appreciation of the fair and honest views of Dr. Kellerman, and urged nurserymen to visit Washington to obtain a better understanding of the relations between the federal horticultural board and the nursery trade, and thus avoid the friction that has existed in the past.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

PACKING REQUIREMENTS REVIZED JUNE 8.

All packing materials employed in connection with importations of nursery stock and other plants and seeds under Quarantine No. 37 are subject to approval as to such use by the Federal Horticultural Board.

PACKING FOR BULBS AND CORMS.

Regulation 3, Quarantine No. 37, provides that the requirements as to freedom from sand, soil, or earth shall not apply to sand, soil, or earth used for packing the articles enumerated in item No. 1 of Regulation 3 when such said, soil, or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the federal horticultural board under the supervision of an authorized inspector of the country of origin, such sterilization to be certified to by the duly authorized inspector of such country of origin. This provision is extended also to bulbs and corms imported under special permits under Regulation 14. The prescribed method of sterilization is as follows:

All sand, soil, or earth used for packing any of the bulbs referred to above must be brought to a temperature of 100 degrees Centigrade and held there for a period of one hour. Such sterilization is accomplished at one of the department's field stations by the use of a large iron receptacle holding about a cubic yard of soil. The soil should be kept stirred during the heating process. Any method which will maintain the heat throughout the mass at the required temperature for this length of time will be satisfactory to the federal horticultural board. The sterilization must be performed under the supervision of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin and must be certified to by such inspector.

The board has also authorized the use for packing of bulbs and corms of certain soil materials which are believed to be sufficiently sterile to meet this requirement. Such materials must, however, be certified as complying with the required conditions by the duly authorized inspector of the country of origin. It should be definitely noted that the use of sterilized soil, and of the naturally sterile soil materials described below, is not authorized for plants or roots other than bulbs and corms.

1. Subsoil from Japan—The conditions of the use of such subsoil are indicated in the paragraphs quoted below, which were submitted for approval by Dr. S. I. Kumana, director of the imperial plant quarantine station, Yokohama, Japan.

All soil used in packing bulbs to be shipped to the United States to be collected and handled under the supervision of the director of the imperial plant quarantine station at Yokohama, Japan. The director will certify that the soil used in packing is subsoil taken from two to three feet below the surface that it has been sieved, sifted, dried and stored so as to prevent contamination by insects and diseases, and that no dangerous insects or diseases are known to occur in the locality where the soil is secured.

2. Dune sand from Holland—On representations made by N. Van Poeteren, chief of the phytopathological service of Holland, the Board has authorized the use, when properly certified, of dune sand taken from a depth of five feet or more from the surface.

3. Coral sand from Bermuda.—Similar arrangements have been made for the use of unsterilized coral sand uncontaminated with surface soil for use in packing bulbs shipped from the Bermuda Islands when properly certified by the director of agriculture of those islands.

PACKING FOR NURS. STOCK PLANTS, SEEDS.

Where any packing material is needed for the safety of nursery stock, plants and seeds, other than as provided for above, for bulbs and corms, such materials as sphagnum, cocoanut fiber, straw, chaff, excelsior, shavings, saw dust, charcoal and ground peat may be used. Such packing material must not have been previously used as packing or otherwise in connection with living plants and must be free from sand, soil or earth and must be so certified by the duly authorized inspector of the country of origin.

Authority for the use of any other packing materials will be granted on the determination of the board that such materials do not involve a risk of introducing insect pests or plant diseases.

C. L. MARLATT, Chairman.
Federal Horticultural Board.

Albany, N. Y.

Members of the florists' club are to have a camp for the summer at Kinderhook lake, Columbia county, about 17 miles southeast of Albany. At the June meeting of the Club President Samuel Hansen appointed a committee made up of Frederick A. Danker, Thomas F. Tracey, Frederick Henkes, and William J. McGinn, the secretary of the club, to select a desirable site and to make full arrangements for the camp. The committee has mailed its report in the form of a letter to the members. The committee, after visiting several places, decided upon Camp Howell on Kinderhook lake. The camp has a cottage, nicely furnished, and provided with sleeping accommodations. It is expected that some of the members will make use of the camp on Saturday afternoons and Sundays through summer. Meals will be served on the basis of 75 cents for a dinner and 50 cents for a breakfast or supper. The lake furnishes some good opportunities for fishing and boating, and arrangements may be made for the renting of boats at any time through Secretary McGinn. The camp can be reached easily over the Albany Southern railroad, an electric line, or by the Boston & Albany railroad from Niverville. At the June meeting each member was assessed $1 for the support of the camp. R. D.

Outdoor stock is suffering greatly because of lack of rain. Since May there has been an excellent demand for pansies which situation also holds true in Ontario. Business is fair in other items, and stock only needs a heavy rain to bring it into condition.

Florists' Palms.

Seasonable Notes.

The palm crop is a very important one to the grower at this season of the year, and especially so since so many restrictions have been placed upon it by the federal authorities. For not only have importations of plants been prohibited, but recently seeds have been subjected to chemical fumigation at the port of entry, a process that may easily become dangerous to the vitality of these costly seeds, and thus further decrease the percentage of germination, a percentage that in the case of Kentia seeds seldom exceed 50 per cent with the best quality of seeds that is to be had in the market.

In only one instance in an experience of more than 30 years did the writer secure a germination of 72 per cent from a lot of Kentia seeds, and in that case it was a small shipment of unusually fresh seeds, the outer covering being still green. From these facts it will readily be understoood that palm growers are not anxious to incur further risks in germination, such as may readily arise from careless fumigation. And as no serious disease or pest has been brought into the country, as yet through the medium of Kentia seeds, it looks rather like a work of supererogation to fumigate them now.

It has been stated by scientists, that the germs of many dangerous diseases, may be found in the mouth, throat and nostrils of ordinarily healthy normal persons at almost any time, but so far it has not been considered necessary to fumigate the general public with formaldehyde or sulphur candles, even though there may be some instances in which it would be beneficial. But the appearance of these various pitfalls in the path of the palm grower, bring to mind the necessity for giving the most careful attention to the crops we now have in sight, in order to get the best results during the coming season, and close attention to watering, shading and ventilation, are among those things that the grower should always keep in view.

A reasonable high temperature is beneficial to the ordinary trade species of palms at this season providing, that the plants are abundantly supplied with water, and sufficiently shaded to avoid the loss of color from the foliage, but this does not mean that no ventilation should be given, else the plants will get too soft to be of the best quality for the decorator, and in order to strike a happy medium it has been the custom to begin ventilation, when the thermometer in the palm houses reaches 80 degrees, and not to put on too much at the start, but to observe the wind and weather and to open the ventilators accordingly. During early summer all plants dry out more rapidly than they will in August, from the fact that in the latitude of Philadelphia, Pa., at least, we have less humidity in the atmosphere in June than in August, and this condition makes a great difference in the amount of water needed in the houses.

In June it is frequently necessary to syringe the palms two or three days in succession in order to keep a growing atmosphere, but in August the extreme humidity will sometimes keep the plants wet for two or three days without watering. There is a happy medium in watering, that the observant grower soon discovers as he becomes familiar with his soil, and it is these details of culture that count in the production of high grade crops.

Newly potted stock is where the unobservant man is likely to fall down, as a recently shifted Kentia, for example, needs a reasonably moist soil, but will not thrive in a sodden and poorly drained medium. Like nearly all the members of the vegetable family, a newly potted palm should be watered enough for the moisture to penetrate through the entire body of soil, but after this has been accomplished the plant does not need a repetition of the process until it begins to dry out, but does need thorough syringing overhead and underneath the foliage, to keep the leaves in good breathing condition and thus to help to start the roots into growth.

In the early days of the American palm trade it was thought to be a good method to use up the various cripples, or imperfect plants, by grouping them together in tubs, using two to five plants together in such a way as to hide their individual nakedness. But the decorators soon found that these made-up plants had more leaves to lose, and consequently were effective in decorating for a longer period than a single specimen, with the result that the retail florist or decorator now uses very few single palms, and the made-up Kentia in particular is the palm, par excellence of the trade.

TWO SEASONS FOR COMPOUND SPECIMENS.

Among large growers there are two special seasons for producing these compound specimens, which are now composed of good shapely plants carefully grouped for effect, and these two seasons are mid-summer and mid-winter, thus providing two crops of such stock each year. The summer crop requires less artificial heat for its preparation, but the winter planting can be brought along nicely with proper attention to heat and moisture, and owing to the fact that Kentias grow later in the season than most palms, it is not difficult to establish them at that period. It is a matter of taste and practice to make up the Kentias in an attractive manner, and no explicit directions can be given for the operation, but in a general way it may be said that the roots of the plants should be disturbed as little as possible, that the leaves should be arranged in the combination in a natural manner, and that the soil should be worked in carefully among the balls of the various plants, and warmed firmly after which the plants need thorough watering. Ventilate less freely over these newly potted plants for the first two weeks, after which they may receive the same ventilation as established plants of like character.

Phoenix Roebelinii is still among the scarce palms, the shortage of available seeds for the past three or four years having reduced the stock of this beautiful palm considerably. There have been a few seeds of P. Roebelinni offered last year and also during the present season, but this species is far from being a rapid grower, and the seedlings in 2-inch pots will require several seasons to bring them up to good six or 7-inch sizes. It is probable that no tremendous increase in the income tax will be brought about by growing this palm, but it is the most graceful of the Phoenix, and it would be a pity to drop it, and besides there is a possibility that someone may learn how to grow it faster.

A Beautiful Rose Garden.

One of the most exquisite and well planned rose gardens in this country is the center of attraction of the Widener estate, Lyndhurst hall, Ogontz, Pa. It is situated in the middle of the lawn to the west of the mansion, in which section there are many symmetrical forest and other ornamental trees. The garden covers a circular space 150 feet in diameter encircled by latticed arbors and posts which are connected by heavy swinging chains that carry the splendidly flowered rose sprays in graceful festoons from one point to another.

The arbors and main entrances, of which there are four each, flanked on either side with elaborately made standards of lattice work, all of which were imported from France. These stand on bases of Tennessee marble, presenting an architectural design that is greatly heightened by the masses of color of the luxuriously flowered rose sprays that completely cover them. Even the arbors, 12 feet in height, are arched with abundantly flowered sprays that present a most charming effect.

The center of the garden contains beds laid out in geometrical lines. These are bordered with low box edging and planted with hybrid teas, the outer row containing Polyantha varieties, Cecil Brunner being a favorite, it being always in flower. The main stock of the ramblers came from the collection of M. H. Walsh exhibited at the international exhibition in Philadelphia, Pa., which were purchased as a nucleus for this garden. Prominent varieties are Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy, Lady Gay, Wedding Bells, Newport Fairy, Hiawatha, Excelsa, Crimson Rambler, and some of the Walsh seedlings without names.

Outside the garden proper are a number of standard ramblers which with their gorgeous heads of bloom stand out beautifully on the velvety green of the lawn. The paths in the garden and through all the spacious lawns are filled with miniature white pebbles, making a good contrast with the emerald sward. Superb bay trees, the finest in the country, a number of them with a diameter of nine feet, are placed on the portico along the front and sides of the mansion, and border many of the wide avenues. On the ground in front are splendid specimen yews, perfect pyramids eight feet in height.

Well trimmed hedges of boxwood are a feature as are large specimens, one of which almost a perfect ball, being 14 feet in diameter. The large plateau in front of the mansion, with its water basins, electrically driven fountains, and fine bedding with background of superb trees, is a dominant feature of the estate. William Kleinheinz, the superintendent, has had charge of the grounds and greenhouses for many years, always taking a great pride in his work and never satisfied with any but the best results. His specimen foliage plants, orchids, acacias and other greenhouse flowers, particularly chrysanthemums, are blue ribbon winners at all the shows.

Syracuse Rose Society.

The Syracuse, N. Y., Rose Society held its annual show at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, June 16-17. The exhibits, consisting of 125 varieties, were tastefully arranged on long tables that extended the length of the hall. Chas. Kiefer was the winner of the S. T. Betts challenge cup, for the best display of roses of several varieties. Miss J. A. Frank Neal, awarded the silver medal, won 12 other prizes in the competition. Fred C. Wallace and S. C. Hubbard, Ithaca, N. Y., were the judges.

BEREA, O.—The Berea Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000. H. M. Farnsworth, L. M. Blair, Conrad Hessler, F. M. Farnsworth and Wm. F. Palmer, Jr., are the incorporators.—J. W. L.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Now that the July days are here, the summer time with its long wait between customers is on. The first of these leisure moments should be used in a retrospect and clean up of the business of the past few months. Frequently vases, pedestals, pot covers and other decorative material is found to be missing after the numerous weddings and other affairs of the past season. Diligent inquiries while the matter is fresh in mind will most likely result in the recovery of these articles, which could not be traced later. The firm's name should be stenciled on every stock piece of decorative material, as frequently in church and other jobs when one decoration closely follows another by different firms, there is at times a question as to ownership of articles almost exactly alike, which is quickly settled by the stenciled mark.

If there are any disputed bills with growers or dealers the sooner they are straightened out the better. It is the same with accounts of customers who at times refuse to pay a bill until certain deductions are made. In adjusting such matters it is best to give the purchaser the benefit of the doubt as a grieved or lost customer seldom has anything good to say of your flower shop.

A thorough cleaning up is also necessary, particularly in the basement, where frequently there is an accumulation of rubbish that gets mouldy in no time these hot summer days. An hour or two of diligent work will transform a cluttered up cellar into an orderly storage or work room that adds greatly to its efficiency.

SUMMER FLOWERS.

The most should now be made of the summer flowers which, if artistically arranged, give very good decorative effects in both store and window. Gladioli are fine for all kinds of spray work, either by themselves or in connection with other flowers. The annual larkspur in its various shades of white, pink, lavender and blue, gives pleasing color effects in combinations. Gypsophila, if used with judgment, adds a light, airy finish to many arrangements. Pond lilies, if their green calyx leaves are broken, will remain open for a long time and be found useful as a finish to many funeral pieces.

It is of great importance these hot days that stock for early morning orders be procured the day before. Anything choice is always scarce and should be on hand or ordered in advance to avoid disappointments. Much can be done with tight roses and other flowers in bud, in 24 hours or less time, in order to have them at their best when wanted for use.

ENCOURAGING SUMMER BUSINESS.

In order that customers while away may keep the store in mind they should be sent a well-written leaflet or folder containing information of the flowers in season of which there is a good stock on hand, backed by a dependable service at all times. Particular stress should be laid on the advantages of the telegraph service by which it is possible to deliver flowers to any city or community in the country on a few hours' notice. Such literature will show that the store is progressive and always ready for business, and may call to mind a distant friend to whom they would like to show such attention.

THE SILENT DEMAND.

In every store in the land there is a still demand that if listened to will turn the dullest season into a period of profit. This small voice comes from the storage room, which, on investigation, turns out to be a crying necessity for made up stock for the coming season. The wholesale supply houses are crammed with materials from which are made the handsome Christmas wreaths and baskets that are so much sought after at that time and which can be made up now just as well as later on when the rush of other business interferes. Energy of this kind is a certain cure for the summer blues, and at the same time takes the grind out of the work of the holiday rush period when even minutes are precious. Time can be given to artistic arrangements, and new ideas worked out, adding originality and variety that would not be possible later on. Many who do not give this matter attention until they are driven to it by the December demand, go through the same nerve racking rush of night work year after year, which could all be avoided by utilizing the idle hours of the July and August months in the making up of this Christmas stock.

A look over last year's record will show how many cemetery wreaths of a size were sold, the number of fancy chenille or other window wreaths, and the quantity of large and small baskets of colored flowers and grasses that are so popular at this time.

Are you doing your part in pushing the "Every Member Get a Member" campaign of the Society of American Florists. Every man in the trade should be back of this movement. The larger the society, the greater its influence in the betterment and expansion of the business. Make up your mind, then help your neighbor see the light and come in together.

Washington the Heart of the Nation.

The following article prepared by A. E. Seymour, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C., will be of especial interest because of the forthcoming convention of the Society of American Florists in that city, August 16-18.

For 120 years, Washington has been the capital of the United States. While its founders came here with a resolute will to lay broad and deep the foundations of the republic which is to endure while time lasts; to build a city beautiful and delightful to reside in, the future seat of learning, of art, of diplomacy, of world politics; yet it is difficult to believe they had in mind a country and a city such as exists today. Our nation has increased in population from less than 5,000,000 in 1800 to nearly 110,000,000. Our material wealth is more than $250,000,000,000, making us richer than any two nations in the world. The number of states has increased from 16 to 48. Our territory has grown from about 900,000 square miles in 1800 to more than 3,500,000 square miles.

Keeping pace with the splendid growth of the nation, Washington, the capital city, has grown from 3,000 in 1800 to nearly 450,000. The government employes has increased from 126 to more than 80,000. From a straggling village it has grown into a great metropolitan city, with beautiful homes, magnificent public buildings, classic and grand in architecture, wide avenues, splendid drives and parks.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

No title which can be applied to this capital city of ours is more appropriate, more truly descriptive, than the one—"Washington, the City Beautiful." Its growth in beauty has kept pace with its growth in population, in importance, in political leadership. The capital city of our republic is the city, unique and beautiful. Other nations have fixed their capitals in the crowded urban centers of commerce, and they possess the splendors that opulence has gathered around them. Our capital, like our nation, was made to subserve a principle, and it has grown up in the midst of mementoes and associations of the principle which it represents.

In the paved streets and avenues, decorated with homes and churches which are triumphs of architecture; in the open areas bright with flowers and fountains; in the circles and parks adorned with statuary and monuments of our heroes on land and sea, of men of science and letters, of our statesmen and jurists; in the thousands of stately trees which adorn its streets; in its substantial business houses, and the long succession of splendid public buildings; in its schools, colleges, universities, galleries and museums; in its noble river and picturesque landscape; in the gorgeous Congressional library, worthy mansion of letters; in that great monument to the Father of his Country, "the marble column, sublime in its simple grandeur"; in the Capitol, on whose first corner-stone the founder of the city laid his hand, already the noblest structure in the world, yet destined to be fairer within and grander without, in all these crowning glories our countrymen acclaim Washington as their Mecca. These things make Washington a nobler panorama and more inspiring in contemplation than are afforded by any other city in the world. Washington has more than 6,000 acres in public parks and reservations, and in the magnificence of its shade trees it stands alone, unique among American cities. More than 105,000 beautiful and splendid shade treees are planted along the curbs in the streets of this city.

London has been a center of civilization for more than 1,200 years. Paris has been a seat of government for thirteen centuries; other great European capitals have existed for ages. Yet where is the city that can show for any one century three products of architecture that equal the Capitol, the Washington Monument and the Congressional library. Washington, the City Beautiful, we cherish it not alone for its physical beauty, but for the beauty of its historic associations which stir American pride, and the beautiful memories of the wise and valiant who have made it the great American city.

THE CONVENTION CITY.

As the Nation's Capital and the City Beautiful, Washington is naturally the ideal convention city of the country. It is convenient and accessible. Six great trunk lines of railroads connect it with every state and community in the land. Its large, excellent and well-conducted hotels afford entertainment and comfort to all its visitors. Its attractions for the convention delegate, the tourist, and the visitor, are absolutely unsurpassed.

Every other city which makes any substantial claims as a convention city must offer special attractions and inducements to secure conventions. This is not necessary in the case of Washington. It is the one city which is absolutely sold in advance to every organization and every citizen of this country. It is the ambition of every American to visit Washington. This is natural because he has a sense of proprietorship in the city. To him who has seen the city once there is a desire to repeat the experience and to view wonders which he missed on his initial trip. There is a welcome here for all.

Objections are sometimes urged against bringing conventions to Washington in the summer months on account of the heat. We are able to present convincing evidence that these objections have no more force against Washington than any other city which has any claims as a convention city. We have obtained from the United States weather bureau, official figures showing the average temperature by months for the 50 years from 1871 to 1920, inclusive, in the 12 cities named below. In presenting these figures fractions of a degree less than one-half are omitted and one degree is added when the fraction is more than one-half. The figures follow:

It is not necessary to draw any conclusions from the above figures. They speak for themselves. We have also obtained from the weather bureau the highest temperature recorded by it in each of these cities during the same period. These temperatures are as follows: Boston, 104; Chicago, 103; Cincinnati, 105; Cleveland, 100; Indianapolis, 106; Kansas City, 108; New Orleans, 102; New York, 102; Philadelphia, 106; Pittsburgh, 103; St. Louis, 107; Washington, 106.

This must forever set at rest all criticism of Washington in comparison with other cities on account of hot weather. And this should be borne in mind, that for any disadvantage from the point of view of desirability as a convention city, Washington has a multitude of advantages over any other city. Washington is a great, perpetual world's fair. Other cities have temporary expositions, but Washington is an unending, never-failing world exposition.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce, a live, active, enthusiastic organization, made up of the leading business and professional men and women of the city, is always ready to extend the hand of welcome and assist in the entertainment of any and all organizations—business, fraternal, patriotic, and all others—which may conclude to hold their annual conventions in Washington. "On to Washington" should be the slogan of every organization which desires to hold its annual convention in the city which most attracts the citizens of this great republic. "Come to Washington" is the slogan sent broadcast by the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

American Sweet Pea Society.

NEW YORK, JUNE 25-26.

The thirteenth annual exhibition and convention of the American Sweet Pea Society was held in the American Museum of Natural History, New York, June 25-26. There were entries in nearly all clases, and a great quantity of excellent stock was displayed. All of the exhibits, excepting those of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., represented by Geo. W. Kerr, Lancaster Pa., were by private growers and amateurs. This concern as usual presented new and promising varieties. Good pink specimens noted among the Burpee collection were Hope, Liberty, Rosalind, Margaret Atlee and Hercules. Other excellent varieties consisted of Giant White, Fairy Cross, Floradele purple, Blue Monarch and America Spencer, the latter being oddly variegated.

William Gray, gardener for Princess Christopher of Greece (formerly Mrs. Leeds), had choice displays of sweet peas from her estate at Rough Point, Newport, R. I. The Hutchins memorial cup, value $250, was won by Wm. C. Noonan, Locust Valley, N. Y., for the best exhibit of 12 distinct varieties, 20 sprays to a vase. In addition he was awarded the Burpee trophy cup. Mrs. Homer Gage, Shrewsbury, Mass., (Allen Jenkins, gardener), and Wm. G. Taylor, Newport, R. I., were among others who had splendid displays. The show was ably conducted by Superintendent Edward A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., with Leonard Barron, New York, Arthur Smith, Long Branch, N. J., and T. A. Weston, New York, acting as judges.

President W. A. Sperling in brief and well chosen remarks opened the annual meeting of the society. All the reports were verbal and informal. It was stated that the society has $358 in the treasury. Prof. A. C. Beal, chairman of the nomenclature and trials committee was present, but presented no formal report. The place of next meeting and exhibition was left to the executive committee to decide.

The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: Wm. A. Sperling, New York, president; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., vice-president; Edw. C. Vick, Newark, N. J., secretary, and Wm. Simm, Cliftondale, Mass., treasurer. J. H. Stalford, Bar Harbor, Me.; T. A. Weston, New York; Wm. C. Noonan, Locust Valley, N. Y.; Wm. Gray, Newport, R. I., and James Stuart, with the officers named above, were elected to serve on the executive committe.

AWARDS.

The Hutchins memorial cup, to be held for one year only, for the finest 12 distinct varieties, 20 sprays to a vase, correctly named, in addition to which the W Atlee Burpee Co.'s prizes are offered—W. For the best display—Mrs. H. Gage, 1st. (Silver medal recommended).

For the best vase, 15 sprays to the vase, of white, pink, dark pink, lavender, salmon, crimson, primrose or scarlet, eight classes—Wm. G. Taylor, 1st.

Best vase, any other color, 15 sprays to the vase—Wm. G. Taylor, 1st.

Trees.

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

Missouri State Florists' Association.

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION, JUNE 27.

The Missouri State Florists' Association held its annual convention at Kansas City, June 27, at the Knights of Columbus hall, President L. H. Archias in the chair. The association was graciously welcomed to the city by T. J. Noll, president of the Kansas City Florists' Club, Mr. Archias responding with an excellent address.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed that the organization was making very good progress, considering the fact that it is but two years old. An address by August Hummert, a former president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, on increasing the membership of the association, was not presented owing to the death of his wife, and a floral offering with the sympathies of the association was sent to Mr. Hummert. The membership committee, consisting of the state vice-presidents, was appointed as follows: E. Denker, St. Charles; F. A. Windler, St. Louis; W. E. Carter, Kansas City; P. E. Stark, Louisiana; R. L. Isherwood, Chillicothe; C. C. Saunders, Clayton; W. H. Rutherford, Hannibal; H. Burch, Jefferson City; M. Wittrup, Marshall; S. Bryson Ayres, Independence; C. C. Wonneman, Mexico, and F. X. Stuppy, St. Joseph, and all local florists' clubs. Regular business having been disposed of the association adjourned until the afternoon session at 2 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

J. Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., the first speaker at the afternoon session, presented many interesting and instructive ideas on co-operative advertising. He was followed by Wm. L. Rock, Kansas City, who took for his subject "Benefits of the Florists' Telegraph Association to the Retail Florist." He looked forward to a great growth for this organization. Other interesting papers that were presented included: "Promoting the Planting of Hardy Perennials," by S. Bryson Ayres, and "How the State Fair Benefits Horticulture," by H. S. Wayman, Princeton.

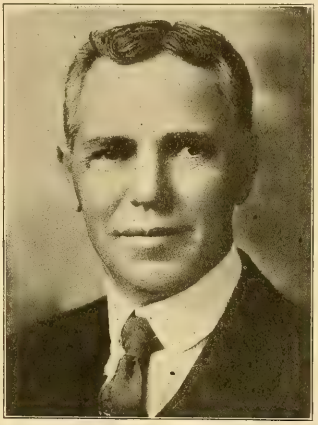
The members of the association were the specially invited guests of the Kansas City Florists' Club, at its monthly session held at 7:30 p. m., and listened to interesting talks by J. Fred Ammann and Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago, on co-operative advertising, and their recent experiences on the Pacific coast. President Noll announced that the annual picnic of the club would be held July 4 at the Pinehurst greenhouses, Pleasant Hill. The meeting adjourned early, and the members of the association spent the balance of a delightful evening at dancing, refreshments being served. On Tuesday, June 28, the visitors were shown over the city in automobiles by members of the Florists' Club, and all voiced their appreciation of the splendid way they had been entertained.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, president; T. J. Noll, Kansas City, vice-president; Wm. Wade, Kansas City, treasurer, and P. A. Manson, Pleasant Hill, treasurer.

PRESIDENT L. H. ARCHIAS' ADDRESS.

This is the fifth year of our association and I am glad to welcome so many of our members at this meeting. I suppose it is customary for the retiring president to make a few remarks at the opening of the annual meeting and as custom usually becomes a habit I will endeavor to address you on the following:

On May 15, 1920, I had conferred on me one of the greatest honors I have ever received, my election as your president, which took place in the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis, one of the finest institutions of its kind in the country, and for which honor I am justly proud and have tried to fulfil the duties to the best of my ability (which is poor enough), and beg your indulgence while reading this preamble. I am not a parliamentarian but will try to conduct this meeting to your satisfaction, with the aid and assistance of those I have appointed to take care of the different subjects assigned to them and I sincerely trust that there will be no "slackers." Since my election as your president I have had the pleasure of having our association recognized by the Society of American Florists.



L. H. Archias, Sedalia, Mo.
President Missouri State Florists' Association.

W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, Mo.
President-Elect Missouri State Florists' Ass'n.

PROFITEERING.

A year ago we could see in the dailies and periodicals in big heading type, "H. C. L.", which usually stood for high cost of living, but at the same time stood for the high cost of labor to the florists, and I might add, the high cost of coal; and the outlook is not very bright for any decline in the latter although the living costs and labor costs are more in line with prices of flowers and plants. It behooves every florist to stiffen his back against any serious cuts in prices during the dull periods and see that we, at least, get a living selling price for our products.

The trade of the country received considerable free advertising on the subject of Mothers' Day prices, emanating from the Denver, Colo., Post. However, personally I believe we were justified in the prices charged, but I consider it advisable to guard well our next Mothers' Day prices and if possible prevent a repetition of the notoriety of the last occasion.

When a new man ventures out into the florists' business the first idea is to cut prices until they finally hang themselves or adopt more sane methods before they "go broke" (to use the slang expression). We also find another class of merchants who are not florists but buy from wholesale dealers or growers and sell at or near cost. We would like to see a movement started that will cause every one in the trade to conform to the rules and terms of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

CRAMTON BILL H. R. NO. 247.

I presume that every florist present has received a copy of the Cramton Bill (H. R. No. 247), a bill introduced the past spring in the house of representatives, Washington, D. C., which if enacted into law will practically ruin the nursery as well as the florists' plant business. Immediately upon a receipt of a copy of this bill your president addressed a strong protest each to our congressman and senators at Washington and asked other members in the trade to do the same.

In closing I wish to thank the officers and members of our association for their assistance and support during my term of office, to thank all present for their encouraging support and especially those whose names are on the programme, that have responded, who helped make this convention a success, and now I wish to extend to one and all a hearty welcome to Missouri's centennial and state fair, (your centennial and fair), to be held at Sedalia, August 8-20.

By an extra effort of Prof. Irish and a committee of St. Louis florists, the premium list on floriculture was raised to nearly $1,000 and should attract the hearty support of the trade in this state.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The Blossom Florist was recently opened at 280 Fairmount avenue, by F. R. Verona and T. J. Hughes, of New York.

DULUTH, MINN.—The sixth annual peony show, under the auspices of the Northeastern Minnesota Horticultural Society, was held at the First National bank, June 30 and July 1. Judge Frank Cutting was one of the prominent non-competitive exhibitors.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—An annual rose festival, rivaling Portland, Ore., is expected to develop from the elaborate demonstration held in this city, June 22, when a rose was given to each traveler on the railroads and electric cars, and every citizen. The programme concluded with a large rose exhibition at Onondaga park in the evening.

Texas State Florists' Association

ANNUAL CONVENTION PROGRAMME.

The programme for the seventh annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, which will be held at San Antonio, July 12-14, with headquarters at the Anthony hotel, has been issued.

The meeting will be called to order at 2 o'clock on the first day, Tuesday, by F. C. Suchy, of the convention city, and vice-president of the state association. The Hon. O. B. Black, mayor of San Antonio, will welcome the visiting delegates, and responses will be made by H. O. Hannah, of Sherman, for the state organization, and by J. A. Peterson, of Cleveland, O., for those from other states. President Otto Lang, of Dallas, will follow with his annual address, and the balance of the session will be taken up with reports of committees, appointments, announcements of programme features for the remaining days, and closing with a paper by Mrs. Simeon Shaw, of Canyon, Tex., on "An International Holiday."

In the evening, there will be held the reception to the president, and a get-together meeting in Convention hall.

The second day will be devoted to a number of interesting addresses and discussions which will undoubtedly prove both entertaining and profitable to all present. At the morning session, which will convene at 9:30 o'clock, J. W. Furrow, Guthrie, Okla., will be the first speaker, his topic being "My Experience with a Fungus Disease Affecting Carnations," followed by T. J. Noll, of Kansas City, Mo., who will analyze "The Outlook for the Florist Business for Next Season." This will be followed by a round table discussion of "A Better Understanding in Pricing Flowers for F. T. D. Orders." "Shall We Make November 11 a Flower Day?" will be the subject of an address by James W. Begbie, Shreveport, La., and a discussion of "Profitable Flowers for Summer" will conclude the morning programme.

At 2 p. m., W. H. Englehart, Memphis, Tenn., will tell of the "Progress of the Florist Business East of the Mississippi;" the other speakers for this session will include R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., who will speak on "Salesmanship in the Flower Shop;" J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., on "How the Flower Growers' Association Will Help the Florists of the South;" "Every Texas Florist a Member of the Society of American Florists," by W. J. Baker, Fort Worth, and "Parks and Landscape," by Hon. Ray Lambert, commissioner of parks, San Antonio.

At 4 p. m., the members will be taken for a tallyho trip through the city, visiting the Alamo, Old Missions, Horn Palace Inn and Hot Wells. At the last named place a watermelon feast will be served.

For the morning of the last day, the programme features are: "Future of the Florist Business in Texas," by V. J. Davis, Fort Worth; "What Oklahoma Can Do to Help Supply the Texas Florists," by A. F. Koehle, Mangum, Okla.; "How a Woman Can Successfully Conduct a Flower Store," by Miss Martha C. Wood, Hillsboro; and a round table discussion, led by Mrs. E. C. Weissinger, Beaumont, on "Is Doubling Prices for Christmas, Easter and Mothers' Day Practical for the Florist Trade?"

The final business session will open at 2 p. m., at which officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and at 4 p. m., the delegates will be taken for an automobile ride through Breckenridge park and the zoo. A Mexican dinner will be served in the Mexican village at which a 40-piece band of Mexican boys, with Mexican entertainers, all dressed in native costumes, will furnish the music.

That there will be quite an extensive representation of trade exhibitors is indicated from the fact that there have been many early applications for space, including Lord & Burnham Co., New York and Chicago; Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.; Pittsburg Clay Products Co., Pittsburg, Kan.; McCallum Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. W. Davis Company, Terre Haute, Ind.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo.; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago; Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; Athens Pottery Company, Fort Worth, Tex.; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O., and others.

Conspicuous in Life Saving at Saugatuck, Mich., June 28.

The officers of the Texas State Florists' Association are: Otto Lang, Dallas, president; F. C. Suchy, San Antonio, vice-president; Louis J. Tackett, Fort Worth, secretary-treasurer; R. F. Williams, Dallas, educational director. The board of directors includes V. J. Davis, Fort Worth; Chas. Alff, Sr., Austin; Miss Martha C. Wood, Hillsboro; Wise Adkisson, Greenville; E. W. Judge, Tyler, and R. C. Kerr, Houston.

Tri-State Florists' Association.

The Tri-State Florists' Association held its first regular meeting in Fargo, N. D., and Moorhead, Minn., on June 24-25. The meeting was called to order by President W. B. Shotwell, with about two-thirds of the members present. The matter of incorporating the association was immediately taken up. Max Kaiser, of Saint Paul, Minn., made a few remarks on the benefits to be derived from incorporation, and a vote showed all present to be in favor of this plan, papers to be taken out at once. Annual dues were next discussed, and the consensus of opinion being that best results would be obtained through a large percentage of the employes of flower establishments being members of the organization, it was voted that the employes' dues be made extremely reasonable.

Old business then having been disposed of, new business was brought before the session, and it having already been ascertained the amount the treasurer held, it was unanimously passed that a donation of $50 be immediately made to the publicity fund of the Society of American Florists. A resolution was also passed to the effect that this donation be increased each year to keep pace with a probable increase in membership.

Max Kaiser then delivered a stirring address, laying particular stress on the association slogan, collective effort, proper treatment of employes, and the great benefits to be derived from membership in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. At the conclusion of his address, a rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Kaiser. At this time, enthusiasm having risen to a high pitch, inquiry was made among attendants as to their membership in the mother organization and it was found that but one person was not a member and his application was immediately obtained.

Very fine talks were then delivered by B. F. Siebrecht, Aberdeen, S. D.; Guy French of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; Mr. Shotwell of Fargo, N. D., and others, Mr. Siebrecht pleading for a greater effort in behalf of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and a subscription of $10 annually by each member to the publicity fund, followed by Mr. French, who spoke in a similar vein, awoke everyone present to the great possibilities ahead for the trade.

A place of meeting for the January gathering was then discussed and it was found that two cities were desirous of entertaining the club, namely, Bismarck, N. D., and Grand Forks, N. D., and it was decided to accept the invitation of the latter city, the Commercial Club of Grand Forks, as well as Mr. McElroy, being extremely desirous of entertaining the organization. Mr. McElroy then suggested that a flower show be held in connection with the meeting and after considerable discussion, it was voted that this be done.

The florists were entertained royally by the Fargo and Moorhead florists and everyone reported a very good time, there being but one casualty to mar the proceedings. Matt. Schilz is best prepared to explain this matter. Trips were taken to all of the greenhouses in the two cities as well as sightseeing trips, and after a banquet in the evening, the members scattered to go their various ways.

The following members were in attendance:

Harrold Briggs, Moorhead, Minn.
J. W. Briggs, Moorhead, Minn.
W. R. Briggs, Moorhead, Minn.
O. R. Eckhardt, St. Paul, Minn.
Morris Fredericks, Moorhead, Minn.
Guy W. French, Chicago.
E. G. Geste, Fargo, N. D.
Allan N. Humason, Chicago.
Max Kaiser, St. Paul, Minn.
Burrill Keith, Fargo, N. D.
Mr. Krug, Jamestown, N. D.
Peter Lindberg, Rugby, N. D.
Ernest Lueth, Fargo, N. D.
R. W. Lumby, Bismarck, N. D.
T. B. McElroy, Grand Forks, N. D.
George Mohn, Chicago.
H. Olsen, Wapeton, N. D.
Matt. Schilz, Laporte, Ind.
W. B. Shotwell Fargo, N. D.
B. F. Siebrecht, Aberdeen, S. D.
Wm. Tobin, Fargo, N. D.

JUNE BUSINESS SATISFACTORY.

June business was very good, due largely to weddings and decorations. There has also been a strong funeral demand. While stock of every description is plentiful it is the opinion of the trade that the peak of the rose supply has been reached and that there will be a gradual shortening of the cut from this time forward. Too many short roses are being received by the wholesalers and a large part of this supply finds its way to the street. Mrs. Chas. Russell is being offered freely and of excellent quality. Columbia and Premier are none too plentiful and these varieties find a market without difficulty. Prima Donna is always in demand owing to its good keeping qualities. Only a small lot of Butterfly is available at present. Ophelia is very plentiful. Ward is in good supply and is always sought for by the buyers. Fireflame never was better and moves readily. Ulrich Brunner from the second crop is now at the height of the season and is the best large rose on the market when well done. However, as it is plentiful prices are very moderate. The best Cecil Brunner is the outdoor stock. It is a difficult matter to secure white roses of any variety. For the first time this season there seems to be an over supply of carnations. This is due to the first warm spell and has produced a large cut of inferior flowers. They are being offered freely now by the street merchants. First class stock shows little decline in price however. Another item affected by the warm spell is the gladioli crop. There has been a sharp cut in price, owing to the heavy receipts. More white varieties are seen this season than ever before. Sweet peas are in large supply. No better stock has been handled this season than the present offerings. Dahlias have crowded to the front greatly during the past few days. So far the demand for them is very small. Pompon dahlias, which are popular with many growers, are eagerly sought by all the stores and are in strong demand for basket work and decorations. Many growers have turned their attention to this kind of dahlia this year and are growing it to the exclusion of other types as commercial flowers. Lily of the valley is good property and growers find a steady demand for their cut at attractive prices. The gardenia supply is shortening every day. Cattleyas are also diminishing daily. Prices continue firm at $2 a flower. The hot weather has put an end to the supply of small flowering gladioli and Watsonias. Snapdragons continue to come in small lots and sells well. Stocks are now fine and are being largely used. A novelty in the way of a cut flower is the Romneya coulteri, the native California tree poppy, and is a very handsome addition to the cut flower list. Buddleas are seen everywhere. Outdoor perennials have a heavy call. The supply of flowering plants is confined to hydrangeas and Primula obconica. There is only a limited demand. Ferns and asparagus are in excellent demand with splendid prices being realized by the grower.

EXHIBITION COMMITTEES MEET.

The flower show committee of the Retail Florists' Association and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held an important meeting on June 16 at the offices of the Art Floral Co. Chairman H. Plath of the schedule committee reported that all preliminary work had been accomplished and schedules mailed to all the growers. A guarantee fund of $2,500 was subscribed by the members present to take care of the initial expenses. It was voted that the prize committee arrange for substantial cash prizes, cups and other awards for all successful competitors. The following prize committee was appointed by Chairman P. V. Matraia: Wm. Kettlewell, representing the private gardeners; B. M. Joseph, the retail florists, and Eric James, the growers. Philip Benedetti and E. Krose were added to the association's committee, and Wm. Kettlewell to the committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society. James T. Lynch read reports from various horticultural societies throughout the state promising their support to the exhibition. The meeting adjourned until the call of the chair.

Joseph Bungard, formerly head designer for the Art Floral Co., greeted friends during the week. Mr. Bungard is now actively engaged in gold mining in Plumas county.

Final action on the co-operative flower market was consummated on June 13, when over 40 florists and growers signed articles of incorporation for the new market. The large building on Bush street will be taken over. Final signatures representing the owners are to be handed in next week, and it is the expectations of the incorporators that the new market will be ready for occupancy within six weeks. Joseph Haywood, of Peterson & Haywood; P. V. Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., and Charles M. Brown, of Brown & Kennedy are the men to whom the thanks of the trade are due for their untiring efforts during the past year to make this movement a realization. They have given freely of their time and money to the idea that the white growers should have a market of their own, and it must be with feelings of gratification that they now see their hopes realized.

NOTES.

George C. Roeding, president and manager of the California Nursery Co., Niles, and the Faucher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, arrived in this city during the week on the S. S. "Ecuador" from Honolulu, being accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Helen. Mr. Roeding remained at Honolulu while his wife and daughter continued on to the Orient, touring the far east and then joined Mr. Roeding on their return at Honolulu, arriving here on June 16.

The greenhouses of Peterson & Haywood, Burlingame, are now sending in a fine cut of seasonable roses. This firm has rapidly forged to the front, since acquiring the greenhouses of Henry Maier. Wm. Brown is foreman at this establishment.

Golden Gate park will be a large exhibitor of palms and foliage plants at the fall show. Superintendent John McLaren has assured the exhibition committee that a fine display may be expected.

A large meeting of growers was held June 13 to discuss plans for the new pottery, which it is anticipated will be built at Richmond and if a suitable location can be found.

The directors of the Dahlia Society of California held a meeting at the Palace hotel, June 23, when plans for coming exhibition were completed.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—The New London Floral Co. will make extensive additions to its greenhouses in the near future.

HARRISBURG, ILL.—J. H. Rude will open a flower shop in connection with his undertaking establishment in the near future. Byron Howle, Cairo, Ill., will have charge of the store.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Over 5,000 invalids and children in orphan homes were the recipients of roses distributed recently by the Federation of Women's Clubs, the flowers being donated by residents of this city.

OBITUARY.

Joseph E. Marret.

Joseph E. Marret, one of the oldest and best known florists of Louisville, Ky., died at his residence, 810 Cherokee road, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy, age 64. Mr. Marret was first stricken about a week before his death when preparing to attend services at the Church of the Advent, of which he was a member. His condition became such that little hope was expressed for his recovery.

Mr. Marret was born in Louisville in 1857, and for over 40 years had been engaged in the flower business at 814 Cherokee road. A few years after establishing the business he took in a partner, the firm then becoming known as Rompen & Miller. When he purchased Mr. Rompen's interest, he continued under his own name, and in 1918, sold out to his son-in-law, J. S. Miller, the style of the business becoming Marret & Miller. Mr. Marret, however, took no active interest in managing its affairs. He was at one time president of the Kentucky Society of Florists and exalted ruler in the Louisville Lodge of Elks. Mr. Marret was one of the most congenial of men and always had a good word for everyone, and was an honor to the florists' profession.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Lewis Wesch, Pittsfield, Mass., and Mrs. J. S. Miller, and two grand children, Marret Miller and J. S. Miller, Jr. H. G. W.

Henry Weber.

Henry Weber, one of the oldest florists in Brooklyn, N. Y., died at his home in that city, June 25, of thrombosis. He was born in South Brooklyn 62 years ago, and had conducted a flower shop at Fifth avenue and Twenty-fourth street, near Greenwood cemetery, for over 40 years. Mr. Weber was a member of the Society of American Florists, officer in the Brooklyn Saengerbund, and a member of various other organizations.

The funeral services were held at the Schermerhorn Street Lutheran church, burial being at Mt. Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Weber is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Herman J. Young, and a grand daughter, Elva Young.

Harold Trepp.

Harold Trepp, popular salesman for Clarence Slinn, 112 W. 28th street, New York, died at the home of his parents, on W. 28th street, of that city, June 22. The deceased was but 20 years of age, having come to this country when a child from Scandinavia. The floral offerings at the funeral were profuse and beautiful. A standing wreath, sent by the employes of the 18th street market, consisted of 400 red roses, 65 orchids and accessory stock. Numerous other designs, 75 in all, were received at the home.

Mr. Trepp is survived by his father, mother and a brother, the latter being a florist at Greenwich, Conn.

A. F. F.

James Snyder.

James Snyder, who for the past 25 years had conducted a flower shop at the corner of Ross and Morgan avenues, Evansville, Ind., died at his home in that city on June 26, age 58. His death was due to stomach trouble, having been in failing health for the past two years. Mr. Snyder was well and favorably known to the trade in Evansville and southern Indiana.

The funeral services were conducted from St. Joseph's Catholic church, June 29, and the body was laid to rest in St. Joseph's cemetery. He is survived by his wife, five sons and two daughters. W. B. C.

ARTIFICIAL flower manufacturers to the number of 225 reported production amounting to $15,978,000 in 1915 compared with 217 establishments and $7,614,000 in 1914, according to the 1920 census of manufacturers issued by the Department of Commerce.

BEDDING plant growers should set aside enough stock of their best varieties to insure next year's supply. The best sells first, and far too often propagation is from the stock left over, which fills the benches with undesirables for which there is no demand.

WE have just received a pamphlet of much interest to florists, Bulletin No. 239 of the University of Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md., on the "Relation of Certain Greenhouse Pests to the Transmission of a Geranium Leaf Spot," by Philip Garman, illustrated.

THE FOURTH.

On account of the holiday next week, correspondents and advertisers will greatly oblige by mailing copy for next week's issue as early as possible.

THE man who figures out his overhead will never be head over heels in debt.

Rose Show in Paris.

The next great rose show in Europe will be held in Paris in July, under the auspices of the French Administration of Horticulture, Architecture, and the Fine Arts. These rose shows are a national institution, but had to be abandoned during the late war. The July show will therefore be the first for several years, and will be of unusual interest. We are indebted to Samuel S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, Pa., at present an official of the Friends' Service in Europe, for an advance programme of the event. Mr. Pennock writes from Essen, Germany, under date of June 8, and says that he is looking forward with considerable interest to his visit to Paris for this event in which he will take an official part, having been appointed one of the judges.

In addition to the French officials on the board of judges, we notice some names that will be familiar to most rosarians on this side of the Atlantic ocean, such as: A. Chatenay of the French National Society of Horticulture; C. Cochet, Henry Graveneaux, both eminent rosarians, and Mm. Levecque, Noublet, Nonin, and Pernet-Ducher. Outside countries are also well represented, and among the well known names we notice that of Alexander Dickson of Newtonards and Messrs. Paul, Pemberton, and Turner of England. Holland is represented by Jonkheer J. L. Meek and M. Leanders.

The United States representative, Samuel S. Pennock, will be accompanied by J. Edward Moon, the head of the American Friends' service committee. The exhibition will take place in the Bagatelle Gardens, Paris. Mr. Pennock has promised to send more notes of interest in regard to the exhibition after he has seen it. We will all be much interested to hear what this keen and experienced observer has to say.

Chicago to Washington.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Washington, D. C., August 16-18. The party will leave the Grand Central station, Harrison and Wells streets, at 8:40 a. m., standard time (9:40 a. m., Chicago time) Monday, August 15, due Washington the following morning at 7:30 o'clock.

A rate of a fare and one-half for the round trip, on identification certificates, has been authorized, making the fare $44.96, including war tax. The one way rate is $29.97, including tax. THE DRIVE IS STILL ON—WAKE UP.

We are nearing the half-way mark in the membership drive, a time when there is great danger of lagging too much. Now, do not wait for "George to do it," but do it yourself. See your neighbor; it will give you an excuse to talk to him if you have not been on speaking terms. Or, if you cannot get up courage for so hard a task, write some friend you know at a distance and get him to join. By all means get somebody, the more the better. If they refuse you once, try, try again. That is salesmanship.

The harder you have to work to get a brother craftsman, the better business man it will make of you. Just try it.

National Flower Growers' Association.

OHIO DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association was held at the Deshler hotel, Columbus, June 21, President Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, in the chair. About 75 members were present, and judging from the enthusiasm shown at the session the state association will go right ahead in its work of organization.

Following a luncheon served at the hotel the first business session was held at 2 p. m. A well prepared address was delivered by Herman P. Knoble on "Cost Systems for the Average Grower," which appeared in the June 25 issue, page 1082, of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. In his talk the speaker referred to the absolute necessity at this time for the grower to establish a cost system. At the evening session George Asmus, Chicago, spoke on "Retail Store Management and Advertising," and brought out many new ideas on operating a flower shop. The constitution and by-laws, prepared by the committee in charge, were adopted with the exception of the paragraph applying to co-operative buying.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, president; B. E. Murphy, Cincinnati, first vice-president; J. L. Schiller, Toledo, second vice-president; Geo. Bate, Cleveland, treasurer, and L. C. Vinson, Cleveland, secretary.—J. W. L.

Irrigation.

Irrigation is most essential for success in the intensive culture of all outdoor cut flowers. Up to date growers care little for unfavorable weather reports, ready made rains are theirs whenever required. There is no investment that will show greater returns than a well planned outdoor watering system.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

The regular June meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association scheduled for June 23, turned out to be an automobile tour of the surrounding ranges. The machines began to congregate at the home of Elmer Weaver, some of the earlier arrivals inspecting the acres of gladioli planted by Chas. M. Weaver, where some of the late varieties are blooming early and some of the early ones are going to come late, but all looking remarkably good considering the weather we are having. A cold storage plant is being erected here to better handle both the cut stock and the bulbs and to take care of the immense sweet pea crops grown here through the winter season. At Elmer Weaver's the rose houses were of course the attraction and the vigor of a house just planted a month ago was the fourteenth wonder of the world to many of the visitors, but a good look at Mr. Weaver and his two boys, Lloyd and Paul, and the whole thing is explained, a combination of brain, muscle and a willingness to work any number of hours per day that may be necessary to bring results.

At 9 a. m. about 30 machines made the trip to Coatsville, and from there to Edw. Marshall's place, a delightful old Chester county home, where the house and grounds were thrown open to us and a picnic lunch was participated in by everyone, followed by a treat from the Kennett Square florists of ice cream, which was certainly a happy thought, as the thermometer was hunting the top of the glass about that time. A house of roses here was cutting some very good stock and the carnations in the field were a sight for poor eyes, even as a wheat field and ready to jump with the rain we are all looking for. We were joined here by several Chester county men, Wm. Swayne, Percy Bernard and others, as well as a few machines from Philadelphia.

THE PIERRE DU PONT ESTATE.

A short run brought us to the point we were aiming for, the Pierre Du Pont estate, and after a little preliminary work by Messrs, Weaver and Swayne, we had with us a guide and host, Mr. Mullis, who has charge of this establishment, and in a few short years has turned a wilderness into a thing of beauty that within the course of time will excel anything else of the kind in this country. Mr. Mullis is thoroughly in love with his work, keeping himself posted on all affairs pertaining to it. He was wise enough to get quite a bit of stock from the other side before the quarantine went into effect and consequently has a variety of plants and trees that is now unprocurable.

The gardens are a continued bunch of surprises; every known perennial and a host of annuals for variety were seen, all somewhat affected by the unfavorable weather, but nevertheless an eye opener to the possibilities of annuals as an adjunct to the perennial garden. Roses of every known variety were interspersed wherever they would be most effective and while it was a bit late in the season for these we saw some beautiful arrangements and could imagine the rest. The open air theater in the gardens is arranged with evergreen trees for wings, is terraced for the stage and has a seating capacity for a host, on a beautiful stretch of lawn. A planting of boxwood in a formal garden effect was one of the surprises in our walk, as without a guide it was liable to be missed entirely. It was these constant surprises that add to the charm of the place, but to the lover of nature in its grandeur the walk through the wooded part of the estate is perhaps the best of all, with its quantities of rhododendrons, native and imported, its lakes and water courses and the hundreds of native trees, a place never to be forgotten when enjoyed on a hot day such as we had for the occasion.

The greenhouses were not open to the public, but Mr. Mullis, realizing that we were not an ordinary public, guided us through what is destined to be the most wonderful private greenhouse in the world. Of course to the commercial man it is beyond his wildest dreams but none the less interesting. These houses have been described so often lately that it is not necessary to do it here, but simply to say that the most complete oil heating equipment is to be seen here that has been devised up to date, an equipment not beyond a large commercial establishment. The arrangements for growing fruit of all kinds under glass is fast assuming completion and today there are to be seen a number of houses in full bearing, others ready to plant and house after house of tropical and rare plants and just enough cut flower stock to keep the establishment well supplied.

Of course the indoor theater is one of the sight seeing attractions and certainly every thing is arranged for the lucky guests of Mr. Du Pont. The combination of music from a $50,000 pipe organ and the perfume of orange

Montgomery's Priscilla

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following growers:

blossoms and the surroundings of blooming plants, in a comfortably heated and well ventilated auditorium, what more could human man want? The ventilation here is so perfect that it was the coolest spot on the whole estate. The association and its guests certainly extend to Mr. Mullis a vote of thanks that comes direct from the heart for his courtesies of the day.

On the way home a run was made through Greystone park on the Sharpless estate and its beauties enjoyed from our automobiles. Here again we were indebted to Elmer Weaver for permission to take this run on a closed day to the public, in fact, we owe him a vote of thanks for arranging the trip. The journey home was made to suit the convenience of each one, some stopping at other points along the way, and others tired, hot and happy, hastened on to tell their friends of the wonderful sights they had seen.

Some of Mrs. Albert M. Herr's members of the horticultural department of the iris club participated in the trip and imbibed some ideas that will no doubt be worked out in a smaller way here.

Portsmouth, N. H.

Newspaper readers who have never visited this city are apt to think of ships and sailors, as there is a United States naval station here and shipyards just across the water in Kittery, Me. But to an admirer of nature, it has other and greater attractions. We cannot recall having anywhere seen finer trees than those which adorn many of the streets of this place. The elms of Richards avenue might be called, wonders of the plant world, at least for the eastern part of this country. There are also attractive parks that slope down to tide-water. The city must also have public spirited citizens, as we noticed a fine equestrian statue of Fitz John Porter, a native son and a Union general in the civil war. The florists of this city seem to be prosperous.

Richard E. Hannaford has been established here for a number of years and operates a neat range, disposing of all his stock in his retail business. He happened to be absent when we called, but we found Mrs. Hannaford well informed on the various features of the business.

The Portsmouth Flower Shop, A. C. Craig, manager, is a prosperous and attractive retail store. A. F. F.

Haverhill, Mass.

In common with many other cities and towns of Massachusetts, this municipality has good streets and parks shaded with fine old trees. In a park in the heart of the city, there is a statue that recalls the perils of pioneer days. It was erected to honor the memory of heroic Hannah Dustin, who, captured by hostile Indians, slew her captors, escaped and with a boy, who had been taken with her, returned to her home.

John B. Minton has a good retail store. Although not an old man he may be called an old timer in the business as he has been located in Haverhill for quite a number of years and was previously connected with the wholesale business in Boston.

C. H. Kaulbach conducts a range on the outskirts. The retail store in the heart of the city, is well managed by his daughter, Miss Ella F. Kaulbach.

Frank Leith & Sons, formerly growers of flowers, have given them up for vegetables, principally tomatoes.

BUSINESS IS QUIET.

Business has been very quiet the past week, due probably to the hot weather, but conditions are improving at this writing and a change for the better is noticeable. Stock is plentiful, especially roses, but good first class shipping flowers are exceedingly scarce. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in good demand but in short supply. American Beauty roses are included in the daily offerings together with Premier, Milady, Columbia, Ophelia, Sunburst, Double White Killarney, Butterfly, Ward, Hearst, Crusader, Maryland, Montrose, Golden Rule and Hoosier Beauty. Carnations are quite plentiful and it must be admitted some are arriving in good condition considering the hot weather. Peonies are seen at several of the houses but the supply is low in storage and with possibly one exception will be off the market in another week. Gladioli are quite a factor in the market and choice stock is bringing as high as $15 per 100. Lilies are obtainable at a few of the houses but are in short supply. There is plenty of lily of the valley to go around but orchids are none too plentiful. Water lilies in many colors are obtainable and a few sweet peas are included in the offerings. Daisies, calendulas, larkspur, candytuft, gypsophila, statice, feverfew, gaillardia, coreopsis and other indoor and outdoor stock is to be had. Greens are plentiful. Vacations are in order and many in the trade have signified their intention of spending a part of it at the Washington convention.

the month has been 72, which is 6 degrees above the June average of the last half century. The only rival Junes were in 1911 and 1919, when the average temperature was also 72. The hottest day last month was June 17, when the temperature hit 95. The wind movement this year is below the June average. The humidity has been high and the rainfall has been something less than one-half the average of previous years.

NOTES.

C. O. Wilcox, formerly with the W. W. Barnard Co. and later with the Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis., has joined the traveling force of the A. L. Randall Co. Mr. Wilcox is well known to the trade and his many friends wish him every success in his new position.

William Colligan, formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., but now in the dental supply business at Pittsburgh, Pa., visited friends here this week. He stole a march on everyone when he was quietly married June 22.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is handling a good supply of choice gladioli in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable stock, including orchids, lily of the valley and lilacs.

Peter Baumann, with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has bought an acre of land at Niles Center and will build a home on it in the near future.

Edgar Winterson says that the demand for ferns is brisk at the E. F. Winterson Co.'s store, eight cases being disposed of before noon June 27.

Wietor Bros. are booking orders for field-grown carnation plants, which they supply to the trade in quantity each season.

The union carpenters of this city are expected to go back to work this week and are probably on the job by this time. They agreed June 28 to accept Judge Landis as arbitrator of their differences with the employing contractors. This followed a conference between Judge Landis and the union's arbitration board and temporarily removes the last obstacle in the way of breaking the $100,000,000 building tieup in this city.

Vaughan's Seed Store displayed this week a grand collection of Colossal zinnias grown by the Chicago Carnation Co., and brought in for the wholesale flower market. Many of these run from four to 4½ inches and some nearly five inches in diameter. These flowers show a wonderful advance over former types in brilliance of coloring as well as in size.

A meeting of all members of the trade will be called for July 7 at 8 p. m., at the Randolph Hotel, when matters pertaining to the Pageant of Progress will be discussed. A big flower show will be held at the exhibition and considerable space has already been sold for trade exhibits.

J. E. Pollworth, owing to failing eyesight, underwent an operation on June 23 and will have another performed June 30. He will not be able to continue the work in connection with the Pageant of Progress, now in charge of H. E. Larson.

Miss Krahl of Des Plaines was married to Louis Linnemann, June 25. It was a church weddiing and the bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The happy young couple will make their home at Des Plaines.

Homer Lange, who is spending his vacation in Sunday school work at Saugatuck, Mich., rendered conspicuous service in attempting to rescue three drowning girls June 28, but unfortunately only one of the girls was saved.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. has received an order from Walter Amling for 7 steel houses, 36 by 300 feet, to be an addition to his present range at Pana.

The Florists' Credit Guide, issued by the Florists' Credit Association, successor to the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association, will be ready for distribution next week.

Miss Ruth Wattman of the Bassett & Washburn office force is expected home from her vacation next week, which was spent boating on the southern rivers.

The E. C. Amling Co. is offering a large supply of gladioli. Colored water lilies are attracting the attention of the buyers at this establishment.

Walter Walters of the Central Floral Co. will leave next week for Milwaukee, Wis., where he will spend a well-earned vacation with his folks.

The Bohannon Floral Co. is enjoying a good business, a large church wedding June 28 helping to increase the week's sales considerably.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have no complaint to make in regard to business for the month of June when the sales were very satisfactory.

Matt Mann, of Zech & Mann, is planning on attending the Washington convention of the Society of American Florists', next month.

A. Pierson, of Jupiter, Fla., called on the wholesale trade here this week. He ships large quantities of asparagus to this market.

At the Peter Reinberg store roses are in good supply and are cleaning up nicely considering the general market conditions.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is having a good call for Double White Killarney roses, which it is receiving in fair-sized quantities.

William C. Harry, with Chas. Henry Fox, Philadelphia, Pa., was here on a combined business and pleasure trip this week.

William Reed, of the A. L. Randall Co., and wife will spend their vacation at Sister Lakes, Mich., leaving July 2 by auto.

Miss Loretta Foley, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Foley, and James E. Morrissey were married June 29.

C. L. Washburn and wife are planning on visiting E. B. Washburn and family at Los Angeles, Calif., leaving July 6.

Vincent Neil, of the American Bulb Co., and wife will spend their vacation at Cleveland, O., this year, leaving July 4.

W. N. Rudd and family have the sympathy of their many friends in the death of Mr. Rudd's mother, June 25.

Miss Hazel O'Connor and Joseph Smith, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, will be married July 6.

Erne & Co. are supplying their trade with a complete line of outdoor flowers in addition to their regular supply.

Ed. Wojtkiewicz, with Kennicott Bros. Co., will spend his vacation at Wausau, Wis., leaving next week.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is still supplying its trade with peonies. Gladioli are in good supply at this house.

The John Kruchten Co. is handling a good supply of gladioli in all the leading commercial varieties.

John Degnan, with A. Henderson & Co., will spend his vacation at Saugatuck, Mich., leaving July 2.

Herbert Peterson, with the J. A. Budlong Co., will leave on his vacation next week.

Bassett & Washburn will be closed all day Monday, July 4.

TRADE FAIRLY BRISK.

While the demand the past week was brisk and then slow at times, on the whole it can be reported as good. Graduation and wedding orders still predominated and stock of quality was eagerly sought. The continued hot weather has reduced the quality of indoor cut flowers considerably. Roses are getting small and carnations soft. Plenty of outdoor stock, such as larkspur, gaillardia, gypsophila and daisies arrive every day. The green goods

In the parade on June 18, celebrating the 75th birthday of the city, was a large float made of large quantities of Easter lilies, larkspurs, carnations, roses and ferns; on either side were large 20 foot signs bearing the slogan, "Say It With Flowers." A group of pretty girls threw away thousands of roses and carnations along the route.

The board of directors of the Florists' Publicity Association met on June 28 to transact business for the summer season.

According to Gust Rusch & Co., the Cudahy Floral Co. has also discarded the Mrs. Chas. Russell roses this season. That leaves only one firm locally who still grow this variety in quantity.

C. C. Pollworth has returned from a week's fishing trip at Pelican Lake, Wis. Last week cleaned them up on young chrysanthemum plants, he stated.

Wm. Kuhl of the Holton & Hunkel Co. will be the first of that firm to go on a vacation, beginning next week.

IMPROVED QUALITY OF STOCK ARRIVING.

The market has picked up perceptibly during the past three or four days. The stock arriving at the present time seems to be in a slightly better condition than the previous week's supply. The moist weather and numerous showers experienced by this city and vicinity during the past week has brightened up all outdoor material. It is predicted that selling conditions will be much improved in the near future. Roses are a popular flower this week and first class stock is selling at a reasonably good figure. Varieties such as Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ward, Butterfly, Premier, Milady, Ophelia, and Killarney are in greatest demand. White roses receive very little call except for special occasions. Carnations are not plentiful and they are in good demand. Dark colored varieties are the best sellers. There is very little call for white varieties. The stock coming in at present is of moderately good quality. Gladioli are coming in in large quantities and the market is practically flooded with them. Surprising enough however, they enjoy a moderately good demand. Loveliness and Hadley are the two leading varieties. Easter lilies are not plentiful and the demand for them is brisk. Excellent pot plants are to be had at most florists for a moderate price. Cut flowers run higher. Lily of the valley is very limited as to quantity and is valuable property. Its chief use is in bridal and corsage bouquets, where it is used to a large extent. Some very fine callas are arriving and they sell rapidly. They are being used chiefly for funeral work. A few fine pot plants of yellow callas are being handled by a very few local establishments and they bring a good price. Cornflowers are on the decline but there is a large supply on hand and the demand for them is fair. Delphiniums are limited. They find a ready market and are being much used in combination with coreopsis. Shades of blue, pink and white are offered. Snapdragons are few and far between and sell well. Prices are reasonable. Only varieties of white, yellow and pink are to be had. Sweet peas are offered by a very few places this week and all stock on hand is outdoor grown, but is of fairly good quality. Stocks are practically all gone. A very limited quantity of fine shasta daisies are among the floral offerings but they do not sell well. Calendulas are not plentiful and the few still coming in are in no demand. Orchids are scarce with a good demand. A few cypripediums are offered and sell fairly well. Begonias are about gone and are offered by only a few tradesmen. Some fine pot plants of statice and candytuft are sold at reasonably low prices. Ageratum, geraniums, coleus and other bedding plants are also offered. Excellent plants of gloxinias and Nerling's fancy-leafed caladiums are shown in many windows. They sell well but the supply on hand is very limited as yet. Novelties such as pandanus, dracaenas, cibotium and bird's nest ferns, crotons, etc., show no change in price and always sell well. Greens are in demand this week and the supply is rather short. Ferns are plentiful and sell for $5 per 1,000. smilax of excellent quality is coming in larger quantities.

NOTES.

Street merchants are doing an excellent business in carnations, roses and gladioli, and handle an over-abundance of calendulas and second-grade delphiniums.

An excellent window of foliage plants with Boston ferns the feature is seen at the F. H. Weber store.

Large quantities of roses daily are being shipped by the Pilcher Floral Co., Kirkwood.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. reports a rushing business in roses and carnations.

Bourdet Floral Co. is displaying some excellent gloxinias and fancy-leafed caladiums.

W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, has been disposing of some fine carnations in this city.

Numerous wedding and graduation orders have been filled by Grimm & Gorly.

Fred C. Weber is enjoying a high class business in cut flowers this week.

The St. Louis Cut Flower Co. reports a heavy call for orchids and carnations.

HEAT AFFECTING STOCK.

Conditions have been rather brisk during the past week, which is quite unusual for the latter part of June. Funeral and wedding work has been exceptionally good. Stock is in fair condition considering the extremely hot weather and moves well. Gladioli are now to be had in better quality than any time this season and also at a fair price, ranging from $6 to $10 per 100. Roses are showing the effects of the heat as also is the case with the carnations, the latter not being much larger than the hardy garden pinks. Easter lilies have been arriving in better condition than has been the case for some time and are netting the grower more than usual, the best bringing $20 per 100. Plenty of outdoor stock, including Shasta daisies, cornflowers, gaillardias, snapdragons and lily of the valley, is arriving in good condition and selling well.

NOTES.

Ray Eck of the Eck Bros. Co. led Miss Marie Buehler of Northside to the altar for better or worse, June 25. Quite a large wedding was held at the bride's home, which was very charmingly decorated in pink rose trees and huckleberry greens. After USUAL SUMMER DULLNESS PREVAILS.

There is no denying the fact that seasonable dullness is coming on apace in the florists' shops and yet the demand is steady and at times quite active. June has been a fine month for weddings and the call for bridal boquets and home decorations has been surprisingly brisk. Some very substantial orders were obtained during the past week. Funeral work at this writing shows a healthy tone. The weather has been very hot and with lots of sunshine and an occasional shower all sorts of outdoor stock is coming into the market, most of it being excellent. The first gladioli of the season came on June 24, from local fields. Daisies are superb stock at this time and they are being used extensively for weddings. Coreopsis, cornflowers, gaillardias and delphiniums are being displayed and have a good call. The demand for roses at this writing is not very active, although the quality of the stock offered is excellent. There are still some very fair carnations to be had.

ers' Association, held at Columbus on June 21, was attended by seven growers from this city. They were: Wm. Krueger, Frank M. Schramm, J. L. Schiller, Armine Suder, Henry and Louis Miller and Harry Heinl. On June 27, the local organization met at Schramm's Bros., to hear reports from those who attended the Columbus meeting.

This week the Loyal Order of Moose arrive from all parts of the country for their annual convention. Over 20,000 visitors are expected here and the city is gaily decorated for the occasion. This should help materially in the sale of flowers, and florists here are active in the entertainment of the visitors.

During the summer months, Schramm Bros. will keep their front greenhouses attractively filled with pandanus, crotons and other available plants. They believe that they not only make the place look a good deal more inviting but that a good many sales will result.

With a capital of $65,000 the business of J. L. Schiller, local flower grower of fame, was incorporated this week. Mr. Schiller has built up a very prosperous business through his unusual ability and constant plugging. He ascribes most of his success to advertising.

A surprise shipment of fine hydrangeas came into town this week from Mentor, O., and was distributed among various flower shops. These were very welcome at this time when plants are scarce and selling well.

Wm. Krueger, rose and sweet pea grower, is building a palatial home near his houses. He has enjoyed a wonderful business during the past six months and is very optimistic regarding the future.

George Bayer, famous grower of bonaffons, has more or less retired from active management of his extensive ranges and his son, Edward Bayer is capably succeeding him.

As a memorial to his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Suder, who passed away some months ago, Armine Suder has decorated the grounds of the Woman's Club on Cherry street.

Joseph Galloway and wife, have returned from a motor tour of the west. They were both formerly connected with the Armine Suder establishment.

TONE OF MARKET SATISFACTORY.

Business during the week ending June 25 was rather quiet in many respects. Retailers report a slight letup, but as this is the usual dull period the change was expected. Despite the hot weather and the fact that many people are away on vacations, retailers are having a fair demand for loose flowers and corsages. Funeral work has been fairly good. On the whole the tone of the market is generally satisfactory and prospects for the future are not believed to be bad. Carnations are not arriving in as good quality as formerly and this is detracting from the business. Roses are still in excellent condition and sell at previous levels. Gladioli of excellent quality sell from $3 to $4 per dozen. Outdoor sweet peas, Rubrum lillies, coreopsis and gaillardias are offered in quantity.

NOTES.

Prof. A. C. Hottes, floriculturist at the Ohio State university, is out with the statement that now is the time to prune most of the spring flowering shrubs. He claims that when such shrubs as spireas, weigelias, bush honeysuckles, deutzias, climbing roses and syringas are pruned shortly after flowering they produce new growths and thus more flowers for the next season. Summer flowering shrubs should not be pruned until later in the season when they have finished blooming, he says.

One of the big social events of the past few weeks was the farewell dinner given at the Deshler hotel to John Y. Bassell, who was formerly secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. About 50 of his friends were in attendance, in which flowers and floral decorations played a very important part.

An account of the annual meeting of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association, June 21, appears elsewhere in this issue.

Newburyport, Mass.

This city, as students of geography know, is located at the mouth of the Merrimac river. It is a fine old place and its attractions are typical of the New England that is now passing.

E. W. Pearson has greenhouses on Marlboro street and an attractive retail store on State street. He is a thoroughly up-to-date florist and has features and innovations in his business that are lacking in some of the stores of larger cities. He has, so far as we could judge, an excellent trade.

In West Newbury, between this city and Haverhill, the extensive nursery of T. C. Thurlow's Sons, is located. Their exhibits of peonies at the Boston peony show were favorably mentioned in our issue of June 25.

This city has a number of good retail stores and two of the retailers, James J. McManmon and H. B. Greene have considerable glass areas. The McManmon range and nursery is several miles down the Merrimac river, but the store is in the heart of the city. The Greene range, known as the Highland conservatories is connected with the store and is centrally located.

The Edwin Shepard range and gardens, once a noted establishment, has fallen into decay. The houses being old and out of date are now idle. Edwin Shepard and all his family, excepting, we believe, a grandson, have been dead for a number of years. The Marshall range, on the Highlands has been demolished and the material removed.

Other retailers get most of their stock from the Patten and other ranges, located in the neighboring town of Tewksbury.

TRADE SLIGHTLY ABOVE AVERAGE.

Business the past week has been fairly good, considering the great quantity of flowers thrown on the market. The weather has been exceptionally hot and as there has been no rain for some six weeks, all kinds of outdoor crops are suffering. The burst of heat this week has forced in a lot of Easter lilies that were expected to last into next week, and prices have been reduced to dispose of them. The quality is fine. Lily of the valley is also in over supply from the same cause. Cattleyas are about equal to the demand. The largest overstock was in roses of which the higher grades are above the average of the season in quality. While there are still good Matchless, Ward and Benora carnations, the great majority of the stock now coming in should never have seen the market as it would be money in the pocket for the growers to keep it at home. Feverfew, candytuft, white and lavender, the latter color being as popular as the white, gaillardia, cornflower and annual larkspur are still very good, notwithstanding the extreme heat. The various expressions on the condition of the market have been in the main favorable and a little above the average for the season.

PACKING AND SHIPPING.

Reviewing the market, an experienced dealer stated that growers should, during this hot weather take the greatest care in cutting, curing, packing and shipping both in and outdoor cut flowers. Far too often they are cut in a soft, wilted state when on the plants. Such stock, although it will freshen up in water, never has the vitality of that cut in good condition. All flowers should be graded at the greenhouse and the poor sunburnt, faded and thrip-eaten stock discarded at once, and not sent in to be a burden to the market and eventually thrown away. All flowers should be chilled before being packed and then iced, the boxes heavily lined with paper to keep the cold in and conserve the ice. Auto delivery is best, as they are then certain to arrive at the desired time, which is most important, as late delivery often means missing the demand and the best prices.

PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The spring exhibition and sweet pea show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held at Masonic hall, Ardmore, on Tuesday, June 21. It was a very pretty little show, much curtailed however, on account of the continued dry weather. The entries of sweet peas, irises and other cut flowers from the herbaceous borders filled a number of tables, which with several exhibits of cut roses were much admired by the visitors.

ASPARAGUS IN FLORIDA.

Herbert Pennock, of Jupiter, Fla., has been spending several weeks in this city, his old home, visiting relatives and old acquaintances. His business in Jupiter is raising asparagus sprays for the northern markets. He has three and one-half acres under lath shades. This industry, he says, is growing rapidly, there now being about 100 acres in different sections of the state under lath for the growing of asparagus sprays. There is considerable care to be given if one is to get the best results, as it requires frequent watering and generous feeding with commercial fertilizers.

NOTES.

Alvah R. Jones and Dennis Connor spent an enjoyable day with the Lancaster County Florists' Association at Kennett Square on June 23. The Chester county boys were hosts in showing the visitors a good time. After a lunch on the lawn at Edward Marshall's, various greenhouse places were inspected and the party then visited the Du Pont estate at Mendenhall, one of the finest private grounds in this country. Although not yet completed the landscape effects and the many large and ornamental greenhouses gives promise of making this the equal of the most famous European gardens.

Three large school commencements at which thousands of roses were used, fell to the lot of the London Flower Shop, 18th and Chestnut streets; Miss Fletcher, 51st street and Baltimore avenue, and The Wayne Flower Shop,

DRY WEATHER AFFECTING STOCK.

There is the usual amount of grumbling over light business and hot weather, but all things considered, conditions are not particularly discouraging. Stock, compared with winter and spring prices, is selling cheaply, but that was to be expected. Rain is the greatest need of this part of the country at the present time. Unless it comes soon the outdoor flowers, except where there are watering arrangements, will be burned up. The greenhouse roses are showing the effects of hot weather by a rust or scorch on the edges of many of the petals. Many of the sweet peas are of poor quality. A few fairly good carnations, for the season, are arriving, but much of the stock is worthless and had better never to have been shipped. The best orchids are bringing good prices for summertime, but do not clean up rapidly. Large quantities of feverfew, gypsophila and other seasonable stocks continue to arrive.

June 27.—Today brought a little more activity in the markets. Heavy supplies are arriving, but much of it is in poor condition, due to the extremely hot weather.

NOTES.

A real estate item, interesting to florists is the recent purchase by William H. Siebrecht, Sr., of an additional two acres, adjoining his range and grounds at Chappaqua, N. Y. A short time ago he bought an estate of 17 acres, exclusive of the range and home site. A part of Mr. Siebrecht's holdings was once included in the farm owned by Horace Greeley, founder of the New York Tribune.

Miss Florence Edmonson, who for several years has been bookkeeper for M. C. Ford, the wholesaler, was married on June 22 to Bela James Porter, an accountant. Mrs. Porter is a capable and amiable young woman and sincere friends will wish her many happy years of wedded life.

Malandre Bros. have in their store a number of fine plants of aeclepias (æclepiaducœ), a species of the milkweed family. The flowers have a novel and waxy appearance.

Harold Trepp, salesman for Clarence Slinn, whose illness was reported in our issue of June 25, died June 19. See obituary column for further particulars.

William Bogart, who recently underwent an operation, at the Post-Graduate hospital is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

The Harry Vegeres Co., has bought the retail store at Lexington avenue and 51st street, formerly conducted by the D. & D. Floral Co.

Miss Katheryn C. Deasey, Philadelphia, Pa., M. C. Ford's niece, has succeeded Miss Edmonson as his bookkeeper.

FUNERAL TRADE REVIVES MARKET.

The market opened this week with a good advance in values over the previous closing but the prices were back again in a day or two. Business in general this week has not been quite up to the rest of the month. The call is still good, however, for wedding and graduation flowers. Good white and red flowers still sell at a premium over other stock. Carnations are getting scarce each week, also poorer in quality. Gladioli are increasing but still clean up readily at $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Lilies have become scarce again with a fair demand for them. The market slackened considerably about midweek but the death of Gen. Chas. H. Taylor, editor of the Boston Globe and a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic, on Wednesday, sharpened the demand for stock of all kinds from common garden flowers to the choicest orchids. Never within the recollection of any florist in this city was there a larger or choicer collection of stock seen at any funeral. The prices did not advance any but it was responsible for a general cleanup of almost every flower.

NOTES.

At the rose and strawberry show held by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, June 25-26, E. E. Randall, Pride's Crossing, was awarded first prize for the best three blooms of any white hybrid perpetual roses and Wm. C. Cooper first for one plate of Golden Gate strawberries.

The Rosary of Copley square is moving July 1 to new quarters on Boylston street. It is reported that Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., has leased the store that the Rosary is to vacate in Copley square for their Back Bay shop as their lease expires in the fall.

Eric Laurentz, salesman at the Thos. F. Galvin, Jr., store, has gone to Nantucket for the summer to take charge of the Siasconset Golf Club, of which Thos. F. Galvin, Sr., is proprietor.

Arthur Carr and Harry Ward of the Flower Exchange have returned from an auto trip the past week through New England and New York state.

S. Hoffman has opened his summer branch at the New Ocean house, Swampscott.

Wm. Penn left on July 2 for a month's vacation at Moosehead Lake.

Wm. McAlpine has returned from a two weeks' fishing trip in Maine.

F. J. Dolansky sailed on June 29 for a four months' trip to Europe.

E. F. S.

Hartford, Conn.

This city holds many attractions, but in June the real show place is the rose garden in Elizabeth park. Every year that we visit it, improvements are noted. On June 23, the date of our last visit the arches, pillars, standards and beds were in magnificent bloom. The prevailing colors in the arches are pink, red and white as must necessarily be so, but there are varying shades of pink, yellow and white throughout the beds.

There is an experiment or trial garden adjoining where well known growers have planted stock. These include F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; The H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; and Coombs, Florist of this city. Geo. B. Hart has a bed of Old Gold that bears handsome flowers in great quantity. Several of the Dreer plantings look promising. The Gude Bros.' Red Radiance is an excellent garden rose.

The trained varieties are so numerous and attractive that it is hard to choose. The following hybrid perpetuals were particularly noteworthy: Victor Verdier, Hippolyte Jamien and Marquise de Castellane. Brief mention must be made of the American Pillar which was finer in this garden than we have ever before seen it.

In the past years it has been the custom of the American Rose Society to hold a session at this garden. Why it has been abandoned, we are unable to state.

While hot weather is bearing heavily on the retail florists, in this city, they are all finding something to do.

A. F. F.

CONTINENTAL, O.—Clyde Schafer is erecting a greenhouse.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Mrs. J. B. Thompson, 1305 Hewitt avenue, one of the pioneer peony growers of this city, and 72 years of age, had an exhibit at the recent show of the Northwest Peony and Iris Association.

ADRIAN, MICH.—At a recent meeting of the Lenawee County Horticultural Society, papers on the culture of strawberries and June flowers were presented by E. W. Allis and O. E. Clark. Exhibits of strawberries and flowers were a feature of the session.

American Seed Trade Association.

As announced in our issue of June 25, page 1108, the American Seed Trade Association opened its thirty-ninth annual convention at the Hotel Statler, June 22, the meeting well attended and full of interest, extending three days.

THURSDAY'S SESSIONS.

Thursday morning was devoted to a discussion of publicity. Kirby B. White of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., made a talk on "Promoting Larger and More General Plantings of Vegetable and Flower Seeds."

Mr. White said that home gardening was on the increase from natural causes, not the least of which were increased population, which always made agriculture more intensive, and transportation costs, which favored local production of foodstuffs. He cited the growing practice of beverage producers to ship to local centers the solid ingredients of their drinks, for bottling and distribution, thus escaping freight charges on water. Bulky and quickly perishable vegetables were subject to the same influences, he said, and local production would be stimulated by the same cause.

The seedsmen could hasten this tendency and divert it to their own profit by wise publicity methods, Mr. White asserted. For one thing, he suggested that in all advertisements published by seedsmen, a general argument in favor of home gardening be included, to gain recruits for gardening. The work of the National Garden Bureau, established two years ago as a result of action of the executive committee of the association, was commended by Mr. White. He declared that the money contributed to the bureau brought more results in proportion than any money spent for advertising.

L. L. Olds of Madison, Wis., read a paper on "Promoting the Use of More and Better Field Grass and Clover Seed on the Farms." He advocated greater care in labeling farm seed, in order that buyers may tell exactly what they are getting. He cited in particular clover seed and seed corn, and pointed out the need for specifying not only the variety of corn but the place it was produced, since the season of growth was influenced by the place of production. European clover seed, he said, had been found incapable of surviving winters in Indiana, and the seed trade was harmed by disappointing experiences among farmers due to inexact labeling. The possibility of propaganda in favor of field seed such as was being conducted for home gardens was raised, and the rewriting of catalogue descriptions to give more exact information on the seeds offered was urged.

Leonard H. Vaughan, chairman of the special advertising committe, read a report on the work of the National Garden Bureau. A display of clipping sheets which had been distributed by the bureau and newspaper clippings from the 560 daily newspapers which had used the bureau's home garden service this year was made on the walls of the meeting room. Mr. Vaughan pointed out the value to the trade of the widesperad publicity for home gardens which had been obtained, and its small cost as compared to the cost of a paid advertising campaign. He told the audience how seedsmen can take greater advantage of the publicity by following it with their own advertisements and how newspapers which have not used the articles can be induced to publish them. In closing Mr. Vaughan recommended that the work be continued under the direction of a committee of five which should be authorized to request, in the name of the seed trade association, a contribution of $50 from each member, with additional contributions from those whose business was of such volume as to warrant it, in the judgment of the committee, such additional amounts to be fixed by the committee. This resolution was unanimously adopted by the meeting when voted on at the close of the session.

James H. Burdett, director of the National Garden Bureau, described the methods followed by the bureau in distributing to newspapers home garden notes with illustrations. He asserted that with co-operation from the seedsmen in their home cities, in another two years every city in the country would have at least one newspaper regularly publishing a home garden department, and that nothing that could be done would contribute more toward making the United States a country of gardens.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Papers showing the great development of the seed trade in the south were read, Frank S. Love of Montgomery, Ala., dealing with the southeast and Dick O'Bannon of Sherman, Texas, with the southwest. L. D. Waller of Guadalupe, Calif., read an interesting paper on the flower seed growing industry in California.

Eugene D. Funk, Bloomington, Ill., presented an address on "The Latest Developments in Corn Breeding," illustrated with stereopticon views, in which he told how previous standards of corn breeding had been revolutionized by the discovery of diseases, manifested in molds, which developed on seed in germination and seriously affected the yield. Experiments in producing disease free strains had caused former ideas about the ideal ear to be discarded, he said, and the breeder's efforts were now being concentated upon getting a healthy high germinating seed regardless of the shape of the ear.

Dr. S. P. Doolittle of the bureau of plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture, read a paper on "Mosaic and Angular Spot Diseases of Cucumbers," which was splendidly illustrated with stereopticon views.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The banquet at the Hotel Statler was most successful, with a large attendance. After an excellent menu, President Hastings introduced as toastmaster R. F. McNally, vice-president of the St. Louis Bank of Commerce. Jewell Mayes, secretary of the state board of agriculture, Jefferson City, Mo., and Albert C. Wilson, chief seed analyst of Illinois, made talks which were received with applause. Martin W. Kreiger of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce Glee Club led the banqueters in songs which demonstrated unusual vocal talent to be possessed by the seed trade.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The closing session was very busy. Amendments were adopted to the constitution admitting to membership state and regional seed trade associations, while a proposed amendment to establish a permanent arbitration committee to settle trade disputes was rejected and the present provision, for the appointment of a special arbitration committee by the president upon request was allowed to stand.

The report of the nomenclature committee presented by Francis C. Stokes of Moorestown, N. J., provoked lively discussion. Mr. Stokes proposed four questions upon which he asked the decision of the convention.

1. Is the association opposed to the indiscriminate renaming of standard or new varieties?

2. Will the committee accept a code of nomenclature to govern the naming of standard and new varieties?

3. Shall lists of standard varieties recognized by the association be published?

4. Shall a registration committee be named to provide a method for registering the names of recognized new varieties?

Mr. Stokes stated that his committee had worked hard upon this programme and was in doubt about the earnestness of some members of the trade in the support of such a reform of present conditions, and before proceeding further wished assurance that the association would stand back of them.

Kirby B. White and Watson Woodruff supported the recommendations of the committee while David Burpee opposed them. J. C. Vaughan assured the members that registration of new varieties was being handled without difficulty by the Society of American Florists and could be so handled by the seed trade. A discussion as to the legal effect of copyrighting names was participated in by Curtis Nye Smith, counsel of the association. By a vote of 32 to nine the report of the committee was adopted and it was authorized to go ahead with the programme outlined.

J. C. Vaughan reporting for the tariff committee, said that a new tariff was now being drawn up in Washington, D. C., and whether hearings would be granted after the bill was reported to the house was doubtful, but that no hearings would be held until it was so reported. In response to a general invitation, he had visited Washington and impressed upon the committee of the house that the seed trade was unanimously interested in retaining the specific method of assessing duties and opposing a return to the ad valorem method. As speaking for the trade as a whole, the committee has expressed no opinion as to whether schedules should be lowered or raised, he said; but he knew that individual seedsmen had appealed to their congressmen for changes in existing rates and that a request had been made for changing from the free list to the dutiable list, flower seeds now grown in this country.

L. L. Olds read a comprehensive paper on the matters of interest to seedsmen which was contained in experiment station reports during the last year. The convention then adjourned.

The following officers were elected to serve for the coming year:

L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., president; Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J., first vice-president; Louis B. Reuter, New Orleans, La., second vice-president, and C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., secretary-treasurer.

CONVENTION NOTES.

George C. Watson, Philadelphia, Pa., says to the convention: "What the seedsmen of America need is help, not hindrance, from the national and state governments. Up to the present time it has been all, 'Thou shalt not this or thou shalt not that.' Let them switch around and try to help the seed trade in its earnest endeavors to advance the interests of agriculture, horticulture and arboriculture, instead of all the time passing more laws to hinder."

The resolution to continue the nomenclature committee and eliminate the many duplicates in names of vegetables was the most important step recently taken by the association.

President Hastings nominated John Fottler, Jr., of Boston, Mass., for honorary membership, which was unanimously confirmed.

Members were much pleased with the weather. The Statler roof garden was delightful.

Past President Hastings and wife returned home via Louisville, Ky.

S. F. Willard of Comstock, Ferre & Co., was wired greetings.

Many members returned to their homes Thursday night.

Outdoor opera made a great hit with the visitors.

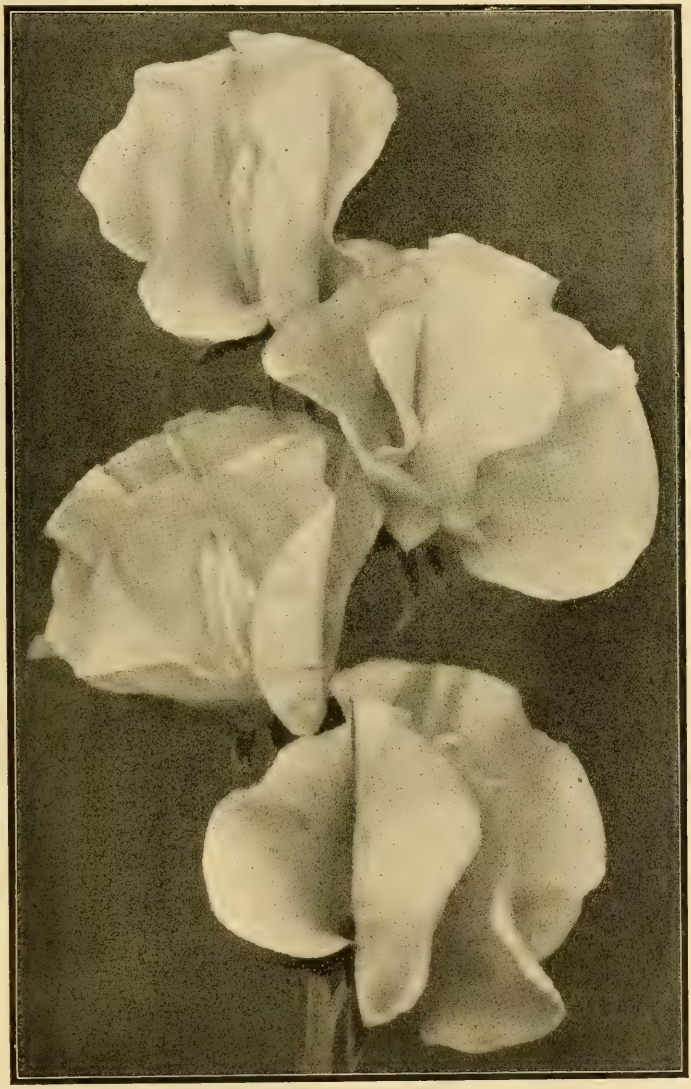
Burpee's New Sweet Pea

MRS. WARREN G. HARDING

"The Harding Blue"



THIS distinct early or winter-flowering novelty is a great and decided advance. It is really a pronounced acquisition to its color class.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding is a deep shade of silver-blue—the color that is already so well known as "The Harding Blue." The color is pure throughout, with no suspicion of mauve or rose. The flowers are immense in size, with a broad and much frilled standard. The wings also are well waved, and a large proportion of the flowers are duplex or double, which lends weight, size, and beauty to the bunch. It is a vigorous grower. The flowers are produced freely and usually in fours.

We originally exhibited this novelty under the name of Silver Blue. By special permission from "The First Lady of the Land," however, we have now named this most outstanding novelty Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding is one of the most admired early-flowering Sweet Peas we have ever originated. It was awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show in New York, March 14, 1921.

We now offer Mrs. Warren G. Harding for the first time. We present it to the trade with the confident feeling that it will have great commercial value to florists in all parts of the nation

Our stock of Mrs. Warren G. Harding is very limited; so we would suggest that you order as early as possible.

Ounce, $12.00;
¼ lb., $45.00,
postpaid.

In addition to Mrs. Warren G. Harding, we have other outstanding Burpee Novelties in the early or winter-flowering type. Send for our Special Sweet Pea Folder for Florists, which gives full descriptions and prices of all these wonderful novelties, and a complete descriptive list of other worth-while early flowering Sweet Peas. It will be sent free.

VAUGHAN'S PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of the colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Chicago Parks Bedding Mixture

This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies, they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $1.80.

Vaughan's P. P. (Popular Price) Mixture of Pansies

This mixture like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types, and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c.; oz., $3.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early-Flowering Giant White, with eye, Yellow, with eye, Light Blue, Dark Blue, Jupiter Purple, Mars, Cornflower Blue, North Pole Pure White, Wodan Black, and Mixed (eight colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c; oz. $3.00.

The forty-seventh annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1922.

American Association of Nurserymen.

More than usual interest in the proceedings characterized the forty-sixth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, which was held at the Congress hotel, Chicago, June 22-24, the opening session, and early arrivals being announced in our issue of June 25, page 1116.

In connection with the address of former secretary of agriculture E. T. Meredith, delivered on Wednesday, June 22, a letter was read from Dr. David Fairchild, agricultural explorer for the bureau of plant industry, Washington, D. C. Much valuable and interesting data was given in regard to the introduction of plants into the United States, a total of 53,489 kinds having been admitted to date. Among the plants that have been successfully grown, either in the private gardens of some 10,000 bona fide amateur growers, or at the state experiment stations, Dr Fairchild included the following:

The Chinese wild peach, which is the best stock yet discovered for peaches on alkali land; Chinese hardy wild pear, being immune to pear blight; Tamopan persimmon of China, a seedless, and (if properly grown) puckerless variety already established on the northern markets; Chinese dry land elm, now growing in the great plains area of the west, which is used for windbreaks in the Dakotas; the early cherry, bush cherry, the latter being hardy and beautiful, and the large-fruited hawthorn from north China, are other plants that are being successfully grown here. The Siberian poplar is hardy in Canada, where other varieties winter-kill, and the Siberian larch is proving valuable as a timber tree in the northwest. The Chinese holly is another hardy tree.

In addition to the money value of these plants, which, roughly speaking, add about $100,000,000 annually to the wealth of this country, Dr. Fairchild stated that there is an educational value to the people in acquainting them with the desirability of utilizing every square acre of available land for food production.

L. B. Scott, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in taking for his subject, "The Growing of Fruit Tree Seedlings in America," outlined the work that his department has accomplished under the appropriation of $20,000 for nursery stock investigations. A small portion, he said, had gone to the office of Dr. Fairchild to be spent in strictly plant introduction features, while the greater part of the appropraition was being used in the office of Dr. L. C. Corbett, which is primarily engaged in solving the question of the general improvement of tree stocks: First, by better methods of handling; second, better selection of seedling types, and, third, by developing some simple, practical and economical method of vegetative propagation for tree stocks. Mr. Scott stated that all of the important nursery sections had been visited with a view toward getting first hand information in regard to nursery problems. He wished to thank nurserymen throughout the country for their hearty co-operation with the department in carrying on its work.

Dr. Corbett spoke briefly on the same subject, and a committee of the association appointed to consider and assist in the work explained by Mr. Scott and Dr. Corbett, presented a resolution approving of the work of the office of horticultural and pomological investigation of the Department of Agriculture, and recommended that congress appropriate sufficient funds to extend its investigations.

In speaking of blister rust control, S. B. Detwiler of the Department of Agriculture, said that the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California have splendid and very valuable stands of white pine. This section of the country is free of the blister rust which at present is confined to the eastern section of the country. Through the enforcement of Quarantine No. 26, which prohibits the shipment of currant and gooseberry bushes, the host plants of this disease, west of the quarantine line, these forests are expected to be saved. The pine areas in the east benefited to a great extent, he said, by pulling up the wild and cultivated currants and gooseberries in the vicinity. There had been during the year, Mr. Detwiler concluded, a total of 174 violations of the quarantine act, of plants going west of the line, and if the violation should continue, disease would certainly affect the western pine tracts, causing severe losses.

Dr. Kellerman, of the federal horticultural board, said that it is not the motive of the board to bring cases into court and secure convictions, in the violations mentioned above, but to prevent dangerous plant material from moving. He urged that a committee of the association be appointed to devise some plan whereby these violations may be avoided, and through cooperation with the board secure compliance with the quarantine.

It was then decided by the association to appoint two committees, one to co-operate with Mr. Detwiler in the compilation and publication of easily understood editions of federal and state quarantne regulations, and the other to co-operate with the federal horticultural board, its special function being to endeavor to work out methods of enforcing the various quarantines.

THURSDAY'S SESSION.

Harlan P. Kelsey, chairman of the committee on nomenclature, stated that the official catalogue of standardized plant names was now being printed, a book of probably 500 pages, and should reach publication before 1922. He said that it was a big beginning toward standardizing horticultural trade practice in America, and would enable the trade to know what it is growing, advertising and selling. Mr. Kelsey reported further, on behalf of the committee on standardization, that there are certain things in the nursery trade and horticultural practice that need standardizing, such as standard rules and methods for growing and grading nursery stock, meaning of all trade terms and words describing stock, methods of packing, color chart, list of general terms and abbreviations used in catalogues and shipping, and sales and collection methods.

Fruit trees, ornamental trees, shrubs, etc., each need carefully to be considered by those specializing in them, and Mr. Kelsey suggested that a committee be appointed to represent horticultural lines and different sections of the country. He further suggested that a committee on standardization and abbreviations, consisting of not less than three or more than five members and a sum of not less than $1,000 be appropriated, to enable the committee to prepare a preliminary report, to be sent in proof form to each member of the association not later than February 1, 1922, with a request for suggestions. A revised report would then be prepared and printed, and would be submitted at the next annual convention for discussion, revision and adoption. Mr. Kelsey's recommendation was referred to the executive committee with power to act.

Chas. Sizemore, traffic manager, reported claims amounting to $12,330.76, having been collected, with other claims of $15,000 still pending with the carriers. The statement of Treasurer J. W. Hill showed the finances to be in a sound condition, with a balance of $10,389.99 in the treasury.

President Lloyd C. Stark then presented his very able address and was followed by Paul C. Lindley, chairman of the vigilance committee, who presented his report. George A. Marshall, chairman of the arbitration committee, advised that his committee had passed on six controversies during the year, with five cases pending at the present time.

At the closing session, June 24, the association adopted a resolution heartily endorsing and commending the nation-wide movement for the planting of memorial trees.

The official trade mark of the association was discontinued.

Detroit, Mich., was chosen as the place of meeting for 1922.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., president; Paul C. Lindley, Pomona, N. C., vice-Davey Urges Reforestation.

The urgent need of a practical programme of reforestation in the United States was again brought to public attention by Former Congressman Martin L. Davey, Kent, O.: and head of the Davey Tree Expert Co., with headquarters in that city, in an address delivered before the Rotary Club of Chicago. Mr. Davey emphasized the need of such a programme, which unless formulated, and put into effect, either by the federal or by state governments, or both, the country will be virtually devoid of timber within a generation, the cost of lumber will be at prohibitive heights for any practical purposes, scores of thousands of men will be out of work, climatic conditions will be changed, and floods and droughts will take terrific toll of property, if not life.

The entire lumber supply of the eastern section of the United States will be exhausted in 12 or 15 years if present methods are followed, according to Mr. Davey. The supply in the west cannot last more than 40 or 50 years. These are not wild guesses. They are based upon accurate statistics. Any one who has seen lumber men cut their way through a forest can realize the speed and completeness of destruction.

To overcome the certainty of a lumber famine, with all its attendant evils, in this country we must begin at once on the great task of reforestation. Mr. Davey offers practical suggestions to that end. One is a tax on each 1,000 feet of lumber cut, the revenue to be applied directly to reforestation.

Other methods will be offered if sufficient interest is aroused. Here is a constructive task for the farmers. Of the total lumber production available in this country, farmers consume annually 10,600,000,000 feet, of which 6,750,000,000 feet are used for construction, and most of the remainder for manufactured products, shipping cases, etc. Yet how many farmers are growing lumber for commercial purposes? Almost none. It is too slow an investment. But it is essential to the future of the farm, even if not to the immediate present. Exemption of taxation on land in process of timber growing would remove the burden of such a slow investment. That is a constructive measure which the farmers can put through if they will.

Minneapolis Memorial Drive Dedicated.

Victory Memorial Drive, the new Minneapolis, Minn., thoroughfare, was dedicated June 11, to the 555 men and women of Hennepin county, who lost their lives in the world war. More than 550 elm trees of the gothic arch habit marked with the names of the hero dead, line a double boulevard parkway north from Lowry avenue on Glenwood-Camden parkway, thence east to Camden park, a distance eight and one-half miles.

Judge Ell Torrance, the principal speaker of the occasion, read a message from C. M. Loring, who was unable to be present, through whose foundation of a trust fund of $50,000 for the perpetual care of the elm trees the drive was made possible. Mr. Loring called attention to the effective work of Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, in formulating and developing plans for the thoroughfare. The idea had its inception in 1918, when Mr. Wirth and his associates decided to plan the improvement of Glenwood-Camden parkway so as to permit the planting through a symmetrical arrangement of rows of trees, parallel driveways, the erection of a monument and other ornamental features so necessary for the creation of an imposing and enduring memorial. Later when Mr. Loring presented the board of park commissioners with the trust fund, other thoroughfares were added making the drive eight and one-half miles long instead of four and one-half miles as originally decided. Additional replacement trees will be kept in the Glenwood park nursery, all being of one parentage and are in excellent condition.

A feature of the dedication was the strewing of huge bunches of roses, poppies and peonies on the drive from nine aeroplanes that manoeuvred over the assemblage of 30,000 people. A flag draped tree banked at its base with flowers was also noteworthy in the celebration.

THE well known landscape gardening monthly, Park and Cemetery, for many years published at Chicago, was moved to Madison, Wis., last month.

DEFIANCE, O.—W. J. Green, for 40 years horticulturist at the Ohio experiment station, retired recently from active service. He gained considerable fame for developing a satisfactory formula used in spraying fruit trees.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Fruitland Nurseries, successors to P. J. Berckmans Co. Inc., is the style of the business formerly conducted as Sigmund Tarnok & Co. The new firm recently purchased Mr. Tarnok's interest in the establishment, as well as the plants and equipment of the Berckmans company. Jas. G. Bailie is president of the new concern.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cyclamens.

The plants of cyclamen should now be growing rapidly, especially those which were grown from seed sown last fall. These plants should now be in four or five-inch pots and the foliage growing full and strong. If the plants are plunged in a frame, they should be lifted out of the soil occasionally to see that the drainage is not stopped up. There is nothing that will ruin a young growing cyclamen more quickly than to have the drainage get closed and have the soil become sodden with water. Angle worms will often cause this and, if they are detected, should be removed. It is very easy to find whether they are in the pots. If the soil on the top of the pot is rolled into small lumps, it is a sure sign that there are worms in the soil. If there are but a few, the plants can be knocked out of the pots and the worms removed; if there are many, a watering of limewater will soon rid the soil of the worms. The plants that are in small pots should be potted up as fast as they require it, that they may be as large as possible for the holiday season, but do not go to the other extreme and pot in too large pots. As soon as the roots get around the side of the pot, shift them into the next size larger. If the plants are in the greenhouse a close watch for thrips must be kept during the summer. If the foliage is twisted when the leaf begins to unfold, it is sure to be caused by insects, and the plants should be sprayed with a nicotine solution. To have good plants for the holidays in full bloom they must be constantly watched and well grown.

Fancy Leaved Caladiums.

It will soon be found difficult to obtain the quantity of flowers necessary to maintain a fine window display, so attractive plants will be required, and the show houses leading from the store or office will need something with bright color to attract attention. The fancy-leaved caladiums are beautiful plants for this purpose, and should now be good plants in four or five-inch pots. Nice plants can be grown in these sizes and they are easily arranged in a bed of green sheet moss and are very attractive. For the young stock now coming on, a very light house is an absolute necessity to obtain the highly colored leaves, and almost a full exposure to the rays of the sun. While the plants delight in a moist atmosphere, this must not be obtained by heavy shading, but by frequent syringing and damping down the walks and under the benches. The temperature should be kept warm and close, never dropping below 60 degrees at night, even if a little fire heat is needed. They will require copious watering to keep the beautiful leaves in good condition, and considerable feeding to bring the high colors and large, full leaves. Should flower buds form they should be immediately removed, for they will check the growth of the leaves.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

It is a good time now to plant, reset or renew the soil of asparagus beds, either plumosus or Sprengeri. If the beds are to be set out with young stock preparation should be started at once. Asparagus plumosus does better in solid beds, well drained, with a good rich compost about two feet deep. The plants should be set 12 to 15 inches apart and the shoots given strings upon which to climb as soon as they begin to grow. But little cutting should be done the first year, as it is necessary that the plants become well established. The old beds should be given a good mulch of half-decayed manure, and if possible, without injury to the roots, remove the top soil. Asparagus Sprengeri can be successfully grown in the bench, but also requires a good, rich soil. The young stock the first year should be planted 10 to 12 inches apart, and will produce many stems that can be cut. The beds that have produced this year will require a renewal of the soil. It is better to replant them than to try to renew the soil in the bench. The plants are great feeders and the bench is generally full of roots after a year's growth, and it will be found difficult to keep the bench watered during the spring of the second year. If the plants are too close together, they can be given more space in resetting. Good large plants will do better if set about 15 inches apart. If a mulch is attempted, care should be taken to use no fresh manure, but manure that is well rotted. The ammonia that arises from fresh manure will affect the plants, turning the foliage light and in severe cases the foliage will become nearly white, making it worthless.

Mignonette.

To be able to cut fine spikes of mignonette in early winter will require an early start, and although it demands care and attention to germinate small seeds during hot weather, yet it will be necessary to sow seed early in July in order to have a cut in by the holiday season. A north propagating house is one of the best locations for the sowing of seeds in summer. Mignonette does not transplant from the seed flats successfully, so it is better to sow it in 2½-inch pots, five or six seeds to a pot, which can be thinned out to one or two plants as soon as they are large enough to select the strongest. Some growers prefer to sow the seed in hills in the bench, but to grow the large spikes of this flower requires a soil very heavily manured, and the constant watering often sours the soil before the plants have pushed out roots enough to absorb the water. As soon as the plants have attained a height of two or more inches the tip should be pinched or rubbed out, in order that the plant will branch, and again later these branches wil have to be pinched off, until there are six or eight strong shoots. The plants will grow in most any kind of good soil, but to get the best compost should be about one-half partly decayed manure well mixed in the soil, and this will produce splendid spikes of bloom. After the plants begin to form their leaves, a careful watch must be kept for the cabbage worm; these worms are very fond of mignonette, are voracious eaters, and soon denude the plant. They are a little difficult to find, being of the same color as the leaf, but are generally found along the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Growers who cultivate large quantities of this crop screen their ventilation with mosquito netting to keep out the moth which lays the eggs. The plants should be set about one foot apart in the bench and staked or tied in some suitable manner to keep the stems straight and erect.

Pot Grown Roses.

The hybrid perpetual or rambler roses after blooming, if desired to force another year, in order to bloom them early should be grown in pots during the summer. They can be pruned back after blooming and lifted, or if in pots should be repotted. This will require a good, strong soil, composed of two-thirds loam and one-third manure. When potting be sure to give good drainage and pot firmly, ramming the soil down hard. It is impossible to grow roses successfully in a loose soil. The plants should be plunged to rim of the pot outside where they can be freely watered. Avoid, if possible, placing them against the greenhouse or other building or against a fence, but plant them where they will have a free circulation of air and can be sprayed from either side. If planted against a building or in close quarters, they frequently become infested with red spider during the hot weather and it is nearly impossible to get rid of them.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

ADIANTUM CROWEANUM was the only material employed in a recent very pleasing casket cover.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

This is the recreation season when every one, particularly in the florist business, feels as if they would like to quit and rest up a bit after the strenuous season. The work must go on, however, as rushes of business that tax the weakened forces to the limit will come at times without warning, and the store must be kept in condition to make the most of the opportunities.

It is well to look over the stock of staples and see if there are the necessary ribbons, letters, palm leaves, wire frames, etc., that are important in connection with the fresh flowers, to get out a good order in double quick time. Nor must the boxes be forgotten as frequently trains have to be made and there is no time to put together or hunt up something large enough to hold the piece and carry it safely to its destination. With everything in readiness, work is a pleasure, but without this assistance and foresight life is just one exasperation after another.

The office force can usefully spend a portion of its spare time in addressing special post cards. These, if purchased in quantity and in various colors, as many as are required of a color for an issue to cover the store's list of customers, will be ready for the printer and instant mailing for use in publicity. Any up-to-date printer can show or will obtain samples of special work along these lines that has splendid advertising value. This is direct service that if issued more or less frequently, if well written with a punch to it, and backed up with the goods, will prove a revelation to those who have not tried it out.

There is necessity for these frequent jogs of the memory. Your customers and others know of your store, that you sell fresh flowers, carry a good stock, that your work is artistic, but somehow they do not come around as often as you expect or would like to see them, and the reason is because you do not suggest flowers often enough, and tell them over and over again of your establishment and its advantages in seasonable plants and flowers, and suggest uses for them as compared with other articles of trade that are being constantly advertised. By this publicity the customers give preference to flowers which would make much more appropriate gifts. Now is the time to give such matters serious thought and arrange for them. The various firms that prepare and sell advertising service, in the form of booklets, folders, etc., to the florist trade now have the matter ready for next season and the florist should do the same.

Roses will now be getting scarcer, the present stock and variety as compared with that available just a few years ago, makes a contrast that then would have been unbelievable, and shows how the business is advancing by leaps and bounds.

FERNS AN ATTRACTIVE FEATURE.

Cibotiums are beautiful at all times but particularly for the summer store and window, their light green lace like fronds present a graceful form and finish that is not possessed by that of any other fern. Long fronded ferns of the Boston type in wicker hanging baskets with tin liners make fine store and window ornaments. When hung in pairs through ceiling pulleys, one balances the other and are easy to care for.

A pretty finish and border to a summer window is a narrow box three inches in width and depth filled with green or golden lycopodium, to be placed on the floor of the window. If well watered this will present a velvety, lacelike line the entire summer.

A handsome show piece of magnolia or prepared oak leaves that can have an occasionable decoration of fresh flowers will make an attractive window display for the day.

Miniature mountains with waterfalls and an old mill and water wheel when built in the proper proportions and given a plant setting, form quite a good summer window. A pond in connection large enough for a flock of young ducks will with their swimming and diving antics form an attraction that on a crowded thoroughfare is certain to be of great interest.

Do not forget that green and variegated privet, hemlock and oak leaf branches are useful in all kinds of spray work, producing god effects and at the same time taking the place of more expensive greens.

Salesmanship.

Every purchaser if well pleased is likely to be a more or less frequent visitor to the shop and develop finally into a regular customer. It is this well pleased condition of mind however, that is necessary to bring about the much to be desired connection. There are many things that are necessary to create and establish this favorable opinion. In the beginning there is to be that satisfying impression created by the first view of the orderly, artistic and well stocked interior. This is followed by the cheerful smile and greeting of the salesman whose entire time is given to showing goods and ascertaining the wants of his customers. Nothing is too much trouble and when the transaction is closed, he departs, satisfied in his mind that he could not have done better anywhere else, and resolving to call soon again.

A splendid beginning, one will say, but there are events that may occur to interfere and check this enthusiasm. The next visit may find the store very busy, he does not see the bright faced salesman who waited on him before, and another with a hurried manner comes to find out what is wanted and he feels at once that he is in a different atmosphere and wonders whether his purchase will be satisfactory. The keystone of success in any retail business is the personality and ability of its salespeople. Obliging clerks who are always striving to please their customers soon build up a personal following and confidence that entrusts all their business to them alone, and who will seldom leave orders with others.

While this ability and energy in handling and increasing the business is most praiseworthy, it should not be allowed to go so far as to interfere with the orderly conduct of the store. All salesmen should have their good qualities or be replaced by others who do, and it should be the duty of the proprietor or some one in charge, to see that customers are not kept waiting. Some purchasers require careful handling, they either think faster, or perhaps, are not as quick to see, as the man who waits on them and resent his evident impatience.

Salespeople should be schooled to be diplomatic and no matter how troublesome a customer may appear, their manner is to be pleasant and obliging to the last. One little hurried word or gesture showing annoyance may and often does lose a sale and at times a customer.

One of the greatest assets in salesmanship is the smile, which makes a cheerful countenance of the most homely face and puts the visitor at ease and ready to state their wants without reserve. A bright cheery good morning and a word on that common topic the weather, will break the ice at once and relieve the sometimes slight embarrasment of the stranger visitor.

ONE OF THE LIGHT COLORED CALADIUMS.

Persons who call for something definite and leave their orders are still good prospects, and it is up to the skillful salesman to add something to the bill. The shop has a store sale of this or that of extra quality, or perhaps a bargain at the price which has only to be called to the attention of the visitor. A prettily filled small vase basket is shown as an article to cheer up the sick room, which brings to mind such a friend who would enjoy it. A nicely planted fern dish is a reminder that the table center at home needs filling and another item is added. A beautifully flowered plant has at times only to be shown to be soon on its way home. Fresh, fragrant violets are irresistable to some as is a spray of cattleyas or a bunch of lily of the valley.

In taking the order for the funeral, where it is evident that several pieces will be wanted, it is important that the first spray or wreath be well priced for if a low figure is named, this is apt to be the standard for the remainder. Five or $10 can often be added to an order by the suggestion that a few orchids or a bunch of lilies of the valley etc, will make it more distinctive. Many salesmen hold their customers too cheap, being afraid to ask a good price for fear they are not able to pay it. This is a great mistake; most flower buyers want the best and are willing to pay, while there are others who judge quality wholly by price and are better satisfied when the larger figures are quoted.

With few exceptions prices should be agreed upon at the time of ordering. "Make me something handsome," is understood, coming from a customer who has repeatedly given such orders without stating the amount, but when the bill to another customer shows a charge for $20 when his idea was to spend $15, then there is trouble and dissatisfaction.

It is always best to get an idea of how much the purchaser wants to pay, and build up from his figures. This is done by quoting a range of prices depending on the importance of the order. Almost invariably the query is what can you make for the price you have mentioned that comes nearest to his idea. It is then comparatively easy by extolling on the beauty of the larger size or the addition of choicer flowers, to increase the amount for a more elaborate display. There is sometimes an embarrassing moment particularly with strangers when the order is completed and the amount declared. It is then best to await their move, when they will either produce the cash or ask for credit which is granted with satisfactory references.

Organizing the Trade.

Address Delivered by Max Kaiser, Merrion Park, Minn., Before the Tri-State Florists' Association, at Fargo, N. D., June 24-25, 1921.

It is of vital importance that almost any trade, business or profession, be organized. Many of these trades and professions have different objects in view, but in the main they aim to improve working conditions, increase business, better credits, educate, etc., The florist trade has all of the above combined. Some 20 or 25 years ago the florist trade was not considered as such, and in many instances it was a back number, a thing to be laughed at. I remember instances where the employers had their own organizations, granting admission to such meetings to no one outside of their own membership, an employe especially never being allowed to attend. Their organization was for the sole purpose of working out their own selfish interests.

Employes finally started to organize for educational purposes and betterment of working conditions and they met with great difficulty in upholding their organizations inasmuch as the employers generally interfered, their idea being to break up the employes' meetings as soon as possible. The employers were desirous of knowing the purpose of the employes' organization, and upon being told wanted to know when the employes could attend, inasmuch as they worked from approximately sunrise to late in the evening and all day Sunday, with the possible exception that every fourth Sunday, the employes being granted a half holiday on these occasions. Employers made it plain to their force that their men worked hard every day and when the day was over should rest, not talk, and even went so far as to say that on the occasion of the half holiday that same should be spent with the employes' families. They made many attempts to break up the meetings.

However, I am glad to say that the time has come when the employers and employes have more friendly relations toward each other. I would like to appeal to each employer to do as much as possible for his help, especially from an educational standpoint, as not only he, but the trade in general will be repaid. I do not know whether or not your organization consists only of employers, but if this is the case, I want to urge you to welcome your employes into the organization. Make it interesting for them socially and educationally, bring exhibits to your meetings and have same thoroughly discussed, stating how they should be grown, and all other points in connection with the exhibit, the good as well as the bad.

Get some of your members to read essays on pot plants and cut flowers in season, and tell each other your experiences so that all may benefit. Don't keep a secret on how to grow a flower or plant. Bring a matter of this nature up before the meeting in order that same may become common knowledge. That is what we hold the meetings for, to learn and to uplift the trade. There is none of us so old or so young in the business that we cannot learn new things.

MAKING MEETINGS INTERESTING.

Gentlemen, it is far from my desire to tell you how to conduct or run your meetings, I merely want to tell you my experiences. You know a meeting is not conducted by running through the regular order of business. It is necessary that questions of interest to all be brought up, things from which we can learn or benefit, and there are three things you should remember: They are your exhibits, the reading of essays and the question box. Do not leave all of these things to be done by your president and secretary. It is absolutely necessary for the members of the organization to assist your officers by bringing in exhibits, regardless of how small as they may be, the smaller displays may be of more interest than the large ones, even a diseased plant may be of interest and someone may know the cause of the trouble and be able to explain how to avoid or overcome it. Further, it is a good idea to have judges appointed in order that exhibits may get the proper reward.

Each member of the organization should consider himself a committee of one to further the interest of the entire organization. From what I have learned, your association is just at its beginning and your last meeting was a very successful one. You cover a very large territory, a territory practically as large as that of the Texas organization. My sincere wish for you is to meet with great success from a commercial, educational and social standpoint. No doubt, you are working under difficulties in getting all of your members to all of your meetings, due to the large territory you cover. However, don't get discouraged if some of your sessions are not as well attended at times as you might wish them to be, and while on the matter of attendance I want to say again, make your meetings interesting so all may benefit and learn and everyone will feel well repaid for the time and money spent and be longing for the time of the next meeting to arrive. If someone who has attended the meetings gets in touch with any of the absentees the importance of the meeting should be explained and the questions discussed made known to the absentee, and an endeavor should be made to have him in attendance at the next meeting. Let every member act on your membership committee.

By the way, let us not forget the greatest of our organizations, our national organization, the Society of American Florists, of which we all can be very proud. We may properly call it our mother organization, being created in 1885 by about 25 men. From the Society of American Florists sprang the Florists' Hail Association, the American Carnation Society, the American Rose Society, the Chrysanthemum Society, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, the Gladiolus Society, the Sweet Pea Society, the Dahlia Society, the Orchid Society, all florists' clubs and state florists' association, the National Flower Growers' Association and many others, all of whom have done wonderful work toward helping and uplifting the trade in general.

It is not necessary to mention the good they have created, each of you are conversant with them. But are all florists members of the Society of American Florists? It really hurts me to be obliged to answer no. There are 15,000 florists in the United States, and but 3,000 of them belong to this society. But why are not even one-quarter of our florists members of the organization? This question is hard to answer, but it is my impression that a large percentage of the non-members have never been asked to join, or they do not realize or understand the importance of the society. It surely cannot be the $5 membership dues or the $55 life membership fee.

I also do not believe that the great majority of the non-members would like to feed on the Society of American

A WELL FLOWERED CYCLAMEN.

Florists' without being a member, or at the very least contributing to the publicity fund, but, nevertheless, they are doing it. They are using our slogan, the best slogan ever adopted, "Say it With Flowers," and if this slogan is not worth 10 times the amount of the society annual dues to each and every one of us, then I say it is no good; but we all know better,—we know what it has done for us and what it will do in the future. There are many firms trying to steal or copy our slogan, for instance, one says, "Say it With Service," and the other advertises, "Say it With Smith's Candy."

The slogan is but one of the very many things the Society of American Florists gave us, and she will give us many more, I am sure, in time to come. She has done more now for the trade than we ever can repay her for, and she can do still more with a larger membership. The time has come to realize that if we want anything done we can do it, and do it best in a body. We all, no doubt, are interested in our own business, and doing our best to better it through growing and planting better stock, in increasing our sales, and in educating the public to buy our stock products. Now, why should we do that individually when we have so much more success by working in conjunction with a wonderful organization such as the Society of American Florists, from which we can not only receive counsel, but an organization that does the actual work for us through national publicity?

Lawn Care.

Cut out all the larger weeds, such as plantain, dock, and dandelion. Keep clipped. Close cutting leaves the soil too much exposed and encourages drying out. For that reason, set the mower rather high so as to leave a protecting stand. Frequent mowing is preferable so that the clippings can be left on the ground to form a mulch without smothering the plants. Do not sprinkle except in case of extreme need, and then do it thoroughly so that the soil is wet through to four inches deep. This line of treatment will usually work wonders in the texture of a lawn and incidentally give large satisfaction to the owner and substantially add to the value of property. A sweet and rich soil is at the bottom of the result.

Since at least 75 per cent of the farm land in the humid regions of the country is more or less deficient in lime, the acidity in areas devoted to lawn may be regarded as equally common. Morever, in and around cities and factories, where much coal is burned, considerable acid is resulting from the sulphur in the smoke is continually being carried into the soil by rain and needs to be neutralized.

Sweet Pea Vines and Flowers.

The accompanying photograph presents an arrangement in which the flowers if used with an artistic vase showing graceful lines would have made quite a beautiful picture. However, where there is an abundance of stock, and the vines can be so ruthlessly cut, many beautiful decorative effects, particularly in house wedding decorations are possible with this material. The vines should be cut very early in the morning of the day they are to be used and soaked several hours, or as long as possible in water, when they will hold up for the average decoration.

Nomenclature and Standardization.

Reports on Nomenclature and Standardization Presented by Harlan P. Kelsey at the Annual Convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Chicago, June 22-24, 1921.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON NOMENCLATURE.

Your chairman is secretary of the American joint committee on horticultural nomenclature and a member of the sub-committee doing the actual work of preparing the new official catalogue of standardized plant names. The other members of this sub-committee are United States Botanist, Dr. Frederick V. Corville and Frederick Law Olmsted, while the chairman of the joint committee, J. Hoace McFarland has been in constant consultation with this sub-committee. The sub-committee has finished its labors so far as preparing the initial copy for the forthcoming edition is concerned, and now follows the work of printing and distributing.

This sub-committee has spent literally months in a most difficult, trying and laborious task, that both scientific and common plant names may become standardized in the American horticultural world, toward the desirable end of making buying easier. As the sub-committee got deeper and deeper into this work they began to realize more fully that they were up against a man's size job in every sense of the word, and that only by giving solid time in approximately 10 day units, would it be accomplished. Even then it would not have been possible to get ready for the printer this spring had not Dr. Frederick V. Corville and the United States Department of Agriculture fully backed up the committee's work by providing offices and almost unlimited library and office assistance, and the aid of many experts in the department.

The result is a manuscript for a book of probably 500 pages, which the sub-committee has placed with the McFarland Co. for printing, feeling certain this action would be approved by the American joint committee; for in the preparation of this semi-technical work, the sub-committee found it absolutely necessary to have constant advice and help in the matter of type and makeup from the printer who was to print it. Moreover, it was felt that accuracy, so far as humanly possible, should be a controlling factor, and that a press that had successfully printed Bailey's monumental cyclopedia had pre-eminently the required organization. The amounts subscribed by the constituent organizations of the American joint committee have sufficed to pay the current expenses of this committee and there is still a balance of $377.93 in the treasury of the committee. But instead of a pamphlet we have a large book, which will cost from $4,000 to $6,000 to publish in numbers which will be at all adequate to insure wide enough distribution to accomplish our prime object, namely, universal adoption.

Therefore, it must be immediately decided whether the organizations comprising the American joint committee will subscribe enough to finance the undertaking, or failing, will progressive nurserymen and other horticulturists underwrite the publication? Surely, this burden should not be placed on the sub-committee, who have freely given months of their time to a most exacting and laborious job, that American horticulture might profit thereby.

SCOPE OF THE OFFICIAL CATALOGUE.

Attached to and made a part of this report are printed proofsheets which show better than I can tell it, just what the new official catalogue will be. You will see that it is a strictly alphabetical list of common and Latin names for practically all trees, shrubs, fruits and perennials in the American trade today, and including many new ones which it is expected will soon be introduced to general cultivation. Special groups supplied by organizations, societies and individuals specially interested in such groups and best fitted to give authentic name lists, appear in alphabetical order, while certain large groups such as fruits, irises, rhododendrons, azaleas and peonies which have extremely large lists of named horticultural varieties will appear suitably arranged in an appendix.

Labor difficulties and high costs of materials have combined to delay typesetting; but with these conditions clearing up, and financing arranged for, the work should reach publication before 1922. It will be not only on absolutely necessary work of reference in every nurseryman's office, but a handbook and guide for every live employe in the field. It is a big beginning toward standardizing horticultural trade practice in America. Even to those who are entirely commercially minded it will be a godsend, for if it is consistently and intelligently used it means that the nurseryman and florist really will know what he is growing, advertising and selling; and still more important his customers and prospective customers will also know; and that means tremendously increased business. Moreover, standardization of scientific and common names means a body-blow to the unscrupulous nurseryman, making deceit much more difficult, and detection and conviction more certain; and that in turn means more and better business for the honest tradesman.

The American joint committee on horticultural nomenclature should be a permanent committee, for many corrections and improvements must be made, and so long as horticulture progresses so will new plants appear and new names be necessary, while hundreds of plants of necessity still must have suitable common names supplied. Registration of new plants and approved names will become a necessity. If we believe in our trade, let us awaken to the fact that if we falter in the standardization of our business that congress and state legislatures will attempt to do it for us—and disastrously to American horticulture.

The sub-committee believes that underwriting this publication is a safe proposition, and that sales that may be reasonably expected should return cost. But if every nurseryman becomes a booster for the official catalogue of standardized plant names, sales should be such that the American joint committee would have a substantial profit to continue the work now so well begun. It is a business proposition and it's up to you.

REPORT OF THE COM. ON STANDARDIZATION.

So far as I am aware, I am the only member of this committee to be appointed. Through some misunderstanding this committee was overlooked, and only a few weeks before the date fixed for this convention the undersigned was asked by President Stark to make some sort of report. It was with great reluctance that I at last consented to do so, but I felt the matter of standardization of nursery trade practice was of transcendent importance to this organization, and that a few recommendations made at this time might serve as a basis or starting point for a live committee the coming year.

The standardization of plant names has at last reached a satisfactory stage of progress, and this is good so far as it goes, but is only one phase of standardizing our business. With the ever increasing tendency of legislative bodies to prescribe business rules of conduct, would it not be the part of wisdom to beat them to it and establish uniform rules and methods for ourselves, at least tending to make legislative action appear more unnecessary. But we need standardization for greater reasons—To make buying and selling easier and minimize business misunderstandings; to enable us to grow stock of standard sizes and grades; to ensure receiving and delivering stock that will be according to written order, thus protecting both buyer and seller; to print readable and understandable catalogues; and in general as an aid to better and more profitable business.

A Los Angeles, Calif., jury has recently awarded a local trucker $4,000 damages against a well known seed house of that state, for delivering $48 worth of celery seed untrue to name, the usual non-warranty clause failing to protect the seedsman for this large amount in excess of the cost of the seeds. Is a non-warranty clause advisable and is it possible to devise one that protects? This is one important question for a standardization committee to consider.

The nurserymen of Illinois are making a worthy attempt to standardize cost and accounting methods. We wish them success but to me there are many other phases of standardization that need attention before comparative costs can be intelligently considered, and chief of these is stock grading. The Chicago Bulb Forcers' Association has adopted a uniform order blank or agreement for use in its dealings with Holland bulb growers. They not only stipulate terms of purchase and payment, but attempt to standardize the quality of bulbs to be supplied, as well as methods of shipment and delivery.

A large southern nursery firm recently protested to Secretary Watson the practice of a certain western nurseryman in quoting "oversize" on fruit trees, such as, peaches, two feet, 10-inch, three feet, 6-inch, four feet, 1 inch, four feet, 8-inch, etc., apples, two feet, 6-inch, etc., and peaches, one foot, 10-inch, etc. Another western concern is grading trees, one to 2½ feet, 2 to 3½ feet, two to four feet, etc. They further say, "As you know, there is no nursery scale which justifies grading in such a manner. Such grading confuses the purchaser of nursery stock. We believe that if each and every catalogue house would use the same grade in selling it would greatly facilitate matters."

Well, why don't we? Probably because we are too much like the devil thought Ben Butler was when he refused him admission to hell, and handing him a shovel full of coals told him to go away and have a little hell of his own. Co-operation even in hell seems to be desirable.

In a recent number of the magazine called Business there is an article entitled "The National Shell Game—Let Us Standardize on a Few Honest Containers." A typical statement reads,

"There are as many varieties of cabbage crates as there are varieties of cabbage." The horticulturist again gets a black eye and it is little consolation to learn that the merchant gets his black eye to.

Some specific things in nursery trade and horticultural practice that need standardizing are presented herewith:

1. Standard rules and methods for growing and grading nursery stock, including calipre, balling, height of limbs from ground, etc., etc.

2. Meaning of all trade terms and words describing nursery stock, such as clumps, whip, field grown, B. & B., one year buds, etc.

3. Methods of packing and shipping.

4. Color chart.

5. List of general terms and abbreviations used in catalogues, shipping, etc.

6. Sales and collection methods.

Fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, roses, herbaceous perennials, bulbs, greenhouse plants and florist plants, each need carefully to be considered by those specializing in them, and so a committee should represent the leading horticultural lines and certainly different sections of the country. It may or may not be possible to agree on a fruit tree standard for the east and west owing to climate or soil conditions, but if not it will at least be feasible to agree on different standards to be adopted and published in parallel.

Considerable material has been compiled by the writer on this subject and this is available for use by next year's committee. I recommend that a committee on standardization and abbreviations of not less than three or more than five be appointed for the coming year and that an amount of not less than $1,000 be made available for the use of such committee for expenses. That such committee be instructed to prepare and print a preliminary report, to be sent in proof form to each member of the American Association of Nurserymen, not later than February 1, 1922, with a request for suggestions. That thereafter a revised report be prepared and printed to be submitted at the next annual convention for discussion, revision, and adoption.

Hydrangea Arborescens Grandiflora Alba

For the grower-retailer there is no more profitable or useful outdoor shrub for cutting than this early flowering hydrangea, which is just as profuse in bloom as is the well known Fall variety, paniculata. The blooms are of the purest white varying in size and length of stem according to the strength of the shoots, some of which attain a length of four feet and are well clothed with foliage.

This is a beautiful plant in border shrubbery and when grouped several together on the lawn, makes a round bush that when in flower is a veritable globe of white. It is perfectly hardy but at times has to be protected from late spring frosts which injure the flower buds already formed by that time. Its greatest value is that it flowers during June and July when all the other shrubbery is past, furnishing a mass of white that is very useful in floral arrangement.

Shade Trees.

The shade tree has come into its own. The beauty and usefulness of large well kept shade trees make them valuable, not only to the owner of the land on which they grow, but to the community as a whole. Large trees cannot be economically transferred from place to place. They must be grown. For this reason every effort should be made to carefully preserve the product of so many year's growth according to P. L. Buttrick, of the Michigan Agricultural College experiment station, E. Lansing.

The number of things which can injure a shade tree are infinite. It may be attacked by insects which strip off its leaves or work under its bark and eventually girdle it. A fungus growth may attack its bark or rot away its wood. It may be poisoned by illuminating gas from leaky mains, or by chemical fumes in the air. Shade trees are generally even more subject to mechanical injuries than to poisons and parasitic enemies. These vary from slight injuries to the bark or the breaking of small branches, to the wrenching away of large limbs and consequent loss of form to the tree, or to severe injuries to the trunk resulting perhaps in the death of one side of the tree. By taking prompt measures to repair such injuries and form the beauty of the shade tree may in most cases be saved. Even where as a result of long neglect decay has obtained a firm hold in the trunk or where there are many dead branches, suitable repair work may in a large measure restore the health and beauty of the tree. Mechanical injuries to those portions of a tree which are above the surface of the ground come under four main headings: Broken branches, split crotches, injuries to the bark, and injuries to the wood of the trunk.

PRUNING.

Pruning may in the case of slight injuries consist simply in removing the broken branch. In heavier injuires it may be necessary to prune the tree in such a way as to develop a new crown of symmetrical form. Pruning operations are the same whether done to remove injured or broken limbs or to redevelop the form of the tree. The important thing is to remove the limbs by cutting flush with the trunk or larger branch. This cannot be done except for very small branches on the first cut, since there is always danger of the weight of the branch causing it to split out a portion of the trunk or parent branch when the cut is half made. The branch should be cut off a foot or so from the trunk, making an under-cut if the branch is a large one, and the stub trimmed off properly, taking care to prevent injury to the bark about the edges of the final cut. When large branches are to be removed, it is frequently necessary to cut them in sections in order to get them to the ground without injuring the remaining branches. For very large branches the use of a rope to prevent the rapid fall of the various sections is essential.

One of the greatest dangers to a shade tree comes from the entrance of decay after it has been pruned. The wood being no longer protected by a layer of bark, rot quickly enters causing a hole which seldom heals over. This damage can be prevented by covering the scar with a thick coat of tar or asphaltum paint, which should be renewed every few years until the scar has completely healed over. Broken or injured branches should be removed back to the trunk or to the nearest large branch. In laying out the work, the tree should be studied carefully so as to make the cut in such a way as not to destroy the form of the tree any more than is necessary.

A form of injury which requires especially careful treatment is caused by the splitting of a branch in such a way that it is partly torn from its socket and thus splits open part of the trunk or parent branch, leaving the broken branch hanging head down but still attached to the tree. To cut such a branch off flush is not sufficient. This will leave a more or less wide and deep crevice into which water can penetrate and start decay. The proper treatment is to locate the lowest portion of the split, take a sharp chisel and cut through from the surface to the crack and thus remove the split portion. The surface of the split should then be carefully smoothed over with a chisel or gouge and the cut should be sloped downward and outward so that no cavity will be left in which water may rest.

Even though it may not be necessary to prune a tree because of any positive injury due to broken branches, pruning will often forestall breakage and injury. Common examples are small trees upon which the lower branches have grown at the expense of those higher up, resulting in short stemmed, badly formed trees almost certain to be twisted or broken because of their low branching habit. In pruning, the side branches should be removed up to a main crotch or to a height of from 10 to 15 feet above the ground. In the case of very tall trees the removal should be progressive from year to year until the right relation of crown to stem is attained.

BRACING.

A frequent injury to shade trees particularly to large ones with wide spreading branches is caused by the splitting open of the crotches or the partial splitting off of large branches by high winds or the weight of snow and ice. Even though such a split may at first be slight and cause no apparently serious damage it is a menace to the tree and to the people in its vicinity, and should be repaired at once. The old way to repair such a split was to pass loops of wire about each fork, a short distance above the split and then insert a lever, tighten the wire and draw the split together. The disadvantage of this method was that the wire was apt to cut through the bar when the latter was tightened and thus injure the tree. Even if this was prevented by putting padding about the wire, eventually the growth of the tree causes the wire to cut into the bark.

The modern practice is to remove a small section of bark at a point near the upper portion of the split and at right angles to it and then to bore a hole through to the outside of the opposite branch, remove a similar bark section, insert a long bolt screw on a nut and tighten it, thus drawing the edges of the split together. If the work is done soon enough and carefully enough the bark will grow together. In the case of large forks or branches more than one bolt may be necessary, and strength may be gained by placing a bolt through each fork slightly above the split. Care should be taken not to make the holes in the bark larger than necessary. They need be no bigger than is required to seat the head of the bolt and the nut. The bark should be cut away with a sharp chisel in the form of an ellipse with its greatest length running up and down the tree, since that form of opening heals the quickest. The holes in the bark should be painted over thickly to prevent decay.

In order to forstall the splitting of crotches or branches in large trees with a wide-spreading branching system, the method is simply to run bolts with eye heads through the branches as described above and connect the eyes with chains. The bolts may be at the same height so that the chain is horizontal or one bolt may be high above the other so as to support a more or less horizontal branch. The object of using a chain is to give play to the branches when the wind blows. Heavy lag screws with eyes on the ends may be substituted for bolts for lighter limbs.

REPAIRING INJURIES TO TREE TRUNKS.

Shade trees, because of the fact that they grow in situations where there is much passing of people, teams and automobiles are subject to injury by the bruising or scraping away of the bark. Such injuries are seldom sufficient to kill the tree at once; but as soon as the bark dies over a portion of the trunk it causes an unsightly scar and makes an opening for the entrance of injurious insects and decay. This is the reason so many old trees are hollow at the base and easy victims for a strong wind.

If prompt care of bark injuries is taken when they first occur the after effects can be avoided. The first step is to remove the dead bark as soon as it has dried out sufficiently to be loose. It should be trimmed off with a sharp knife or chisel back to the living bark and the opening shaped up to the form of an ellipse with its longest axis running up and down the tree. If the wood has been broken or splintered it should be smoothed off. The entire wood surface should be coated with a heavy coat of tar or asphaltum paint. The bark on each side of the break will then grow over the exposed section. If the dead bark remains on and the wood is not treated decay starts and a cavity forms before the new bark can close over the injury.

CAVITY WORK.

Tree cavity work of any magnitude should generally be done by a professional tree expert who understands his business, and has the proper equipment. The principles, however, are quite simple and an owner who understands them should be able to handle small jobs himself. There are two ways of treating cavities; the open treatment and the closed treatment.

The open treatment consists in treating the exposed wood surface so as to prevent further decay and then either covering the exterior of the cavity with a metal sheet over which the new growth can close, or leaving it exposed, allowing the new growth to line the cavity.

The closed treatment consists in treating the wood to prevent decay and then filling the cavity with cement, asphaltum or other material over which the new growth can unite. In either system, if the cavity is large resulting in the weakening of the tree, the use of bolts or other devices for strengthening it may be necessary. In general the open cavity treatment is employed for small cavities near the base of the tree, for cavities high up in the trunk, and for all sorts of cavities in trees whose value or probable life is not sufficient to justify the added expense of treating by the closed system. Whether the cavity is covered by a metal plate or left open depends largely on its depth. Shallow cavities are generally left uncovered. The closed cavity treatment is used generally for large cavities near the base of the tree and lower part of the trunk, and for small deep cavities higher up in the tree.

The initial steps in both systems are the same, to remove all the decayed wood, whether punky or not in the cavity back into the sound wood. This is done with a chisel, a gouge or an adz. The sound wood lining the cavity is then treated to prevent decay, sometimes by painting it over with a heavy coat of tar or asphaltum paint, sometimes by the use of creosote, sometimes by charring it with a blow torch. If the open cavity system is used it is sufficient to leave the cavity thus, in case it does not need bolting or reenforcing. It may, however, be covered with a sheet of zinc or galvanized iron painted in a neutral color.

In the closed cavity treatment either of two materials may be employed, cement or asphalt. Both have their advantages and disadvantages. Cement is easier to apply but cracks and crumbles and has no antiseptic powers to prevent further decay. To be successfully used for large cavities it must be fractionated, that is, the layers must be set at different times and separated by expansion joints. When asphalt is used, a metal covering must be applied to the outside of the cavity. The asphalt is heated and poured in at the top. Although the work is more difficult and often the immediate result less attractive, the asphalt treatment seems to be more and more coming into favor.

National Flower Growers' Association.

ATTENTION! ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.

Flower Growers of Missouri and Illinois—The meeting of the St. Louis, Mo., district branch of the National Flower Growers' Association will be held in the city hall, Centralia, Ill., Tuesday, July 19, 1921. All flower growers in this district are expected to attend. In connection with this meeting will be a flower show and trades display to be held in the new automobile show rooms and all are requested to exhibit something to assure a success. The show will be open to the public. There will be no charge for any space.

The executive board will meet promptly at 9 a. m., the district session following at 10 o'clock.

J. W. Ross and A. Webster, of Centralia, who compose the entertainment committee, have all arrangements completed and exhibits sent in their care will be staged. Mayor Lender will welcome the visitors and the Commercial Club has arranged an interesting automobile trip after lunch.

All members should interest their neighbors to attend this session with them. It is expected that this will be the best attended meeting the district has ever held. The programme and entertainment features will be worth any grower's time to spend a day at Centralia, July 19.

WALTER A. AMLING, Pres.

A Visit to Emile Lemoine,

NANCY, FRANCE, JUNE 1, 1919.

Nancy is situated east of Paris, about seven hours by train. During the war, it was often shelled and bombed by the Germans, whose lines were only about 10 or 15 miles distant. On the way to M. Lemoine's, I saw the remnants of several destroyed houses. M. Lemoine welcomed me most cordially, though he said he was quite ashamed to show me his place so overgrown with weeds. To one who had traveled from Paris through many destroyed towns, and who knew how often the city of Nancy had been raided, these apologies were certainly not needed, for one can only have admiration for those who stayed so bravely at their work with the German menace so close. Indeed, I saw the spot in M. Lemoine's garden where a bomb had landed—a hundred yards more, and it might have destroyed his house and killed him. A hundred yards in another direction, and it would have wiped out the entire stock of the new yellow tree peonies, which I am about to describe. And yet, this wonderful Frenchman, calmly apologizes about weeds.

The peony lutea varieties bloom after the common tree peonies, and before the herbaceous peonies, so that besides being unique in color, they bridge a gap between these two. Lutea, the type, was unfortunately, not in bloom, but I understand it is of botanical and breeding value only, and is not a very desirable garden plant.

Peony lutea L'Esperance is a Lemoine hybrid (Lutea x moutan, probably the variety, Reine Elizabeth). The flower is single, of the clearest, most perfect yellow, entirely free from the greenish or purplish tints I rather feared I would find. Pistil and stamens are reddish, but this color adds to, rather than detracts from the appearance of the flower. The whole is like a large, yellow water lily or a yellow "Marie Jacquin." It is indescribably lovely, and must take its place among M. Lemoine's greatest achievements. I imagined it contained endless possibilities for the breeder, but was sorry to learn that it had proven sterile.

Peony lutea La Lorraine is a double flower, also a very good yellow, though perhaps not as perfect in color as L'Esperance. It also seems to be a free bloomer with good sized flowers, some of which unfortunately are not always held erect, but this is a fault of many tree peonies. Also I saw them on a scorching hot day, after a long drought, and through lack of labor, they had not had much care.

The third variety, Souv. de Maxime Cornu, is not a Lemoine seedling, but the work of the late M. Henry, of the Paris Museum. It is a double flower of yellow, overlaid and mottled towards the center with red. Many people will like it. I must confess that to me it is curious rather than beautiful. It suggests, however, that continued crosses of lutea and moutan may give us many beautiful and interesting things. As a garden plant, it is not good, as the flowers are lost in the foliage when the plant is seen from any distance. It is a great pity that these three varieties have proved to be sterile.

It should be noted that the three varieties were at their height on June 1, after all other tree peonies were practically over, and before any herbaceous peonies, except perhaps a few officinalis, had commenced. Furthermore, M. Lemoine tells me that they are free from the desire to start their early growth during the first warm spell of winter, and that, therefore, later cold snaps do not injure them, as the moutan varieties are nearly always injured, in the variable French winters.

M. Lemoine says he is often troubled with nematodes, but that they are rarely serious. He claims not to know the peony disease which has been troubling us in America. I did not see many peony plants, and imagine he goes in for quality, rather than quantity.

Of interest to peony lovers, is the new herbaceous species, P. Delavayi, from China. It has small, single, reddish chocolate flowers, which are not decorative, but may be of value for breeding.

In an adjoining garden across the road, two new lilac species were very interesting. They are Syringa Wilsoni and S. Sweginzowi superba. The flowers of both are pale pink, borne in very loose open clusters, the individual flower being very small compared to our standard lilac varieties; but the cluster is of good size, and its openness makes it exceedingly graceful. The flowers, in a general way, are alike, Wilsoni having the shorter, stockier clusters. M. Lemoine has crossed the two, and has a dozen or so intermediate forms in his seedling bed. Another lilac, S. reflexa, is interesting because its flowers, instead of standing upright, tend to droop over. I did not see as many deutzias as I had expected, most of the plants being in bad condition, due to lack of labor the past years. Of those in bloom, D. discolor excellens was the best, and one of the finest deutzias I have ever seen. There were also a few weigelas which astonished me by their beauty, for this is not a flower that I have ever cared for.

There are about six greenhouses full of small plants in great variety, among them many seedling geraniums in endless colors, from white through the delicate shades of pink, to scarlet, crimson and the deepest purple-crimson; and even an approach to a salmon yellow. I have never seen such a collection of geraniums. In pelargoniums, again in all shades from white to a deep blackish maroon were included, and M. Lemoine especially deplored the fact that these were not properly appreciated in America. There were also houses of young fuchsias, begonias, orchids, cacti, ferns and other tender plants, and also most interesting propagating houses containing large quantities of rare tiny shrubs and herbaceous plants, the collection being as large, if not larger, than that in the propagating houses of the Arnold Arboretum; with the difference, of course, that horticultural, rather than botanical plants, were emphasized. Many of the more difficult things were grown under bell jars.

The enormous number of species and varieties of plants cultivated by M. Lemoine in a small space (probably not more than eight or 10 acres) passes all belief; and that he should have been able to keep this collection alive during four and a half years of war, and while actually under fire from the Germans, is little short of marvelous. —J. C. Wister in the American Peony Society's Bulletin.

AN important article on the treatment of injured shade trees, by P. L. Buttrick, of the Michigan Agricultural College Experiment Station, East Lansing, will be found elsewhere in this issue.

EMILE LEMOINE, the well known French horticulturist, was recently honored by his government in receiving the decoration of Commander du Merite Agricole.

IMMORTELLES.—French growers report the immortelle crop will be short. Some importers have cut the sizes of bunches to the injury of this trade in much the same way that sharps in the sphagnum moss business injured that industry.

Address Wanted.

We have inquiry for the address of Adolph Bohr, reported located in Cleveland, O.

Ad Valorem Politics.

It is greatly feared by many importers that political influence, which strives for the appointment of more inspectors and valuators, will succeed in placing ad valorem duties on some items of seed and bulb stocks as well as on some nursery stocks.

This would insure the making of political appointees in the countries of origin to secure market valuation at the various ports of shipment. For instance: ad valorem duty on lily bulbs, if imposed in southern France, Japan and Bermuda, would require a government official in each of those countries to report on valuations. The same, if applied to nursery items, manetti stocks, fruit tree stocks, etc., and many other kinds of farm and garden seeds, would require similar federal officials under pay.

Fordney Tariff Bill (H R 7456).

INTRODUCED JUNE 29.

The items here given are those most important to the horticultural trades:

Par. 151. Tulip, narcissus, and hyacinth bulbs and lily of the valley pips, $4 per thousand; lily of the valley clumps, $10 per thousand; crocus bulbs, $1 per thousand; lily bulbs, $4 per thousand; all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms, tubers and herbaceous perennials, which are imported for horticultural purposes, 20 per centum ad valorem: cut flowers, fresh or preserved, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 752. Seedlings and cuttings of Manetti, multiflora, brier, rugosa, and other roses, $2 per thousand plants; cuttings, seedlings and grafted plants of other deciduous or evergreen ornamental trees, shrubs, or vines, including greenhouse plants, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 753. Seedlings, layers, or cuttings of plants for apple, cherry, pear, plum, quince, and other fruit stocks, $2 per thousand plants; grafted or budded fruit trees, cuttings and seedlings of grapes, currants, gooseberries and other fruit vines or bushes, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 760. Sunflower seed, 2 cts. per pound; apricot and peach kernels, 3 cts. per pound.

Par. 761. Grass seeds: alfalfa 2, alsike 3, crimson clover 1, red clover 3, white clover 3, other clovers 2 cts; millet, timothy 2, hairy vetch 2, spring vetch 1, all other grass seeds not specially provided for, 2 cts. per pound.

Par. 762. Other garden and field seeds: Sugar beet 1, other beet 4, cabbage 12, canary 1, carrot 4, cauliflower 25, celery 2, kale 6, kohlrabi 8, mangelwurzel 4, onion 20, parsley 2, parsnip 4, pepper 15, radish 4, spinach 1, tree 8, turnip 4, rutabaga 4, flower 4 cts per pound; all other garden and field seeds not specially provided for, 20 per centum ad valorem. Provided, that the provisions for seeds in this tittle shall include such seeds whether used for planting or for other purposes.

Par. 763. Beans, dried, 1¼ cts. per pound.

Par. 764. Sugar beets, 80 cts. per ton; other beets, 17 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 765. Cowpeas ½, lentils 2, lupins ½ ct. per pound.

Par. 766. Mushrooms, fresh or dried or otherwise prepared or preserved, 33⅓ per centum ad valorem; truffles, fresh or dried or otherwise prepared or preserved, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Par. 767. Peas, green or dried, 75 cts. per one hundred pounds.

Par. 768. Onions, 75 cts per one hundred pounds, garlic 2 cts. per pound.

Par. 769. White or Irish potatoes, 42 cts. per one hundred pounds. Mustard 1 ct. per pound.

Bagatelle Rose Awards.

In the Bagatelle rose trials at Paris, France, this season, according to the Horticultural Advertiser, nearly a hundred novelties were awarded marks according to their merits, five of them being given medals or certificates as follows:

Howard & Smith (Howard).—A rich tawny apricot color, quite a novel and distinct shade. The flower has not much form, opening flat, but the tree is a good grower of nice habit and very free, and promises to make an excellent garden rose. Gold medal.

Souvenir de Georges Pernet (Pernet Ducher).—A striking color in the Pernettiana class, a brilliant rosy-cerise with yellow base to the petal. Good upright habit. Little or no scent. Gold medal.

Etoile de Feu (Pernet Ducher).—Another Pernettiana of almost indescribable color, a mingling of salmon and apricot tints, shading to flesh color. First class certificate.

Aspirant Marcel Rouyer (Pernet Ducher).—Very nicely formed pointed bud, rich apricot shading to cream at edge of petals. Good habit and strong healthy growth. To our mind one of the most promising novelties in the trials. Second class certificate.

Hugette Vincent Chambard (Chambard).—A very bright Rose du Barri pink, flushed with glowing red. Tight, well formed bud, rather under medium size. No scent. Second class certificate.

S. A. F. Membership Drive.

PASSED HALF WAY AND STILL GOING!

Are you all busy? Oh no, there are a few fellows who have a boiler to fix; some a little painting to do and others ready for their vacation.

Well fishing for members for the Society of American Florists is great sport. Just try it. All the bait you need is the "Say It With Flowers" slogan. If you can't take a long vacation, just take a short one to a near-by town and fish on your neighbor's premises. If they don't bite there, try the next town and if you only get a nibble at either place, go back soon again and you may run into a whole school and nab a half dozen or more of real live ones. You might catch a shellfish who will really "shell out." Write for application blanks. They make fine "fishing tackle."

The Coming Season.

The great demand for plants and cut flowers the past season and the many periods of insufficient supply, has demonstrated without doubt that there is a sure market that will tax the present facilities of the trade to supply. Every grower should plan to use his houses to the fullest extent the coming season, and his utmost skill in producing quality in all grades of stock.

STOCK IS PLENTIFUL.

There is plenty of stock to go around but the quality in some instances could be a great deal better. Peonies are about done and the supply of salable carnations is exceptionally small. Gladioli are quite a factor in the market and are in strong demand at good summer prices. American Beauty roses are to be had at a few of the stores. Roses in general are in large supply, especially Columbia, Milady, Hearst, Ophelia, Sunburst, Butterfly, Double White Killarney and Crusader. Mrs. Chas. Russell are having a good call and so are Premier. Lily of the valley is in good supply and a few orchids are to be had. Lilies are seen at a few of the houses. Water lilies are included in the offerings. Sweet peas are obtainable. Daisies, calendulas, larkspur, candytuft, Russian statice, gypsophila, cornflowers, feverfew, snapdragons, gaillardia, coreopsis, callas and a large supply of other indoor and outdoor stock is included in the shipments. Greens are plentiful with cut ferns arriving in much heavier supply. Business has been fair the past week considering the conditions and no complaint is heard from any of the dealers. Some of the stores closed all day the Fourth, while others remained open until noon. Vacations are in order and quite a number have signified their intention of spending their few weeks at the Washington convention of the Society of American Florists.

NOTES.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports its representatives on the road booking good business.

Henry Kruchten of the John Kruchten Co. is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

The TREND of the TIMES,

Is for elimination of reduplicated effort; a manifold billing machine replaces four clerks; and for all simplification of operations; the punch press does it all in one motion.

Alert florists recognize this principle of economy; they BUY standard stock which comes ready made, with no waste of effort; let a professional economizer effect their economy; and use their own glass for what cannot well be transported or raised in standard units.

SUMMER DULLNESS HAS BEGUN.

Summer dullness has now set in and there will be several weeks of slack trade. The floral stores closed on July 4, after a brief morning session to obtain what funeral work came in at that time. During the past week this and wedding work has constituted the greater part of the activities. For th most part, however, they are simple affairs and a few flowers suffice. Roses, however, despite the heat, continue good, but carnations are a thing of the past. Gladioli have a good call for social functions. Rubrum lilies are in good demand.

Meyer's Silkaline, or Smilax Threads

Be sure the name Meyer is on the end of each spool, as we find there are a lot of fake brands being put on the market to imitate our green florists' thread. Weigh up our threads and then weigh up the other parties' that you are buying from, and you will notice that our threads run full two ounces of thread to the spool.

EXCESSIVE SUPPLY ON MARKET.

There is an overabundance of stock on the market and prices are very low. The excessively hot weather experienced in this city and vicinity has brought on many flowers with a rush, but the stock in general does not keep well and it is hoped by all tradesmen that the conditions will be much cooler next week. Generally speaking business is slow and unless the warm weather lets up it will continue so. Roses are the standard cut flower and there is a good demand for varieties such as Mrs. Chas. Russell, Premier, Columbia, Ward, Milady, Butterfly, Ophelia, and some of the Killarneys. White roses have a poor call and none are being used except for funerals or weddings. The stock on hand is of fair quality and prices are unusually low. Carnations in many cases are being dumped by the growers, with little demand. Excellent gladioli are glutting the market, the leading varieties being Loveliness, Hadley and America. Lilium Harrisii is very scarce and is handled by but few establishments. The demand however is good and the quality of the best. Lily of the valley is not plentiful, and it is in great demand for bridal bouquets. Shasta daisies are arriving in quantity, and are in fairly good demand for a table decoration. A few spring flowers have come in and the call for them is brisk. Delphiniums in shades of pink, blue and white are offered by many florists and bring a good price. Some very fine gaillardias are arriving and they clean up daily. Calendulas are not seen in any large quantities, although the quality of the stock is excellent. Fair snapdragons are seen and sell well. Orchids are very scarce and are in good call. Only a few cypripediums are seen, which sell poorly. Fine phlox is in excellent demand, shades of pink, lavender and white being featured. Bedding plants, such as geraniums, ageratums, coleus, etc., bring poor prices. Cibotium and Bird's nest ferns, crotons and aspidistras, show no fluctuation in price and are in fair demand. Asparagus plumosus are plentiful and sell readily. Southern smilax is another good seller. Ferns have taken another big slump in price and wholesale at $2.50 per 100. A few excellent begonias are offered and candytuft brings a small price.

NOTES.

Street merchants have been doing a good business in poor grade roses, a few carnations, calendulas and snapdragons, and a limited supply of poor gladioli.

W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, has been shipping quantities of roses, carnations and snapdragons to this market.

BUSINESS IS FAIR.

The weather continues hot with enough rain to make things grow. The garden variety of flowers are very plentiful and their quality is excellent. Some nice gladioli are coming into the market and are enjoying a good demand. Business during the past week has been not at all discouraging and wedding orders have been fairly numerous. Funeral work has been fairly active. There have been 20 violent deaths so far this month and considerable flowers were sold as a result. The Moose convention held here this week brought thousands of visitors and the city was gaily decorated in their honor. Many of the florists' windows had special decorations, which were very attractive.

NOTES.

A post convention meeting of the local branch of the Ohio Growers' Association was held Monday evening at Schramm Bros., Wm. Krueger presiding. Those who attended the convention at Columbus reported what they had learned there. There was great enthusiasm at the meeting and it was decided to launch an active membership campaign for this section.

Schramm Bros. have been very busy during the past week with wedding orders, of which they have had two or more for every day. Al Lehmann, manager of the greenhouses, has returned from a ten days' fishing trip at Houghton Lake. Frank Schramm will leave soon for a motor trip to the northland, taking his wife and son along.

For Moose convention week, the Central Flower Shoppe had a very neat window display, which attracted a lot of favorable comment. It consisted of an outdoor scene with a miniature lake in the center, toward which led roads on which could be seen autos and other vehicles. Garden flowers in neat arrangements completed the display.

There is an air of expectancy and quiet rejoicing about the Helmer Flower Shop these days and the cause, the announced engagement of Josephine Helmer, whose artistic designing has made this business flourish. She will continue in that work after her wedding, the date of which has not yet been set.

Thos. Magee of the Scottwood greenhouse says that while wedding business was not as numerous this June, he had some very nice orders for decorations. He is looking forward with pleasure to the Grand circuit races, as he is a great lover of horses and racing.

Earl Metz of Metz & Bateman says business at their store is seasonably dull with now and then spurts of funeral work and calls for wedding bouquets, of which this firm has had its share.

A. E. Warning, Broadway florist, states that he is very well satisfied with the past six months' business, which was substantially greater than for the same period last year.

EXCELLENT JUNE TRADE ENJOYED.

Despite the fact that we are well into the summer months it is surprising the way trade has kept up. Of late there has been an unusually heavy demand for funeral work. Stores that have out-of-town connections have been shipping large funeral orders. Weddings are still calling for a large amount of decorative stock and there is a heavy supply of all seasonable flowers to draw upon. Gladioli of excellent quality are over-abundant at the present time. Up to this writing prices have been well maintained, but it is expected that there will be a noticable drop this week in order to move the rapid accumulation of stock. The small flowered gladioli are almost out of the market. There is a great oversupply of short roses of every variety. Long stemmed stock is in adequate supply for all needs. Prices are quite low for all goods. One of the best roses now being handled here is Ulrich Brunner. The stock is fine and clean and of good size, and is all outdoor grown. Some good Kaiserin is also coming in and where white roses are needed sells readily. Cecil Brunner is very plentiful and cheap. Orchids are gradually shortening up and the daily offerings clean up readily at $2 each. Lily of the valley is in strong demand at $8 per 100. Gardenias are to be had in limited lots only with prices remaining normal. The usual June oversupply of carnations is now at hand. So great is the amount coming in that the trade is unable to absorb the larger part of the cut. They are found on every street corner and are offered at two dozen for 25 cents. This condition is usually of short duration, however, and as the carnation growers have been getting high prices for their stock all season, very little complaint is heard. Sweet peas continue to show improvement, chiefly as regards form and color. They are in good demand, especially the light shades and prices are being maintained at former levels. There has been an increased supply of Giganteum lilies arriving; prices continue steady at $4 per dozen. Red and pink dahlias are very plentiful. Pompons, which are very much in favor in this market, are slowly increasing in supply. Basket work and table decorations are the two principal outlets. All the stores are making wonderful displays of buddleias and report an excellent call. It is obtainable in long stems with spikes of blooms averaging one foot long. The various shades of lavender make it most desirable for decorative work. Perennials continue to arrive in large quantities and are very cheap. With the exception of Primula obconica there are no flowering plants to be had. A few hydrangeas are being handled. Nephrolepis is the best seller among foliage plants. There is also quite a call for aspidistras. Asparagus and fern growers are in with large stocks but report no trouble in moving their cut. The shipping trade for this class of stock continues good.

NOTES.

The floor plan of the civic auditorium for the fall show is being made at the offices of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. The various committees which have charge report rapid progress being made. John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, has assured the committee that that park will stage a large exhibit of rare flowering and foliage plants. The prize committee, consisting of Eric James, Elmhurst; William Kettlewell, Burlingame, and B. M. Joseph of this city, are arranging the prize list which will consist of generous cash awards, silver cups and diplomas.

The annual midsummer flower show of the Flower Lovers' Club, San Jose, was held at the Chamber of Commerce in that city June 25. Great throngs of visitors attended the show which consisted of all seasonable flowers. Sweet peas in great variety were largely seen and given much prominence in the exhibition. This club has enjoyed a great increase in membership during the past few months.

Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is greatly pleased over the June business. He says it has far exceeded other years in volume. Many of the firm's force are now away on vacations. Mayor Rolph has appointed Mr. Rossi one of the reception committee for the supreme conclave of the Knights of Columbus which meets here in July.

From the chrysanthemum growing section near Menlo Park and Redwood City come the report that the crop is looking unusually well. The acreage is about the same as last year. There have been greatly reduced plantings of asters by the Chinese growers owing to the disastrous results of over production during the past two years.

The Allied Florists' Association has held several meetings to effect organization and put into operation the percentage plan of securing a permanent advertising fund. It is the intention of the association to secure the services of an advertising expert to act as manager and such a man is now being considered.

One of the busiest days experienced for a long time was the occasion of the opening of the new Bank of Italy on Powell street. An enormous quantity of stock was used for the various pieces sent on the opening day. Every store in the city shared in the business which amounted to a large sum in the aggregate.

J. A. Axell is disposing of large quantities of gladioli at his wholesale store on Bush street. He is also receiving a large supply of roses of every variety. Mr. Axell is one of the wholesalers' representatives on the executive committee of the Allied Florists' Association.

Domoto Bros'. greenhouses are still producing an excellent grade of Giganteum lilies. Roses of all varieties continue in steady supply. Thos. Domoto is giving all the eastern varieties a thorough trial this season and expects to find some valuable additions for their rose list.

There will be a meeting next week of the incorporators of the new wholesale co-operative flower market to make final arrangements and sign papers of incorporation. It is expected that the president and board of directors will also be chosen at that time.

Manuel Rolleri, manager of the Western Evergreen nursery on Goetingen street, will have a large stock of fancy ferns for the fall trade, and is going to devote several more houses to Mrs. Chas. Russell roses this year.

RECORD JUNE DEMAND.

June has passed out good and strong, that is, for June, and carries as well the record for weddings, there having been more of these social events the past month than ever experienced before. All classes of retailers have enjoyed an unusual demand, many of them stating they have broken all records for the month. The stock of flowers has been ample both in quantity and variety, particularly in roses, with which this market has never been so well supplied before. The extreme hot weather of the past 10 days is beginning to show its effects, however, and this with the lessening summer demand will induce growers to give their houses a much needed rest. A number of carnations are still offered but are poor and hardly worth considering. Outside stock of all kinds has been very good considering the dry weather, some no doubt came from growers wise enough to take advantage of irrigation. The first outdoor asters are in, very fair flowers. A week or 10 days will see the market filled with fine stock of the early varieties. Choice gladioli are a factor and will be a great help for the next two months, provided the farmers don't swamp the market. Easter lilies are quite equal to the demand. Cattleyas and lily of the valley have been selling up close at good prices and there is still a fair showing of outdoor sweet peas.

THE OUTSIDE DEMAND.

In discussing the market situation one of the large dealers stated that the out-of-town demand was a great factor in the cut flower industry of this city and vicinity. There are hundreds of cities, towns and communities, continuing as far as a 1,000 mile radius, that are more or less dependent on this center for their plants and cut flowers, and whose support has encouraged the expansion of the business to its present great magnitude. While the fame of our growers and their choice stock has contributed to this demand, the most potent energy has been the efficiency of the high class commission houses, who in their intensive up-to-date business methods in securing and handling the orders, have built up this large and continually increasing business to its present proportions. Retailers here do not realize their great advantage in having the choice of a market of which fully 60 per cent of the stock handled is grown to supply an outside demand.

HAIL.

The northeastern section of the city was visited by a heavy electrical and hail storm on June 20. The storm broke at 5 p. m., with a deluge of rain and hail which hit some of the craft seriously while others in the path of the storm escaped almost entirely. John Kuhn, Olney, was the worst sufferer, his loss being some $3,000, part of which is covered by insurance in the Hail Association, which he has been carrying for over 20 years, and which he often thought was foolish, but now comes in all right. Harry Betz, Wyoming avenue, lost in glass and a hammered down bed of 1,800 Easter lilies about $800; G. A. Theile, John Milner, Wm. Koehler, Theodore Nichols, Ernest Ebinger, and others in this district lost from two to six and eight boxes of glass. The damage was mostly to single thick glass, the double being able to stand the strain.

NOTES.

The Colonial Flower Shop, which was opened a few months ago in the 13th street subway station, has been doing a fine business. This shop is managed with thoroughly up-to-date business methods, carrying at all times a large and varied stock, which is always arranged with taste. The plain pricing of each article has been a great feature in moving stock quickly. A new ice box at a cost of $650, just installed, is a useful and handsome addition.

Jos. G. Neidinger had the misfortune to lose his fine personal limousine last week by fire. Something that had gotten wrong with the electrical equipment set fire to the car in the garage at night, and it was soon a total wreck.

William Tofferd, who opened a new flower shop at Broad and Porter streets on May 1, reports that he is much encouraged and confident of building up a good trade at this location.

William Dych, Second and Columbia avenues, has completed the greenhouse in the rear of his store, which makes a fine show conservatory and gives him much needed room.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are getting together a record exhibit for the coming trade display at Washington, D. C. Just a bit better than they have ever done before.

Asters, gladioli and centaureas were features of the outdoor stock of the Leo Niessen Co. High grade roses and cattlevas were also quantity items.

Eugene Shellem, at 17th and Moore streets, reports business very encouraging, the past June being the best in his experience.

Easter lilies, gladioli, roses and asters are being featured by Berger Bros. Business is reported good for the season. K.

GLADIOLI AND LILIES STIFFEN MARKET.

This city has just passed through two of the hottest weeks on record, accompanied by two of the worst storms in years, which played havoc with things in general. Business has been none too brisk and stock is of poor quality. Gladioli and lilies have been the backbone of the market, due to their exceptional keeping qualities. Roses are arriving in poor condition, most of them open stock, and at times it has been hard to get enough tight ones to fill orders with. Carnations are still moving but slowly and most of them show the effects of the heat. Delphinium is still popular and large quantities of it are moved daily.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum, president of The McCallum Co., and family motored to Deer Park, Md., where they spent July 4. Henry Blend and Geo. C. McCallum of this company have just returned from an extended trip through the east. They report business in a healthy condition, especially in the smaller towns, and everyone preparing for the coming season in a big way.

Wm. Wampler of The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is on a two weeks' vacation.

Ollie Beet, buyer for The A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co., is taking a month's vacation. E. C. T.

HEAVY RAINS TO IMPROVE STOCK.

In times of drought it is advisable to discuss the weather even if it is generally considered a stale subject. It is satisfactory to report that the drought has been broken. There were occasional showers on early days of the past week and a steady downpour throughout June 30. Heat and humidity had the effect of reducing the sales of cut flowers and there was no stability in prices, but for that matter, unless when there is an occasional scarcity, prices are always fluctuating in this market. As the June weddings have now passed into history it is safe to assume that the lean season is at hand. Prices of American Beauty roses and orchids remain at moderate figures as there is no heavy demand for either. Lily of the valley is in lighter supply and prices are somewhat higher. Although quite a stock of carnations continues to arrive the bulk of it is necessarily of indifferent quality and the various outdoor offerings seem to have the preference for bunches. The carnations, of course, continue to be used in funeral work. With heavy and continued rain there now seems to be some prospect for the aster crop, which had about been given up, but in any event it will be late. The few asters that have come in are of little account.

July 4.—The weather is very hot, and excepting a chance buyer who may have funeral work on hand, there is no business.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY.

"Tomorrow," wrote a Washington, D. C., correspondent on June 30, "July 1, the beginning of a new fiscal year for the government, will usher in the era of economy and efficiency in Washington." Let us all hope that this may prove true. We may be pardoned for turning aside for a few moments from strictly horticultural matters to refer to the unprecedented event that happened in Washington on June 29. In the presence of the President and his cabinet and 600 government bureau chiefs, Charles G. Dawes—the newspaper boys have nicknamed him "Hell an' Maria"—director of the budget, made a forcible address on government economy. This event is noteworthy, and the only surprising feature is that it was as late as the sixth month of 1921 that such a reform was inaugurated. A great English statesman once said that parliament had done many just things, but few things because they were just; the inference being that parliament was forced to do them. We believe that at least on the part of President Harding, this reform is voluntary. No reasonable man would wish to see the necessary government business crippled. But in late years some of the chiefs of bureaus seem to have become possessed with the idea that they were the government. It is time that their minds were disabused of such notions. As Congressman Campbell remarked in a speech which was published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of June 18, page 1069: "Government reports on every subject from adenoids to rat traps fill the files of offices that cover acres of floor space in Washington."

NOTES.

An immense number of people left the city on July 2 for the Fourth of July holiday. Crowds filled the concourses and waiting rooms of the Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations and extra trains were run. The outlook for business for next week is not encouraging.

Philip F. Kessler, Jr., son of Philip F. Kessler, the well-known wholesaler, who recently graduated from high school, has gone to Syracuse university to take the summer course, which began July 5. The young man, who is only 17 years old, intends to pursue a four years' course.

Herman Kutin, 35 years in business as a retailer at 896 Sixth avenue near 50th street, is not in good health and has been succeeded by Charles H. Kaiser, who has been connected with the store for 25 years. He is well and favorably known in all branches of the trade.

The Aphrodite Florist, Broadway and 103rd street, has converted the large space connected with his show window into an aviary and the sidewalk crowds take great interest in his canaries, paroquets and other birds.

When the National City Bank recently opened its branch in the converted Manhattan Hotel building on 42nd street, there were so many floral tributes that the uninitiated thought it was a new flower shop.

Frank H. Traendly and family have gone to their summer home on the farm at Rowayton, Conn. In the meantime the ever active and diligent Chas. Schenk will carry on the wholesale business.

Sam Seligman, who is now conducting his business alone, keeps busy manufacturing and shipping florists' novelties.

After a siege of six weeks with scarlet fever, Wm. Scharf of A. M. Westwood's staff, is again at the store.

A new retail store was opened recently at 627 Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn, by Walter P. Petry.

Good reports from his gladioli farm at Hawthorn, N. Y., are being received by C. W. Scott.

Mrs. Paul Meconi sailed for Europe last week to be absent until September.

Visitors: Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; Henry Penn, and Major O'Keefe, Boston, Mass.; George Asmus, Chicago.

STOCK OF GOOD QUALITY ARRIVING.

The last week in June was rather quiet in the florist business. The extreme warm weather has been affecting the trade to a certain extent and in addition it is now the usual dull period. But down-town florists who have been comparing their business with that of last year find that the volume of trade in orders is ahead of that of 1920, while the volume calculated in dollars and cents is not far behind. With lower prices prevailing most of the trade has been doing almost as big a business as last year when prices were much higher. Weddings were fairly numerous during June but the number of large ones was not many. There were quite a few smaller ones however, and this furnished a market for a considerable amount of flowers. Funeral work has been rather quiet. There is a fairly good demand for loose flowers. Pot plants are quiet as is the shrubbery business. Gladioli are now the best feature of the local trade. These flowers are coming in good quality and find a ready sale. Roses and carnations are also selling fairly well. There are also frequent calls for garden flowers, which are plentiful. Easter lilies have arrived in the market during the past week. Rubrum lilies are also one of the best features. Taking it all in all the prospects for the summer months are fairly good although the vacation period is now in full swing and this always produces a let-up in the demand for flowers.

NOTES.

The extreme hot weather which has been prevailing has had a marked effect on the growers. They have been able to supply the market as far as roses and carnations go and the quality of their product has been especially high class. But some other flowers which are usually found in profusion at this time are not as plentiful as in previous seasons.

Little extra demand for flowers was anticipated as a result of the July 4 celebration. Some call was reported from certain quarters, but since everyone who could left the city, this extra demand was curtailed to a large degree.

Stephans & Son, florists at Greenlawn cemetery, have placed in service a large truck to make deliveries and to transport flowers and shrubbery.

Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., President; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., Vice-President; Clarence R. Jones, 110 South Street, Baltimore, Md., Secretary-Treasurer; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass, Counsel.

The next annual meeting will be held June, 1922.

CATALOGUE paper price is low and declining.

NEW burlap bags can be bought at about one-third of 1920 prices.

A. HOGEWONING, of New York, was in Sgravensge, Holland, June 18.

NEW YORK.—The A. T. Boddington Co. will hold its annual meeting July 11.

PROSPECTS for red top grass seed improved 100 per cent during the last 10 days of June.

FAIRFIELD, IA.—The Bruns Seed Co., of Davenport, Ia., opened a new store in this city on July 1.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.—James J. H. Gregory & Co. say its seed crops were greatly retarded by the dry weather of June.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Petition for final discharge in the E. A. Martin bankruptcy case will be heard August 9.

FORMOSUM lily bulb prices, according to report, will be about the same as last year and the percentage of large bulbs smaller.

CHAIN department stores are showing steady gains. Why should not retail counter demand for seed and plants hold up?

PRICE of bags at Chicago, July 6, American, 16 oz., $29.50 per bale, in bale lots or over; Railroads, 16 oz., $27.00; Crown, 12 oz., $21.00.

GUADALUPE, CALIF.—L. D. Waller, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., has returned and says he enjoyed every minute of the St. Louis convention trip.

THE Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japan steamer company's report to March 31, shows a profit of 5,541,878 yen and declared a dividend of 25 per cent.

NEWARK, N. J.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the S. A. Rogers Co., 453 Broad street, July 1. Liabilities $25,000, assets $10,000.

THE Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., advises that central Michigan crops of radish and beans are in a bad way because of extreme heat and drought.

ATLANTA, GA.—H. G. Hastings advises the fire of June 25, in an adjoining building, damaged his firm's premises only very slightly. Warehouse No. 1 being only slightly injured, with seeds on the first floor sustaining light water damage, the total damage not material and no interference with operation.

BOARD OF TRADE—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, July 6, were as follows: Timothy, $4.25 to $5.75 per 100 pounds, Red Clover, $10.00 to $16.00.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. M. Bridgeford, of Watkins & Simpson, London, Eng.; S. S. Skidelsky, New York, enroute to California; N. J. Groot, of Sluiss & Groot, Enkuizen, Holland.

DUTCH gowers report single and double tulips ripened early because of drought. Hyacinths on poor land also suffered and did not fill well, narcissus followed the hyacinths. Darwins stand the drought better.

PEA crops in the Wisconsin district have been seriously injured by heat and drought. Careful observers estimate the pack in that state will not exceed 50 per cent of that of a year ago.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—The director of the state agricultural station at Purdue has invited seedsmen to meet with them July 12, to consider proposed rules and regulations of the seed commissioner, as required by the seed law.

RED RIVER VALLEY seed potato growers report a long dry spell with the thermometer running from 90 to 104 degrees daily and without rain, leaves pretty badly burned. However, a good rain fell the night of July 2.

A DESPATCH from Detroit says Henry Ford plans to buy the government's $100,000,000 nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala., to provide cheap nitrates for farm fertilizer and to increase the farmers' demand for tractors and automobiles.

IN order to reduce operating expenses during the summer dullness without cutting salaries, Montgomery Ward & Co. have inaugurated a five-day week for all employes and officers, and has ordered five days' pay for the five-day week.

MUSCATINE, IA.—The J. E. Hoopes Co. says starting its seed crops specialties was rendered difficult with late freezes and drought in May, but that June has tried to make up with showery, warm weather, which has made all crops grow so fast the large force of employes had to hustle to keep ahead of the weeds. On account of trade uncertainties, the firm has not planted as large an acreage as usual, but if the remainder of the season is good, a fair crop of seeds may be expected anyway.

Ad Valorem Politics.

It is greatly feared by many importers that political influence, which strives for the appointment of more inspectors and valuators, will succeed in placing ad valorem duties on some items of seed and bulb stocks as well as on some nursery stocks.

This would insure the making of political appointees in the countries of origin to secure market valuation at the various ports of shipment. For instance: ad valorem duty on lily bulbs, if imposed in southern France, Japan and Bermuda, would require a government official in each of those countries to report on valuations. The same, if applied to nursery items, manetti stocks, fruit tree stocks, etc., and many other kinds of farm and garden seeds, would require similar federal officials under pay.

Pea Seed Acreage.

About three weeks ago the pea seed vigilance committee of the Wisconsin Canners' Association sent out a questionaire to all leading pea seed growers, asking them as to their acreage in seed sales, etc. During the week of June 25 the committee reported that but 40 per cent of the Wisconsin canners have made any provision for their pea seed requirements in 1922, that the seedsmen's acreage is very short, and expressing doubt that the canners who have not contracted will be able to cover.

Since the issue of this circular there has been active inquiry for canners' peas, not only from Wisconsin, but from other pea-canning states.

Tariff Notes.

Four dollars to be added to cost of every thousand Paper White narcissus bulbs.

Cheap narcissus will be taxed more than double their value.

Caviar (Charles Dickinson), 28 per cent ad valorem.

Sea moss on free list, also ice and palm leaf fans.

Peach and apricot pits, 3 cents per pound.

Cut flowers from Canada, 25 per cent.

Mushroom spawn, 20 per cent.

Poker chips, 40 per cent.

Hops, 24 cents per pound.

Immortelles, 25 per cent.

Government Seeds.

Addressing the District of Columbia Bankers' Association, President Harding said, "The government should cease to be a competitor of business which ought to be in the hands of private enterprises."—Forbes Magazine.

Perhaps President Harding can find a way to stop the extravagance and gross injustice to seedsmen of the government's free distribution of common garden seeds as bribes to voters.

French Bulb Prices in England.

At a meeting of the British trade, held June 20 under the auspices of the Chamber of Horticulture, the following were fixed as maximum prices for French bulbs this season:

Roman hyacinth—
12-13	6	pounds per 1000
11-12	5	pounds per 1000
12-14	8	pounds per 1000
14 and over	10	pounds per 1000
Narcissus, Paper White Grandiflora—
13-14	50	shillings per 1000
14 and over	60	shillings per 1000
Freesia—
5 and over	40	shillings per 1000
5½ and over	50	shillings per 1000

California Seed Crops.

R. C. McGill of San Francisco, Calif., writes: "The acreage of vegetable seeds is as near to nothing as it is possible to make it and any thoughtful seedsman will not hesitate to make his 1922 growing arrangement as soon as possible, as a genuine shortage of seed will develop a year hence if there is an insufficient acreage planted next winter, which will surely result if orders do not come in as they should. I believe the amount of surplus seed on hand has been greatly exaggerated and that all markets will advance materially with the first active demand for goods."

Nebraska and Colorado Seed Crops.

The J. C. Robinson Co., Waterloo, Neb., in its crop report for July, 1921, gives the following information regarding the condition of seed crops in the above states:

Sweet, Flint and Dent Corn—The acreage of corn crops for seed we believe to be the most conservative in a number of years. While values for commercial corn are below the cost of production, and the prices asked for seed corn are at the pre-war level, yet the tendency to wait until the new crop is made is more marked than usual. Crop conditions are excellent in every respect, plenty of moisture and good stands were obtained everywhere.

Cucumber—Acreage in the Arkansas Valley somewhat reduced over normal and conditions are fair. Some loss from hail, but more from floods; how much damage will result difficult to foresee. One of the main ditches has been repaired, and others promised to be rebuilt in from 30 to 60 days. All headgates, deflectors and storage reservoirs were destroyed, and until these are repaired the crop is in danger. All crops on low lands were destroyed and impossible to replant with any assurance of making seed. We believe a great many hundreds of acres of seed crops are gone and with a chance that the balance will suffer until the ditches are all repaired, which is necessarily slow.

Muskmelon—Conditions with muskmelon for seed are identical with that of cucumber. The acreage was under normal.

Watermelon—Acreage in the south about normal, conditions good. In other sections, acreage fair and condition good. The northern growing districts for watermelon produce an excellent quality of seed, and we believe the northern grown seed will produce melons earlier than seed grown farther south.

Pumpkin and squash—Condition excellent and acreage under ordinary. Some losses from excessive rains and insects, but, on the whole, the crop in the middle-west growing sections is very good. However, very little acreage planted was on speculation, growers confining themselves to actual orders in hand. Without doubt, owing to losses and small acreage, many shortages will be apparent this fall. The far-west squash and pumpkin seed crops are in good shape but acreage is small.

Seed Beans—Acreage is small, but condition is good. Some loss from excessive rains.

Orchard Grass Seed.

The total domestic production of orchard grass seed this year will be 35 per cent less than in 1920, according to data collected by the United States bureau of markets during the week ending June 18. The smaller production is largely the result of a reduced yield per acre, especially in the Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana district. Harvesting is well under way in most sections and threshing should be in progress by July 1.

No imported orchard grass seed has been permitted entry into the United States since June 15, 1920, and the stocks of old seed are thought to be less than at this time last year. Seedsmen, however, are not inclined to be alarmed at the prospective low new-crop production and do not expect to see a runaway market. A few of them report recent offerings of imported seed by European firms at $15 to $20 per 100 pounds. No offers or contracts have been made by seedsmen for the new crop domestic seed.

Retail Carryover Small.

The "hand-to-mouth" method of buying by retail dealers is enabling them to clean up their stocks by the close of the season, although the demand from farmers continues to be below normal. Reports submitted by retail dealers to the United States bureau of markets under date of May 20, indicate that this condition is general. While many dealers expect a good demand for late-sown forage crop seeds, most of them are not looking for any last-minute rush, as the spirit of ultra-conservatism appears to have a firm hold on the buying farmer.

Prices generally are somewhat lower than a month ago, having followed the trend of wholesale prices in many cases. In strictly consuming sections, prices of late-sown forage crops have advanced, while in producing sections of a few of these seeds the prices quoted to farmers are somewhat lower.

VAUGHAN'S PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of the colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Chicago Parks Bedding Mixture

This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies, they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $1.80.

Vaughan's P. P. (Popular Price) Mixture of Pansies

This mixture like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types, and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c.; oz., $3.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers.

Early-Flowering Giant White, with eye, Yellow, with eye, Light Blue, Dark Blue, Jupiter Purple, Mars, Cornflower Blue, North Pole Pure White, Wodan Black, and Mixed (eight colors). Trade pkt., (500 seeds) 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c; oz. $3.00.

Tariff Gossip.

Mark Sullivan, in a Washington special to the Evening Post, says the tariff bill may lag for months, and signs are seen by some that it will not be passed by the present session of congress. It may well be September before the debate on the bill gets under way in the senate. Under all the circumstances it would be bold to predict that the debate can be finished and the bill passed before the first of December. Republican leaders, who believe that the revision of taxes is the more immediate necessity, are showing increased energy.

The permanent tariff bill will be reported to the house immediately after the recess of congress over the Fourth of July and passed within 10 days or two weeks, Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican house leader, said.

Annoyed at the tariff delay, President Harding conferred with Chairman Fordney recently, and the latter promised the bill to be ready July 5.

It is reported that the new tariff will follow closely the rates in the Payne-Aldrich act of 1909.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

Recent advices from France indicate that the old ruling by the federal horticultural board regarding packing of lily bulbs in soil has been interpreted in southern France by local pathological inspectors to mean that Lilium candidum bulbs as well as Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora must all be packed in sterilized earth.

Of course, the French exporting dealers cannot and will not do this, for the very good reason that both these items, if so packed, would sprout and be ruined for merchandising?

Is the board aiming to make foreign importations still more difficult?

Canary Seed.

A report from Australia dated May 6 places the production of canary seed in that country this year at 2,000 tons, 1,000 tons of which is available for export to other countries.

The Queensland government has agreed to finance the growers in the formation of a pool to market their canary seed. Under the pooling system the farmers are expecting to receive $75.28 per ton, $29.48 per ton of which may be advanced to each grower upon delivery of seed to the central pool. The United States currency values stated above are based on the rate of exchange on June 27.

Grasshoppers in Colorado.

Colorado Springs, June 25.—An army of grasshoppers, estimated by County Farm Agent J. C. Hale to be 15 miles wide and 20 miles long, is advancing on El Paso county, Colorado, from the southwest, at the rate of a mile a day. In their advance the grasshoppers are destroying virtually all vegetation in their path, according to the county agent. Mr. Hale, accompanied by E. T. Haas, an entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture, will start out today to meet the grasshopper army with two tons of poison to be distributed among the farmers for killing the insects.

Seed Imports.

The arrivals of imported seed during the week ending June 25 were as follows: At New York—2,200 pounds of red clover and 170,500 pounds of crimson clover from Germany, 22,400 pounds of rye grass from Great Britain, and 3,000 pounds of vetch from Russia; at Baltimore—11,000 pounds of white clover, 33,000 pounds of vetch, and 209,000 pounds of clover from England.

Seed Crop Notes From Sweden.

A report from Sweden states that farmers are expected to leave only a minimum acreage of clovers and grasses to be harvested for seed, and the trade is looking forward to higher prices next season. The prospective production of turnip and rutabaga (Swede turnip) seed has been adversely affected by the hot weather and insect injury.

Direct European Distribution Favored.

A buyer for a well-known western seed house dealing with foreign concerns, writes:

"I am trying to avoid purchasing from European seed houses who are selling through American seed agents in this country, and I have reason to believe many other American seedsmen feel the same way."

Burpee's Sweet Peas

MRS. WARREN G. HARDING is one of the most admired Early—or Winter-flowering Sweet Peas we have ever originated. It is a great and decided advance in its color class—a deep, pure shade of silver blue. The plants are immense in size with broad and much frilled standard and wings. It is a vigorous grower and blooms profusely, with usually four flowers on a long stem. It was awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Flower Show in New York, March 14, 1921. We originally exhibited this variety under the name of Silver Blue. By special permission from the "The First Lady of the Land," however, we have now named this outstanding novelty MRS. WARREN G. HARDING. Our stock is very limited so we would suggest that you order as early as possible. Oz. $12.00, ¼ lb. $45.00, postpaid.

IN addition to MRS. WARREN G. HARDING we have other outstanding Burpee Novelties in the Early—or Winter-flowering type. Burpee's Special Sweet Pea Folder for Florists gives full descriptions and prices of all these wonderful novelties, and a complete descriptive list of other worth-while Early-flowering Sweet Peas. Every Florist and Grower should have it. Write for a free copy today.

American Association of Nurserymen.

M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn., President; Paul C. Lindley, Pomona, N. C., Vice-President; John Watson 400 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J., Secretary; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

The forty-seventh annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1922.

DAVIS, CALIF. — Development has commenced on the $20,000 state nursery comprising a tract of 30 acres near this city. Propagation of shade trees for highways and public parks will be the specialty.

OMAHA, NEB.—B. H. Dunham, referee in the Page Tree Service bankruptcy, states there will be no dividends for creditors. Employes' wages being preferred claims, exhausted the assets, and yet were not paid in full.

HARLAN P. KELSEY'S important reports on nomenclature and standardization, presented before the annual convention of the American Association of Nurseymen at Chicago last month, will be found on page 1177 of this issue.

American Association of Nurserymen.

President-Elect Cashman has favored us with the following important items from the report of the proceedings in executive sessions at the Chicago convention June 22-24:

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Article 3 was amended to read as follows: The officers of the association shall consist of the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and the executive committee. The president, vice president and treasurer shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting of the association and hold office for one year or until their successors are chosen. The executive committee shall consist of the president and vice president ex-officio, and five others, nurserymen, active members, who shall be elected by ballot: two to be elected for one year, three to be elected for two years and annually thereafter alternately, two for two years and three for two years. There shall also be a vice-president from each state to be chosen by their respective state delegations at the annual convention, who shall hold office until their successors are duly elected. The secretary shall be chosen by the executive committee and shall hold office subject to approval of said executive committee.

Article 7, states that the annual membership fees for active members shall be $10 plus additional dues based on annual gross volume of business without deductions of any character, as follows:

$ 10,000	to	$ 25,000	$ 10
25,000	to	50,000	20
50,000	to	75,000	30
75,000	to	100,000	40
100,000	to	150,000	60
150,000	to	200,000	85
200,000	to	250,000	110
250,000	to	300,000	135
300,000	and up		150

The membership fees and dues are to be paid prior to the 1921 convention and annually thereafter until the constitution shall be amended. The annual membership fee for associate members or non-voting members shall be $10. The annual membership fee and dues based on the above schedule are due prior to the date of annual meeting and become delinquent after July 15 of each year. Any member making a false report of the amount due the association as provided above, shall forfeit his membership.

EXECUTIVE COM. RECOMMENDATIONS.

The following recommendations of the executive committee were adopted at the Chicago convention, June 23, 1921.

1. Vigilance Committee—Your executive committee recommends the continuance of a vigilance committee and urges that the association continue to back this committee to the limit of its power in order to carry out our determination to free the association from undesirable members.

2. Setting Our House in Order—It is further recommended that each year the secretary be instructed to mail to each member a complete list of the association membership so that each member may report to the executive committee through the secretary any member guilty of unscrupulous or fraudulent dealings.

3. Owing to the wide difference of opinion arising from the use of the present trade mark, we, the executive committee, hereby recommend that its use be discontinued and that no further printing of the trade mark be done by our members.

Montgomery's Priscilla

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following growers:

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Dailledouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.
Duckham-Pierson Co., Madison, N. J.
Rowayton Greenhouses, Rowayton, Conn.
Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah
Wellworth Farm Greenhouses, Downers Grove, Ill.
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.
A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley, N. Y.
Robt. Simpson, Clifton, N. J.
Chas. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.
Noe-Ruzicka Co., Madison, N. J.
Wm. H. Elliott Co., Madbury, N. H.
Anthony Ruzicka, Madison, N. J.
W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, Mo.
Jos. Heacock Co., Roelofs, Pa.
Ferrari Bros., San Francisco, Calif.
Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, Ill.
Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn.
Roberts Rose Co., Denver, Colo.
Geo. C. Weiland, Evanston, Ill.
Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.
Exeter Rose Conservatories, Exeter, N. H.
Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill.
H. O. May, Summit, N. J.
Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass.
F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.
L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J.
Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, Pa.
Briar Cliff Gardens, Scarborough, N. Y.
John H. Dunlop & Son, Richmond Hill, Ont., Can.
Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, R. I.
J. J. Fallon Co., Lynchburg, Va.
Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill.
Rolf Zetlitz Co., Lima, O.
Van Aken Bros. & Sons, Coldwater, Mich.

Ask them about it, if you will, at any time. They have our permission to tell the truth. We are going to let this rose sell itself! We shall be simply order takers.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

Louis F. Miller, Toledo,O., President; H. A. Dooley, Cleveland, O., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville Ky., Secretary; H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treasurer. The next annual meeting will be held at Albany, N. Y., November 1-5, 1921.

THE Minnesota potato crop is suffering from lack of rain.

SHIPMENTS of domestic Bermuda onions will be more than 5,000 cars this season.

CAULIFLOWER ears were almost as numerous as straw hats at the Jersey City prize fight last week.

MICHIGAN strawberries in 16-quart crates moved slowly during the week ending June 25, selling around $3.

TOMATO shipments were much lighter during the week ending June 25, with an increase of 50 cents to $1.50 per six-basket carrier in the east and a reduction of 10 to 15 cents per four-basket carrier in the west.

NEW potatoes declined 25 to 50 cents per barrel in eastern markets on June 25, but an increase of from $1.50 to $1.75 per 100 pounds was noted on Arkansas and Oklahoma Bliss Triumphs in western centers, the closing price being $3.75. A total of 3,942 cars were rolled during the week.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 5.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1 to $2.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 25 to 30 cents.

New York, July 1.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $1.50 to $4; cucumbers, 40 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, per basket, $1 to $3.25; radishes, 100 bunches, $1 to $3; tomatoes per pound, 10 to 23 cents.

Imports of Onion Into Norway.

Vice Counsul Harry E. Carlson, Christiania, reports that onions are not grown in Norway to any appreciable extent. The country must depend on imports for its supply of this commodity. Recent imports of onions have been as follows: 1920, 2,458,720 kilos; January, 1921, 110,764 kilos, and February, 1921, 194,366 kilos.

Vegetable Growers' Ass'n of America.

The next annual meeting of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America will be held in the New York State Armory, Washington avenue and Lark street, Albany, N. Y., November 1-5. The local association, made up of vegetable growers in the vicinities of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, is working out plans for the meeting.

Broom Corn.

Broom corn is marketed today by practically the same methods in use 70 years ago, according to statements made by specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture. It is a small crop compared with many other farm products and owing to its limited use has failed to command the attention of the marketing agencies which have played such an important part in developing the highly efficient systems for the distribution of the more important products. Broom corn fiber has very little use except for the purpose of making brooms, but the demand for brooms has remained quite uniform over an extended period, and about 50,000 tons of the raw product are marketed each year. Approximately 300,000 acres of land are required for the production of this amount. Special studies of the present metohds of marketing broom corn are being made by the bureau of markets.

Strength Standards for Container.

That authority for prescribing strength specifications for containers for fruits and vegetables should be vested in the United States Department of Agriculture is the text of a recommendation passed at the semi-annual meeting of the National Basket and Fruit Package Manufacturers' Association, at Cleveland, O., April 13. The association also indorsed the package bill introduced in the last session of congress which provided standards for round stave baskets, splint baskets, and hampers. This bill was never reached for final disposition and it is expected that it will be reintroduced into congress at any early date.

At present the department of agriculture is charged with the administration of the standard container act. This law provides standards for berry boxes, grape baskets, and small till baskets used for fruits and vegetables, but does not include the establishment of strength specifications. There has been a widespread demand for investigation and recommendations regarding strength specifications for containers, and should congress charge the department with prescribing strength specifications for the containers provided for in the bill it will be necessary to make extensive tests to develop data on which to base the regulations.

Boston, Mass.

GREAT DIFFICULTY IN MOVING STOCK.

The market this week has been as quiet as it is apt to be any time this summer. The result has been a very bad glut. Large quantities of roses and carnations were disposed of to the street merchants, but even that did not relieve the situation entirely. Several thousand flowers were thrown in the rubbish heap. The price has held up on white flowers to the level of the past two or three weeks, also on red roses. Good sweet peas are scarce and what few are arriving bring good prices. White gladioli and Easter lilies are also scarce, the latter selling at 25 and 30 cents. Lily of the valley and orchids are moving quite steadily at the same prices as a week ago. Some very fine specimens of gigas and hybrids are coming in at present.

N. F. MCCARTHY & CO.

The adjourned creditors' meeting in the matter of N. F. McCarthy & Co. was held June 23, and the creditors' committee appointed at the previous meeting made a detailed report. The report in substance stated that Mr. McCarthy was absolutely solvent if the business was continued and properly administered. They recommended that Mr. McCarthy execute a blanket mortgage covering all his real and personal property to a board of five trustees to be chosen from the creditors; the mortgage was to be drawn for an amount equal to the total unsecured liability, and that notes be issued against the mortgage to each of the unsecured creditors for the amount of their claim, each note bearing interest at the rate of six per cent; the mortgage to be written for a term of five years with the provision for pro rata reduction annually of each note whenever funds are available; after the execution of the mortgage, Mr. McCarthy to execute an agreement transferring the management and control of his business affairs to the board of trustees, their judgment to be final in all matters.

The committee further reported and recommended as follows: That the three dwelling houses, barn and other farm buildings be rented, that the imported nursery stock, valued at over $40,000, be converted into cash as rapidly as possible without sacrifice and not replaced; that the greenhouses, embracing 64,000 square feet of space, are in fair condition except for paint, that more efficient methods and management be introduced, both at the greenhouses and at the store at Boston.

The meeting, which was largely attended, voted unanimously to accept the recommendation of the committee and to adopt their plan as outlined above, which assures the creditors 100 cents on the dollar with interest on their money, and also protects Mr. McCarthy and saves his investment and his business.

NOTES.

Wm. Gilson, salesman for Thos. Roland at the Co-operative Market, will be gone for the month of July to the Canadian provinces. Joseph O'Donnell will have charge while he is away.

Sam Trockman of the H. M. Robinson Co. was married on June 29. He is spending two weeks at Atlantic City, N. J.

Stephen Green of the Florist Exchange started July 1 on a two weeks' fishing trip.

Visitor: A. J. Loder, Bangor, Me.

E. F. S.

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Weather conditions at this writing are severe but gladioli, dahlias and Shasta daisies seem to survive readily. Business is holding its own, for summer funerals are heavier.

NOTES.

The Stiles Co. have their summer window artistically arranged with a mountain scene, and an old mill with a pond. Mr. Blocker, of this concern, is on his vacation.

The Foster Floral Co. is still showing some very choice gladioli. Glen Feld of this firm has just returned from a brief visit at Hutchinson, Kans.

Visitors: Ross Holland, Okmulgee; Morris Levine, New York; Miss Butts of El Reno.
